U. S. CRUISER, 6 DESTROYERS ORDERED TO VERA CRUZ

The Omaha and Other Vessels Are Directed to Go From Canal to Mexican Rebel Port to Join the Richmond, Sent to Relief of the Tacoma.

14 SHIPS WILL BE ASSEMBLED THERE

Decision to Dispatch Them Followed Bombardment at Mouth of Panuco—Texas Permits Crossing of Obregon Troops.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The scout cruiser Omaha was ordered today from the Panama Canal to Vera Cruz with one division of six destroyers.

This announcement was made by Secretary of the Navy Denby when questioned concerning reports that a number of additional warships had been ordered to the Mexican city where De la Huerta, head of the revolutionary forces, makes his headquarters.

The Navy Department has not been advised of the arrival of the scout cruiser Richmond at Vera Cruz. The Richmond was due to arrive off the Mexican port this morning and will take on board the crew of the stranded cruiser Tacoma. When the Omaha and other vessels arrive the crew of the Tacoma probably will be distributed among the larger vessels, which will include the repair ship Prometheus.

The expectations are that the Omaha and her destroyer train will not arrive at Vera Cruz before late Tuesday. Normally they would cruise at not more than 25 knots an hour and possibly hold a speed around 20 knots in the absence of hurry orders.

Formidable Force to Assemble.

When all vessels now ordered to the Mexican port arrive they will present quite a formidable array, including the scout cruisers, six destroyers, the Prometheus, two wrecking vessels now en route from Kingston, Jamaica, two powerful naval tugs from Pensacola, Fla. and a large wrecking tug from the canal zone. In addition the new gunboat Tulsa, recently commissioned, has been ordered to Galveston to stand by.

The Omaha is a fast light cruiser, recently completed, and a sister ship of the Richmond. She, with the Richmond, is assigned in the navy organization to the scouting fleet commanded by Admiral Magruder and of which the Richmond is the flagship. Both the Richmond and Omaha carry small marine detachments. In addition, both ships carry airplanes and catapult airplane launching devices so that Admiral Magruder has two scouting planes with his command now ordered to assemble at Vera Cruz.

The destroyers are all of the larger and most modern vessels of that type in the navy. The entire force has an available speed that would carry it to Tampico from Vera Cruz in a very few hours, should the need for such a movement arise.

No Americans Interfered With.

The decision to send another scout cruiser and a destroyer division to Vera Cruz followed reports that Mexican rebel gunboats had bombarded the Federal fortifications at the mouth of the Panuco River, although up to date no American commercial vessel had been actively interfered with and official advices received here are to the effect that the rebels have not seriously attempted to make effective the threatened blockade of Tampico.

The action of acting Gov. Davidson of Texas in reversing his decision not to permit Obregon troops to pass through Texas territory and re-enter Mexico followed a supplemental request by the State Department that the Mexican Federal force be permitted to cross over the Rio Grande at El Paso. Gov. Davidson replied that he saw no objection to the Mexican troops without their arms entering Texas at the New Mexican border and leaving at El Paso, a distance of only a few miles. With a large number of American troops on duty in the vicinity of El Paso the danger of untoward incidents

GANZ, AS SOLOIST, FORGETS HIS PIECE, HAS TO START OVER

Pianist Takes Wrong Modulation and Is Forced to Halt Orchestra to Get Back.

Rudolph Ganz, director of the Symphony Orchestra, appearing Friday afternoon as piano soloist at the Odeon, suffered a lapse of memory, in the third movement of the Schumann concerto, thereby bringing the orchestra to a halt.

There is a theme in the third movement which modulates into several different keys at its respective appearances, and the soloist happened to take the wrong progression. The accompaniment is so light at this point that it was impossible to cover up the error, and in a moment the pianist was so far away from the key in which the orchestra was playing that there was nothing to do but stop.

Ganz himself signaled Frederick Fischer, who was conducting, to halt the orchestra, and to start over again. There was a brief delay, after which things proceeded smoothly. The soloist received unusual acclaim at the end of the concerto.

Attendants at symphony concerts recall that these mishaps are not uncommon among the greatest artists, when playing a lengthy and intricate work from memory. But usually the accompaniment is heavy enough to drown out the mistake without the necessity of stopping the orchestra. It is said that Eugene Ysaye, playing Viotti's violin concerto here, made a similar blunder, and that Kreisler and Lhevinne had identical mishaps in this city. A woman pianist, playing a Beethoven concerti in Berlin, in a moment of absent-mindedness, began not in the proper key but one a fifth above. The piece was started over again.

Ganz explained that he was so busy listening for a phrase in the oboe that for an instant he forgot his own part.

LONDON FEARS EGYPT MAY STOP WORK ON PHARAOH TOMB

Nationalists, Victorious in Elections, Could Cancel Carter's Concession.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Howard Carter's work on the tomb of Tutankhamen may be stopped as a result of the victory of the Egyptian Nationalists in the recent parliamentary elections, according to information in official British quarters today.

The new Ministers may do this after their installation, by canceling the concession under which Carter and Lord Carnarvon have worked.

The work of dismantling the shrines in the tomb is making good progress. Carter was able today to remove the roof of the third shrine to the ante-chamber. Like every other part of these wonderful caskets, the roof is richly decorated, the underside bearing the figure of the King, surmounted by five hawks with outspread protective wings, figures of the hawk-headed god, Horus, serpents and a representation of a monkey-headed god.

HER NECK DISLOCATED AT GAME

Girl Injured When Basketball Players Hit Her Chair.

By the Associated Press.

HORNELL, N. Y., Jan. 19.—Bernice Skinner, 18, is suffering from a dislocation of her neck suffered when watching a high school basketball game here. Chairs were placed on the edge of the court, and during the game two players running at full speed crashed into the chair where the girl sat. Her head was thrown back with such violence that her neck was dislocated.

BULLET-RIDDLED BODY OF ITALIAN FOUND IN A LOT

ROBBERY NOT THE MOTIVE FOR KILLING

Clothing Contained $26 in Bills and Some Small Change—Revolver Near the Body.

The body of a well-dressed unidentified Italian, containing 23 bullet and buckshot wounds, was found at 7:05 o'clock last night in the center of a vacant 50-foot lot at 1037 North Seventh street.

That the man had been murdered elsewhere and his body taken to the lot in an automobile was the theory announced by Capt. Stinger of the Carr Street Police District after it was learned that neither four policemen on duty near the lot for an hour before the body was found nor residents of the neighborhood heard shooting. Automobile tracks were found in the snow in an alley at the rear of the lot.

Robbery was not the motive for the killing, police said, because $26 in bills and some small change were found in pockets of the clothing. The only clew to identification was a metal tag on a key ring containing the number "538656" and the information that identification of the possessor of the tag could be established by communication with L. B. Smutz & Co., general insurance agents in the Laclede Gas Co. Building. L. B. Smutz, head of the insurance concern, lives at Normandy, but could not be reached last night.

Location of Wounds.

Two bullet wounds on the right side of the head, one in the right ear, one in the neck at the front, one directly through the heart, four in the abdomen, one in the left thigh and 13 in the back between the neck and waist line, were found upon examination of the body at the morgue.

The 13 wounds in the back appear to have been made by a charge from a shotgun. The wounds in the head seem to have been caused by an automatic pistol and those in the front of the body by a revolver or automatic of smaller caliber.

A revolver, with six empty cartridges, was found about 30 feet from the body.

Patrolman Max Bauman found the body when walking through the lot to his station at Seventh and Carr streets after investigating the cause of shouting by children in an alley. The children had been playing and knew nothing of the body.

The body was lying face downward in an unnatural position, the patrolman reported. He turned the body over, thinking it might be an intoxicated person, before seeing bloodstains in the snow. No stains were found except near the body. There were a number of footprints in all parts of the lot, which apparently is used as a short-cut.

About 28 Years Old.

The man appeared to have been about 28 years old, was 5 feet 9 inches tall and weighed 160 pounds. He wore a brown checkered suit, a black overcoat with a black fur collar and a beaver cap.

Seven bullets, apparently fired from a .32-caliber automatic pistol, were found against the man's abdomen. Four had penetrated the skin a short distance, the others lying between the skin and underclothing. The outer garments had seven bullet holes.

This fact was taken by police to indicate that the bullets had been fired at long range and were almost spent. Police were unable to explain how bullets fired from a long distance would strike within a radius of six inches.

Detectives and others of wide acquaintance among Italians could not identify the body.

Patrolman Bauman and three other officers were on duty around Seventh and Carr streets because of recent reports of a number of minor holdups in the vicinity.

'SHOOT TO KILL,' BUTLER ORDER

Bandit-Chasing Squad Patrols Streets in Armored Autos.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19.—"Shoot to kill" was the order given police of the "bandit-chasing" squad today by Brigadier-General Smedely B. Butler, director of public safety, in a week-end drive against all forms of banditry.

The new fleet of armored "bandit-chasing" cars put in commission today was patroling the streets tonight.

GRAND JURY BLOW AT PUBLIC BOXING HERE IN PROSPECT

PRIZE-FIGHT PENALTY TWO TO TEN YEARS

Detectives Who Paid to See Coliseum Bout Dec. 11 Said to Have Called It Infraction of Statute.

Jack Dempsey, world's champion heavyweight, who gave a 10-minute boxing exhibition at the Coliseum Dec. 11, and who said at the time that he appeared without pay, and "to uplift the boxing game," may be indicted, within the next few days, on the charge of violating the Missouri statute against prize fights. Such violation is a felony, punishable by imprisonment from two to ten years.

Circuit Attorney Sidener has promised, it was learned yesterday, to lay before the grand jury evidence obtained by police officials, under the direction of President Brockman of the Police Board, which is intended to show that Dempsey's performance, and the rest of the Coliseum exhibition, did not comprise a sparring exhibition such as is permitted by city ordinances, but were violations of the State law.

Promoter May Be Accused.

Any action taken against Dempsey probably would include James C. Mullen, Chicago and St. Louis boxing promoter, who has held four shows here since he took charge of the Angelica Club several months ago. Mullen was too ill to come here from Chicago for the Angelica Club's latest show, Friday night, which was turned into a fiasco by the failure of the principals scheduled to fight to appear.

It is not known whether, in the event of an indictment being voted against Dempsey, an active effort would be made to bring the champion here by extradition proceedings, or whether the indictment would merely be held against him, to keep him from appearing in Missouri in future. Dempsey, whose home is in Salt Lake City, is in Florida at present.

Gov. Hyde, who seldom interferes openly in matters of police administration here, made an active effort to prevent Dempsey's appearance in St. Louis. The Governor, last summer, succeeded in preventing a boxing exhibition here by Luis Angel Firpo. In ordering the Police Board to prevent the Firpo exhibition, the Governor said that, if it were permitted, "Dempsey would soon be appearing here."

Just as the Governor had feared, Dempsey came, and when the Governor ordered Brockman to prevent the performance, an injunction against the police was obtained in the name of the Angelica Club. Circuit Judge Landwehr issued it.

Detectives Purchased Tickets.

The injunction kept the police from stopping the show, which was witnessed by about 6000 persons, with $14,592 receipts. Besides Dempsey's short exhibition with a partner, 10 lesser fighters furnished two eight-round and two 10-round matches, and one which was ended by a foul in the second round.

Although the police were enjoined from interfering with the show, they were not restrained from getting evidence. By Brockman's direction, city detectives were sent to buy tickets at the Coliseum box office, shortly before the show, and to witness the performance.

A city ordinance permits the holding of sparring exhibitions under the control of a Boxing Commission. Such a commission has been created, with Alderman H. W. Uhlemeyer as its head. The exhibitions, it is specified, must be given before the membership of regularly constituted clubs, and not as public events.

The detectives who bought tickets to the Coliseum show are said to have reported that they were not members of the club, and did not, to their knowledge, become members through their purchase of tickets. Their observations within the Coliseum also were to the effect that the proceedings were in the nature of prize-fighting, in violation of State law.

A new injunction, obtained by the Angelica Club Friday, kept the police from a contemplated interference with that night's boxing program. They proceeded to get evidence, as in the previous case.

Lawyers representing the Police Board, who acted as advisers in collecting the evidence, visited the

SANITARIUM HEAD HELD ON HIGHWAY-ROBBERY CHARGE

Dr. Kenn B. Uhls and One of His Patients Bound Over for District Court.

By the Associated Press.

OATHE, Kan., Janu. 19.—Dr. Kenn B. Uhls, head of the Uhls Sanitarium at Overland Park, Kan., and Frank Leonard, a patient at the sanitarium, were bound over to the District Court today at the conclusion of their preliminary hearing on a charge of highway robbery. Bonds were set at $5000 each and Uhls was released tonight. A writ of habeas curpus returnable Jan. 29 was granted by Judge Rankin at Paola.

The highway robbery charge grew out of a holdup near the Sanitarium the night of Jan. 3 when L. D. Breyfogle Jr., a dairyman, was robbed by two masked men of $500 in Liberty bonds which he had just received in part payment of a Sanitarium milk bill.

Dr. J. J. Woodward and Dr. R. L. Moberly, both of Olathe, who signed Dr. Uhls' $5000 bond, pending preliminary hearing, announced they would not renew their surety for the accused physician.

Dr. Uhls is also under $10,000 bond on a charge of a larceny of $102,000 in Sanitarium stock held by William E. Gibbs, wealthy recluse, slain at Hutchinson, Kan., Dec. 30.

A full story of the William E. Gibbs murder mystery will be found on page 1 of the True Life Section of today's Post-Dispatch.

"Peter the Page" Delivers Message from London Lord Mayor Inviting President to Exposition.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Peter Rees, a diminutive London messenger boy, known as "Peter the Page," delivered to President Coolidge today a letter of greetings from the Lord Mayor of London and an invitation to attend the Great Britain Empire exposition in London beginning in May. The President thanked the boy for his invitation, expressed his regret at inability to accept it and informed him that he would transmit a reply to the Lord Mayor's letter.

BRITISH ENGINEERS NOT TO WITHDRAW STRIKE NOTICES

Walkout of Rail Men Expected to be Effective at Midnight Sunday.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The executives of the locomotive engineers announced tonight that they had decided not to withdraw their strike notices. It is probable, therefore, that the strike on the railways will become effective at midnight Sunday.

The action of the engineers was taken because of a reduction in wages fixed by the railway wages board, and negotiations continued throughout Saturday in the hope of an agreement between the representatives of the engineers and the railway companies.

'WETS' TO QUIZ COOLIDGE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Leaders of the "wets" who will congregate here Monday for the "face-the-facts conference" of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment will give President Coolidge opportunity to go on record regarding prohibition for the campaign. As the association was founded as a political organization to elect "wet" candidates, its attitude toward the administration will be governed largely by what Mr. Coolidge says.

Col. Archibald Hopkins, chairman of the executive committee of the association, called at the White House today and made an appointment for the "wets" to see the President Monday at noon. Between 20 and 30 men of the association will compose the delegation.

MELLON ASSAILS GARNER TAX PLAN AS MAKESHIFT THAT IS DESIGNED TO CATCH VOTES

SUPPORTERS OF POINCARE BEGIN TO TURN ON HIM

MILLERAND SAID TO BE AFTER HIS HEAD

President Stopped His "Cemetery Speeches"—Fall in the Franc Climax of His Failure.

By FERDINAND TUOHY,
Paris Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—Gustave Herve, staunchest supporter of Poincare, writes across two columns in Victoire this morning that "The Agony of the Poincare Ministry Is Beginning." The Figaro, Journal des Debats and Intransigeant, three other partisans of Poincare, converge simultaneously on the Premier in a joint attack, while the Temps refers to the Government that France may have tomorrow.

Such press opinions are significant. The belief is gaining ground here that Poincare will not be Prime Minister in a month. The long list of failures of his policies, culminating in the collapse of the franc, are being discussed freely in the newspapers. Critics are raising their voices on every side, the most important of them all being President Millerand.

Millerand intends, it is said, to cut off Poincare's head, just as he decapitated Briand at Cannes, and to put Barthou, chairman of the Reparation Commission, in his place. Barthou is the only logical successor to Poincare, if, as now seems quite possible, the latter falls before the May elections.

It is reported that Poincare himself wishes to go; but, rather than fall no his foreign policy, he would prefer to reckon his failure against the election law. He has the Senate against him, and that body can throw him out next week if it pleases.

His 400 "Cemetery Speeches."

When Frenchmen turn, they turn. And so tonight we have scoffing remarks anent Poincare's 400 "cemetery speeches," which were stopped by Millerand a month ago.

The Premier's failures are enumerated: The separatist movement he fostered has been denounced; the franc has depreciated 86 per cent since he came into power; the cost of living has gone up by leaps and bounds; the Allied Commission in control of Germany no longer exists except in name; the Ruhr maneuver has served no end; no reparations seem likely to come in during the year; the experts' committee, which the Premier at first fought stubbornly, is functioning and will unquestionably have a vital effect; Ramsay Macdonald is about to link up with Russia, which Poincare has been implored to do for months past; French prestige in the Near East has lapsed to what it was in 1914, when Liman von Sanders ruled in Turkey; Italy and Spain have joined hands across France and the sea, necessitating extra naval expenditure; France, as a direct result of Poincare's policy, must submit to crushing taxes and sacrifices; war victims and inhabitants of the devastated areas have to go begging for millions which have been allotted to them and everybody knows without being told that the world has looked askance at France more than once since January, 1923.

Even Poincare's Ministers have let him down. Minister Raiberti of Marine, who let the Dixmude go up in spite of warning 12 hours previously of a tempest; De Lastyrie, whose remedy for the financial chaos for a long time had to do principally with conditions for the sale of matches; Cheron, who has sent up the cost of living in cities by boosting agricultural districts; Manurry, who failed to

FERGUSON ANNOUNCES WIFE WILL RUN IF HE IS BARRED FROM TICKET

By the Associated Press.

TEMPLE, Tex., Jan. 19.

DECLARING that his impeachment by the State Senate in 1917 was invalid and that there is no legal barrier to his holding the Governor's office, former Governor James E. Ferguson today announced his candidacy for the governorship of Texas. He also "served notice" that if his name was barred from the ticket, that of his wife would go on the ballot.

"If you have a Gov. Ferguson it makes little difference as to who signs on the dotted line," he stated.

RATS, NOT CROOKS, PUT POLICE PHONES OUT OF COMMISSION

Hungry Rodents Gnawed Insulation From Wires Between Floors.

So many telephones were out of commission at Police Headquarters these last few days that policemen began to suspect subtle machinations of the criminal element.

Trouble men sent by the telephone company came and looked around and left, looking mystified. Yesterday, however, a special trouble-shooter arrived and looked around and presently exclaimed, "Rats." He did not mean the word as a mere exclamation.

Rats had gnawed the insulation from wires in a cable between the third and fourth floors, the expert reported, causing a number of short circuits. They must have been hungry rats attracted by odors from confiscated brewing materials stored in the basement, Secretary Bartelsmeyer of the Board of Police Commissioners believes. He has purchased a number of traps.

COASTERS ENJOY NIGHT OF SPORT ON ART HILL SLIDE

Full Moon and Headlights of Autos Playing on Sleds Make Brilliant Scene.

Several hundred devotees of coasting were out with their sleds last night on Art Hill in Forest Park, using the slide, prepared yesterday by workmen, to shoot down the hill and out upon the ice of the lagoon at the bottom. Others hitched on behind automobiles and were whisked about the park driveways.

The scene was a brilliant one, with a full moon and the headlights of numerous automobiles at the crest of the hill playing upon the sleds as they flashed downward. Knickers for the girls and old army clothing for the men were the popular costumes. There will be coasting again today, but no skating will be allowed on any of the park lakes, as the snow has made the ice too rough.

LINCOLN RE-ENACTS TRAGEDY

Prisoner Insists He Burned Bodies of Wife and Her Brother.

By the Associated Press.

AURORA, Ill., Jan. 19.—Eluding a crowd that had gathered at the city jail, Chief of Police Michels today took Warren Lincoln to his abandoned home and green houses on the Old Indian Trail and there had him re-enact the killing of his wife and her brother, Byron Shoup, and the burning of their bodies in the hot house furnace. Calmly and methodically Lincoln went from place to place acting out and describing what he said occurred the night of Jan. 10, 1923.

In the sitting room where he said he laid out the bodies before dismembering them he shivered and at the furnace door his hand shook but these were the only signs of emotion. At no time would he admit that the chief's theory that he buried the bodies, after finding that he could not burn them in the small furnace, had any basis in fact. He amplified his confession to say that he had burned arms, legs and torso in the order named but insisted the whole undertaking was completed in three hours.

Despite Lincoln's fortitude in the dramatic hour, Chief Michaels is still convinced that the bodies of Mrs. Lincoln and of Shoup lie in some rude grave, in or near the greenhouse or at a city dump a few blocks from the Lincoln place.

SAYS DEMOCRATS WOULD RELIEVE A MAJORITY OF ALL THEIR TAXES

Treasury Secretary Asserts Changes in Surtaxes Proposed by Texan Are Insincere and Proponents of Them Conceal the Truth.

PUBLIC "HAS TO PAY THE HIGH SURTAXES"

Declares They Are "War Taxes and Nothing but War Taxes"—Defends Treasury Bill as Fair to All.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of The Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The hot fight over taxation became still hotter today with the issuance of a statement by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon branding the Garner (Democratic) tax-reduction plan as a "makeshift" designed to catch votes.

Letting fly with both barrels, Mellon says the Garner proposals are "political and nothing else," whereas the Mellon plan is the "result of experience and study," and is "fair to all classes."

The exemption features of the Garner plan, the Secretary points out, would relieve over half the taxpayers of all their taxes, thereby benefiting each about $15 of what they would pay under the Treasury plan. He declares that Garner's proposed changes in the surtaxes rates are "obviously insincere." Proponents of the Democratic plan are accused of giving the public half-truths regarding the comparative effect of the opposing plans.

"Public Pays High Surtaxes."

The public pays the high surtaxes, Mellon says, in the general high-level of freight rates, rents and commodities.

Mellon reiterates that the surtaxes must be reduced to a point where capital will be freed from "their killing effect upon new investments" Garner's plan, he says, ignores the economic factors in the tax problem. He again asserts that the high surtax rates are "war taxes and nothing but war taxes."

The difference between the two plans, the Secretary concludes, is "the difference between a political method of handling tax reduction and a business method."

Text of Mellon Statement.

Following is the text of the Mellon statement:

"Representative Garner, ranking Democrat on the Ways and Means Committee, has given publicity to a plan of income taxation and has requested the Treasury to determine the probable effect of this plan on Government revenues. Since this request was made the Government actuary has been engaged in determining the effect of Mr. Garner's suggestion, but owing to the immense amount of detail involved the figures are not yet available. It is believed, however, that irrespective of the revenue feature, the essential differences between Mr. Garner's plan and the Treasury bill should be stated.

"Briefly, Mr. Garner increases the exemption of single men by $1000 and of married men by $500 to $1000, depending on their income. He has made some further reduction in normal taxes on lower incomes, and made the earned income credit one-third instead of one-fourth. Whereas in the Treasury bill, surtax rates commence at $10,000 net income, Mr. Garner has made it $12,000.

He has then rapidly increased the surtaxes so that at $60,000 net income they reach the same rates as in the present law. They are

DENBY SAYS CLAIM TO ARCTIC AREA IS OBJECT OF FLIGHT

Vast, Unexplored Region Is Constant Challenge to America, He Asserts Before House Committee.

MAY BECOME FUTURE BASE FOR AIRPLANES

Declares That Unless Pole Journey Is Undertaken This Year, Another Nation Will Make Survey.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The necessity of staking out the Polar region under the Stars and Stripes as part of the scheme of national defense, was outlined to the Naval Affairs Committee of the House today by Secretary of the Navy Denby and Rear Admiral Moffet, commander of the Navy air service. At the same time, Lieut. Robert A. Bartlett, who accompanied Peary on the dash to the North Pole, unleashed a pungent vocabulary to tell what he thought of anyone or anything that would obstruct sending the airship Shenandoah on her trip over the top of the world next summer.

The hearing was designed to investigate the feasibility of the trip, but no scientific testimony was introduced or any arguments in opposition to the proposed attempt to send America's dirigible on her proposed epoch-making journey. Denby told of the primary object of the proposed trip, while Commander Bartlett overwhelmed the committee with his somewhat sulphurous eloquence. The committee adjourned without expression of any Congressional opinion on the proposed Polar excursion.

Exploration and survey of a vast region contiguous to the United States, including the northern portion of Alaska, was outlined by Secretary Denby as the primary object of the trip.

Purpose Mistaken by Public.

"The fact that there is a vast unexplored area contiguous to our soil," said the Secretary, "constitutes a constant challenge to the United States. The prime purpose of this flight has been mistaken in the public mind. It is not to discover the North Pole. We don't challenge Peary's magnificent discovery in any way. But we do want to find out what land is there and what the resources are. If we don't do it this year, it won't be any use to do it at all. If it is not photographed and mapped by us, it will be by another power within a year. We have the instruments and equipment to make the task easy. It is a known fact that there are vast unexplored regions in the Arctic circle and scientists believe much of the area is land. This area is certain to be of strategic value if we look forward to warfare and commerce in the future as in the past. Whether there is land or not, it should be the property of the United States. This country was discovered by exploration and every part of it was conquered by exploration.

"I have this profound belief that the day will come when some part of this territory will be used as a base for airplanes. We propose to send the Shenandoah from Lakehurst, to San Diego, Seattle and Nome. At Nome we will have a navy vessel, the Ramapo, equipped with a mooring mast. This will service as an anchorage for the Shenandoah, and the Ramapo will supply the air vessel with fuel and equipment. It is proposed to have the Shenandoah zigzag over a million square miles of unexplored territory.

May Fly Around Top of World.

"The distance from Nome to the North Pole is approximately 1500 miles. The Shenandoah may fly over the Pole and thence to Spitzbergen, about 600 miles further on, returning by way of England to the United States. Whether she returns to Nome or goes on to Spitzbergen will be determined by Admiral Moffet, chief of the bureau of naval aeronautics, who will be in command of the trip.

"I do not claim that this trip is without extraordinary hazards."

Denby said this trip of the Shenandoah might be a flight around the top of the world, pointing out that if the craft goes on to Spitzbergen after leaving her base in Nome, she will cross the top of the world with the North Pole to her starboard. He said he regarded the trip as promising observations of the highest degree of value.

"The Shenandoah could be adrift an indefinite period in the Arctic region and not lose sufficient gas to cause trouble," the Secretary said.

Secretary Denby was asked whether he did not think the Shenandoah should have been brought down from her mast when the gale developed at Lakehurst Wednesday night.

"We take the position," he answered, "that any ship must stand any kind of a gale. If a naval vessel is blown ashore in an Oriental typhoon it is not evidence that she has been badly damaged or navigated. We take the same position in reference to the Shenandoah."

"How could you determine the character of the territory in the North if you were flying 2000 or 3000 feet in the air?" asked Representative Vinson of Georgia.

"We could let a man down on a rope ladder if the ship were anchored, or by a parachute if not. We have picked men up from the ground by use of a rope hung from a dirigible and because the Shenandoah is a more sluggish vessel, I have no doubt we could do it in her case."

Lieutenant-Commander Bartlett compared the hardships of the dog sleds to the ease with which men seated in the cabins of the Shenandoah would cross the same territory. Quoting the famous saying, "Don't read American history—make it," he said:

"We're Losing Our Punch."

"What the hell are we going to do with these airships if we don't fly 'em? By heavens, I want to see the Stars and Stripes carried throughout the North Pole. When Peary discovered the North Pole, Mr. Taft was in the White House. He said, 'Now that you've got it what are you going to do with it?' If Roosevelt had been there, there would have been something doing. Hell, we're getting soft. We're losing our punch. Others are getting there first. We let ourselves get killed by automobiles nowadays. Let's give the young fellows a chance to really make a name for themselves.

When his attention was called to a report that enlisted men at the Lakehust naval air station had declared they would not volunteer for the North Polar flight of the Shenandoah if Commander Frank R. McCrary was in command and expressing a preference for Capt. Anton Heinen or Commander Ralph D. Weyerbacher, Secretary Denby said:

"It is so utterly improbable and so helplessly impossible that I will not give it a moment's consideration. When enlisted men of the navy refuse to go to sea it is time to haul down the Stars and Stripes."

Capt. McCrary Denies Story of Friction in Ranks of Crew.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Jan. 19.—Published reports that certain members of the crew of the Shenandoah would not sign up for the proposed Polar expedition unless Capt. F. R. McCrary, the present commander, was relieved from duty was characterized as "an absolute untruth" by practically every officer on duty at the naval air station here today. Capt. McCrary said:

"I will compliment the writer of that article by totaly ignoring the story. At the present time there are about 70 men that are sufficiently well trained and eligible to make the polar trip. Out of this number 60 have already made application to go along. There can be only 40 men taken along on the trip and Admiral Moffett, who has been placed in charge of the expedition, has asked me to recommend the personnel."

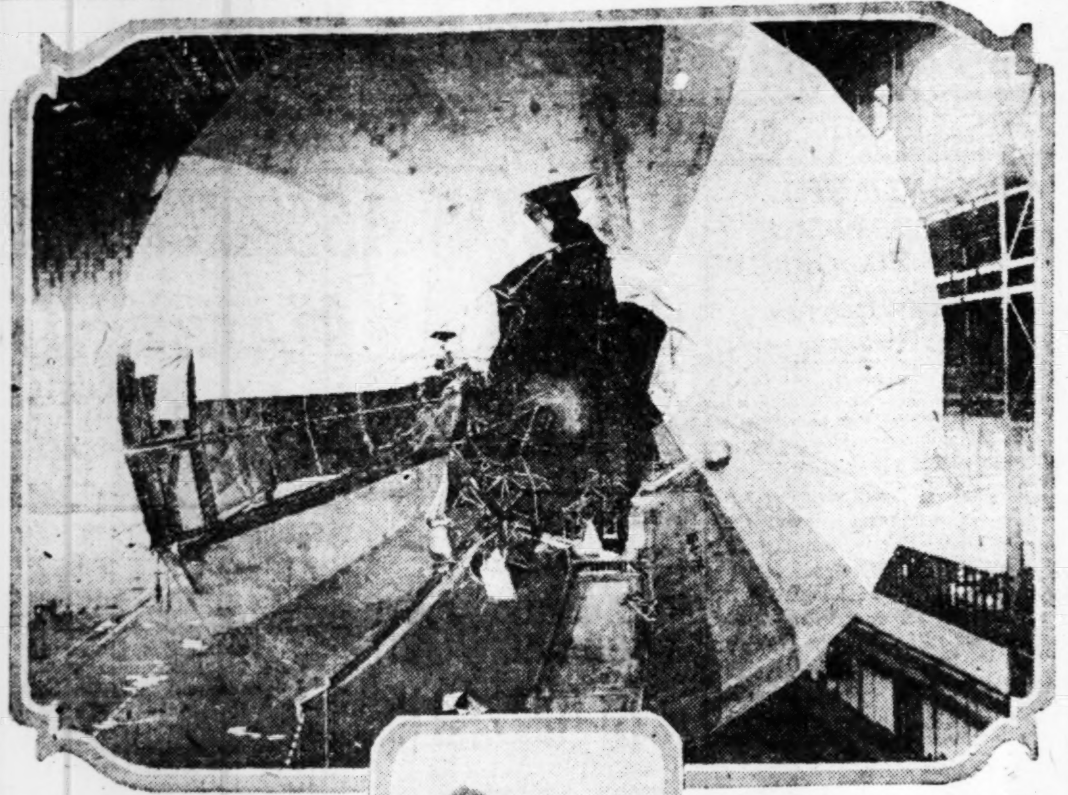
The list will be submitted to Admiral Moffett about May 1, Capt. McCrary pointed out he would be forced to recommend himself if he wished to go along and he certainly did.

Commenting upon the question of Capt. Anton Heinen's ability, Capt. McCrary said:

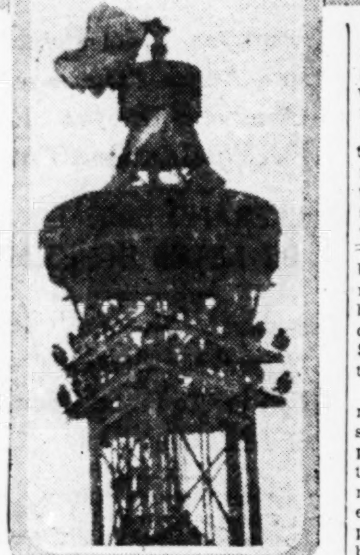
"He is a wonderful man and undoubtedly the world's leading authority on lighter than air. If he and I make the Polar trip and I am in command of the ship there will be no friction between us. I realize the importance of having a man of his type along and I would be foolish to disregard any suggestion made by him."

Later in the day Capt. Heinen returned the compliment by saying "Capt. McCrary is a fine man and a capable officer."

What Happened to Shenandoah When Storm Tore Her Away



A striking photo of the Shenandoah, safely housed in its hangar at Lakehurst, N. J., after the wild and impromptu trip in a 72-mile-an-hour gale that ripped her from her mooring mast. The photograph shows vividly the torn nose of the pride of the navy, and the great rips in the bow and sides which occurred when she whipped free from her moorings.



The nose and wreckage, hanging on top of the 172-foot mooring mast at the naval air station at Lakehurst, N. J., after the giant Shenandoah tore loose in the gale. The steel rivets which fastened the nose to the framework of the airship were clearly sheared off by the force of the gust which broke the airship loose.

MELLON ASSAILS GARNER TAX PLAN AS MAKESHIFT

then they are abruptly ended. This compares with the Treasury plan of a fairly spaced increase in surtax rates commencing at $10,000 continued as in the present law until net income of $92,000 is reached and a 44 per cent surtax, to 25 per cent at $100,000.

"Majority Relieved of Taxes."

"By the increase in exemptions Mr. Garner effectually removes from the payment of any income those where incomes are below $2000 for single men and $3000 for married men, and who constitute in number more than a majority of the total taxpayers. It is obvious that, under the Garner plan, this majority will be benefited in their direct payment to the Government to the extent of, say, $15 apiece over what they would pay under the Treasury bill.

"The proposed changes in the surtax rates from the present law is obviously insincere. True, the starting point is made different from the Treasury bill and Mr. Garner stops at 44 per cent, instead of 50 per cent. It is to be noticed, however, that the middle incomes pay the same surtax that they pay under the present law, and the incomes in higher brackets pay 50 per cent, 44 per cent surtax, and 6 per cent normal, as against 58 per cent aggregate under the present law. This chance is hardly material, and the economic effect of taxation is completely ignored by the Garner plan. The plan is political and nothing else.

"Let us illustrate the political character of the Garner plan by the argument made by its supporters against the Treasury bill. They say that under the Mellon plan a man with $1,000,000 income makes a saving of about $250,000, whereas 200 men each with incomes of $5000 and the same aggregate income, save only $5950.

"Reserse the picture. The test, of course, is what tax a man must pay. The millionaire, under the Mellon plan, will pay a tax of $298,792, and the 200 small incomes $38.25 each, or a total as to them of only $7650. The one high income pays 40 times the tax that the 200 small incomes of equal aggregate amount pays. Did the proponents of the arguments believe they were giving the public the whole truth when they made it?

General High-Price Level.

"No thoughtful person longer doubts that, irrespective of his income, he pays the high surtaxes in the general high-price level. For example, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. has bonds maturing next year bearing 3½ per cent interest, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul has maturities in the same year bearing 4 per cent interest. Both roads will have to refund on a 6 per cent basis. The additional price of money must be paid, not by the roads, but by their shippers in freight rates.

"The farmer, who alone must meet world competition in what he sells, in what he buys, pays the surtax. The New York renting commission reports that tenants are in better position today than they were in 1920 and that rents have risen enormously. Increased cost of building is not responsible. Again the tenants pay the surtax.

"The public should clearly understand what is involved in this effort to re-establish in this country a sound basis of taxation. The question is not of whether 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 voters save in their direct payments of tax $15 apiece, but whether by the re-establishment of an economically sound basis the 110,000,000 people in this country will save much more than $15 apiece in what they pay for the necessities of life.

"There is only one thing which must be insisted upon, the high surtax rates must be reduced to a point where capital is freed from their killing effect on new investments. To this solution of this economic question, Mr. Garner's plan is not being even intended to be directed.

Present Rates Not Normal.

"The present rates of tax, aggregating at a maximum 58 per cent, are treated as if they were the normal rates of tax. Any reduction from them, it is argued, is a great concesion to the rich. This is not true. Before the war required the taking of every cent which could be obtained for the support of the Government in its emergency, a surtax rate reaching 13 per cent at $2,000,000 was considered high. As a bit of history, substantially as much revenue was realized from incomes from 300,000 out of this 13 per cent maximum in 1916 as was realized in 1921 from the same class of taxpayers out of the 65 per cent rate.

"These high-surtax rates are war tax, and nothing but war taxes. The war is over. Such taxation should cease. To pretend to change them and no more is to keep up the high war living costs which every one pays.

"We come, then, to the fundamental differences between Mr. Garner's plan and the Treasury bill; his is a makeshift; the treasury plan is the result of experience and study. His seeks popularity by offering a small direct saving to the most taxpayers; the Treasury bill is fair to all classes. His is not intended to be effective on the economic side of taxation; the Treasury bill is designed to free capital and to benefit not only the individuals who paid taxes direct, but every person in the country who must pay these taxes in every purchase. It is the difference between a political method of handling tax reduction and a business method."

Senator Glass' Comment.

"Many persons charged with the duty of legislating are urging the passage of the Treasury bill without alteration," said Senator Glass, Democrat, of Virginia, a former Secretary of the Treasury, in a discussion of the Mellon tax bill today. "Some of these persons have never examined the bill to find out exactly what it contains. I think it should be understood that Congressmen who try to understand the things for or against which they have to vote do not intend to transfer the right of decision to actuaries at the Treasury."

Glass predicted that Congress would accept the principle of the Mellon plan as to a maximum surtax rate of 25 per cent.

Democrats served notice that they would accept no compromise on their plan in the committee, and would carry the fight to the House floor where Republicans have admitted they are on the defensive because of recent changes in House rules.

PROCLAMATION OF PALATINATE

Bavarian Separatists Tell Why They Desire Own State.

By the Associated Press.

SPIEYER, Bavaria, Palatinate, Jan. 19.—The "Government of the autonomous Palatinate" today issued a long proclamation explaining the aims of its movement.

The main object, says the proclamation, is to safeguard the Palatinate economically from the consequences of Berlin's and Munich's "reactionary, militaristic, imperialist policy," attaining peace by fulfilling the treaty, abandoning the idea of revenge and achieving self-government.

The declaration says the autonomist Germans wish to remain Germans, but desire a separate state of some sort and are ready to join with other districts for such purpose.

POINCARE YIELDING UNDER INFLUENCE OF DAWES' INQUIRY

Committee of Financial Experts Gaining in Prestige as Result of First Week's Work.

'HONEYMOON STAGE HAS NOW PASSED'

"We're Ready to Settle Down," American Chairman of Investigating Commission Declares.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—After its first week in session, under the chairmanship of Gen. Charles G. Dawes, the international committee of financial authorities invited by the reparation commission to determine Germany's "resources and capacity" to pay occupies a position of influence which is known to have affected even Poincare.

The early part of the week was spent in a round-table discussion in which the American, British, Italian, French and Belgian experts each made his profession of principles and offered what ideas he had of the proper way to approach the problem that has antagonized the great Powers of Europe.

Hilaire Belloc, celebrated British writer, told Gen. Dawes a few days ago, "I firmly believe that there would have been eight wars in Europe since the armistice, if there hadn't been a great war before it."

Common Sense Atmosphere.

However, in the atmosphere of common sense imposed on this new committee by the sardonic chairman, the financial experts of the five nations have been able to remain financial experts and practical business men, instead of becoming politicians or statesmen.

Gen. Dawes puts it, "we've now passed our honeymoon stage, and we're ready now to settle down."

The plan work upon which the committee is agreed is to examine the resources of Germany one by one, through questioning men who know most about each. Subcommittees of members will work separately every forenoon, and the committee of the whole will meet every afternoon to consider what each subcommittee has done.

This procedure will be applied first to two most important factors of the problem. The first is the German railroad system—Germany's chief resource—upon which a report for the committee will be prepared by Sir William Mitchell Ackworth, a British railway expert, and Leverve, a Frenchman. The second factor is the actual monetary situation in Germany, upon which, Monday, the president of the Reichsbank, who arrived today, will be questioned in person by the committee.

Poincare's Attitude.

The most notable indication of what authority the committee already exercises is Poincare's speech yesterday in the Chamber of Deputies.

So far has the inflexible Premier bent already in the direction of the committee that he recommended to the Chamber that there should be interallied supervision of Germany's finances. Heretofore he has opposed this idea on the ground that when Germany wills to pay she will find a way.

Poincare also talked of the advantage of investigating resources within Germany that could be applied to the payment of reparations or to the service of an international reparation loan. Heretofore he has maintained that any attempt to prescribe what Germany shall do in paying reparations would only compromise the allied claims if Germany did not loyally execute the prescription.

Reichsbank Head Reaches Paris With His Data.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the German Reichsbank, who arrived in Paris today upon invitation of the first expert reparation committee, went directly to the German Embassy where he busied himself during the day in studying the questions submitted in writing by the committee. He refused to see all callers. Dr. Schacht brought with him documents relating to the present financial situation of Germany, which he will present to the experts after the list of questions has been exhausted.

The German financier expressed himself to friends as quite willing to co-operate in any way he could with the experts, and to tell them all he knows regarding the situation that will help them to reach a solution.

The assistant experts continued this afternoon discussing reparation documents.

Beginning tomorrow the Ruhr and Rhineland occupied territories will be restored to the rank of "foreign countries." The relations with the French Government-owned telegraph systems and the rates between Paris and Essen, Paris and Duesseldorf, Mayence and other points in these territories, will be fixed according to the existing international agreements between France and Germany, with pro-rata division of the earnings between the French and German lines.

Since the occupation of the Ruhr points in the Ruhr and the Rhineland have been treated by the telegraph systems as integral parts of France. A Government circular announcing the change says it is due to the return of the German operators to work.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—In order that the Government may obtain relief from part of its burdens in its attempt to balance the budget, it is proposed to make the railways, posts and telegraphs self-supporting by eliminating their appropriations from the general budget of the Reich and authorizing them to raise loans to meet their financial requirements. It is reported that the railway ministry is already negotiating with a group of German mortgage banks for a loan of 100,000,000 gold marks.

COUZENS ASKS MELLON "HOW MUCH WOULD YOU SAVE" UNDER TAX CUT

Michigan Senator Also Renews Challenge to Debate Secretary on Merits of His Reduction Proposal.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—"How much are YOU worth, Mr. Mellon?" asks Senator Couzens of Michigan of the Secretary of the Treasury, in the fourth exchange of letters between them, made public today. Couzens also asks how much Mellon would save under the reduction in surtaxes proposed by the Secretary.

The Michigan Senator also renewed his challenge to the Secretary, made and ignored a week ago, to engage in a public debate with him on the merits of the Mellon tax plan, proposing that they hire a hall and go fifty-fifty on expenses.

"So long as you have entered into the record of my securities," said Couzens, "will you please tell us what your securities are, how much you own of each, and how much you will benefit by the reduction of surtaxes as proposed by you?

Has Millions in Buildings.

"You refer to newspapers saying that all my capital is now in tax-exempt securities and you assume that it is true because I have not denied it. Certainly I cannot enter into a denial of everything the newspapers print, but I wish to point out to you that such a statement is absolutely untrue—that I have millions of dollars invested in buildings, real estate and building operations, and I ask if this is more productive than money invested in distilleries and breweries?

"I don't know why it is necessary to tell the absolute untruth in saying that my wealth is all in tax-exempt securities and that I pay no tax. I have already pointed out some of the taxes I have paid and there are some years, of course, when my losses have exceeded my taxable income.

"In addition, I gave to hospitals and crippled children in 1919 nearly 400 shares of Ford Motor stock of a market value of nearly $2,000,000 on which I was receiving 35 per cent dividends on par value of $400,000, or $140,000 per year, on which I could readily have paid a fifty per cent income tax and had a comfortable income besides.

Bought Detroit City Bonds.

"I don't want in any way to convey the impression that I am ashamed of the fact I have been a large purchaser of state and municipal bonds. A considerable part of these were Detroit city bonds, which I took at a time when there was difficulty in securing money needed for schools, sewers, and other most essential public works.

"May I point out further that the effect of making these state and municipal bonds subject to tax would be to increase their interest rate and thereby simply to add to the tax burden of cities and states. In effect it would amount to taking money from local treasuries and transferring it to the Federal Government."

Senator Couzens accused Mellon of abandoning his original arguments.

An Unanswered Inquiry.

"The two fundamentals used by you in recommending reduction of surtaxes, first, the present surtax is reducing Government revenue from that source, and two, that it is diverting money for necessary industrial purposes—have evidently been abandoned," he continued. "I am delighted that I have convinced you of the fallacy of these two fundamental reasons. However, you have not answered my inquiry as to which are the most productive enterprises to put money into—schools, water works, sewers, hospitals, good roads, lighting plants, street railways and colleges; or theaters, ball parks, breweries, distilleries, cosmetic and chewing gum factories, and office buildings.

"The country would be glad to have your opinion and I urge you to give it to us.

Again Challenges to Debate.

"You have failed to accept my invitation to debate publicly these questions and I repeat my invitation."

In his letter to Couzens Tuesday, Mellon cited the stagnancy of railroad stocks as one proof that it is difficult to get money into productive enterprises.

Couzens replied to this by declaring the reason people won't buy railroad stocks is that the railroads are "constantly crying about and exhibiting their poverty."

"The purpose of this campaign is, of course," he said, "to increase freight rates."

The Michigan Senator also said there was plenty of money now going into building activities, and cited figures to show there was more building in 1923 than in 1921.

Mellon Says He Will Reply to Couzens by Letter.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19.—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, who arrived here late today to be the guest of honor at a dinner given by the Manufacturers' Club, said he had no "intention of going into a public debate with Senator Couzens on the subject of taxation."

"I received a letter from Senator Couzens today," said Mellon, "as soon as I learn what his arguments are I will reply and my letter will be published."

SENT MONEY IN BOXES OF CIGARS, BUT WAS INDICTED

Paul Werner Convicted of Killing at Roadhouse, Tells How He Spent $8000 in Defense of Case

DETECTIVES 'WORKED' TO BLOCK TRUE BILL

Man, Paroled After Serving Two Months, Asserts He Gave Senator Ralph's Law Firm $2000.

Paul Werner of 4357 Delor street, inventor and moving picture operator, who, during the World War, obtained about 1000 volunteers for the navy, of whom about 700 were accepted, and who was convicted of killing a man at a roadhouse in the county in 1921, yesterday told a Post-Dispatch reporter that his defense in the case had cost him between $8000 and $9000.

Convicted of the charge for the second time, June 15, 1923, Werner planned to appeal, but, he said, he lacked the necessary funds and so began to serve his sentence at Clayton jail, Oct. 19, last, remaining until paroled, just before Christmas.

Werner was called before the recent county grand jury to testify on another matter, about two weeks ago, but that discussion turned to his case and he told the grand jurors how much he had spent in an effort to win acquittal and clear his name. He was unable to recall details of his expenditures, however. The Post-Dispatch learned from an authoritative source that he presented no facts to warrant reopening the matter.

$2000 to Ralph's Firm.

Werner told the reporter yesterday that he kept no record of what he had spent, but knew the approximate total he gave was correct. Two recipients of his money he recalled readily. The Clayton law firm of Ralph & Baxter, he said, received cash and notes aggregating $2000, but he owes about $800 on the notes. A national private detective agency received three sums he said, for its investigation of the case for him.

State Senator Richard F. Ralph, leader of the county Republican machine, is senior member of Ralph & Baxter.

Werner declared that one activity of the private detectives was an effort to prevent the grand jury from indicting him. He produced a copy of a report from an operative of this agency which told of an interview the operative had had with a county Republican political leader (not Ralph) in a downtown hotel, in which this leader "assured us he would take care of the matter with a view that there would be no indictment."

Other reports of operatives indicated a belief that the matter might be presented to the grand jury which was in session in 1921, but that such action would be a "blind" and no indictment would result. However, Werner was indicted on the charge of murder.

Detectives Paid $10 a Day.

Werner showed a file of 27 reports from the operatives of the detective agency, including their expense accounts, which totaled $879.92. Their time, at $10 a day, was charged in these accounts. Frequent expenditures noted were "cigars for informants" and automobile hire. Werner also showed a bill from the agency for an unpaid balance of $432.17.

"I ought never to have been indicted," Werner declared. "I am innocent of any crime in that shooting, because I shot in self-defense. I think they picked on me because they thought I was a sure thing, with lots of money to pay to get out. Before this trouble I owned my home and had something saved besides, but now there's a $5700 mortgage on the house and I can't tell how much more I owe.

"I can't prove where most of the money I spent on the case went, but I have my suspicions. Once they had me put some money in two boxes of cigars which were given to some one interested. I don't remember how much it was."

Made Him "Nervous Wreck."

Werner named a man connected with a downtown cigar store, who, he said, saw him put the money in the cigars and remarked, 'I wish I was going to get that money." This man said yesterday he did not recall the incident. Werner, declaring that the affair had made a "nervous wreck" of him, admitted that he could not recall many details of what had been done in the effort to prove his innocence.

A friend of Werner's was employed as a waiter at Risch's Grove, Lemay Ferry road and Bayless avenue, St. Louis County, in 1921, and had his mail sent to Werner's home. Periodically Werner would take the mail to this man at the roadhouse. That was his reason for going there the night of Oct. 24, 1921. His account of what ensued, to which he testified at his trials, follows: He started to leave in his automobile but flooded the carburetor and leaned back to wait for the mechanism to drain; waiting, he fell asleep. He wore a diamond stud and diamond ring and had $1765 in cash in his pocket. He was awakened by feeling a man's hand on his chest. He got out and was seized from behind by a man, who then struck him. This man who was Norman Miller of 2012 Rutger street, had two companions. In the altercation, Werner declared, Miller apparently reached for a revolver. Werner was licensed to carry a revolver because he was paymaster of the Naval Veteran's Association. He pleaded to be left alone, unsuccessfully, then drew his weapon and fired, the bullet striking Miller, who died later. Miller's companions ran away.

Convicted at Two Trials.

Werner was indicted for murder, but convicted of manslaughter at his first trial, in January, 1922, and sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. He obtained a new trial because of prejudicial questions asked by the prosecution. He was convicted of manslaughter in the second trial. The county parole board granted his parole partly because of recommendations by one of the prosecutors and by navy officers and "men of affairs" in St. Louis, Circuit Judge McElhinney, a member of the board, said.

Werner served in the navy at Manila, under Admiral Dewey. He was active here during the World War in looking for German sympathizers, as well as in getting navy recruits, for which he received considerable publicity. He said yesterday that one device he is working on is a radio method of stopping motors of airplanes in flight. He is employed as a film operator in a moving picture theater at Grand boulevard and Arsenal street.

American Reported Found Slain at Tancoco, Mexico.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 19. — The State Department received from Tampico today a report that Corlam Underwood, supposed to be an American, had been found murdered at Tancoco, near Panuco. The report was received by the Consul at Tampico from the Trans-Continental Petroleum Co., but did not indicate whether Underwood had been an employe of that company or give any details as to the manner of his death.

American Warnings to Rebels Not to Be Regarded Lightly.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—If American merchant vessels are denied free passage into and out of Tampico, there can be no doubt that the Washington Government is prepared to take forceful measures to clear the path for them. Assembly of the fighting ships off Vera Cruz is viewed as a naval demonstration designed to impress Mexican insurrectionist leaders with the idea that less grim warnings already sent them against interference with American shipping are not to be regarded lightly. It is also evident, however, that the Washington administration still hopes that illustration of those warnings with the actual sight of the dull-hued fighting craft riding off the rebel capital will be sufficient to prevent overt acts against American commercial ships at Tampico.

Whether the decision to dispatch the war vessels to Vera Cruz was impelled in any degree by information that various Mexican ports have been or are to be mined by the revolutionists was not disclosed. Information concerning the mining operations was made public in a warning to mariners issued by the hydrographic office of the navy that various Mexican ports were being mined by the "de facto authorities."

Mines already have been placed in Salina Cruz harbor, the announcement said, and information has been obtained that the harbors of Puerto Mexico, Vera Cruz, Frontera and other gulf coast ports controlled by De la Huerta also are to be mined. Ship captains were cautioned not to attempt to enter these harbors without the aid of pilots.

So far as the reception of the American vessels at Vera Cruz is concerned, J. M. Alvarez Del Castillo, now in charge of the foreign relations department created by Adolfo de la Huerta, the revolutionary chieftain, who arrived here today, asserted that they would be received "with the utmost courtesy and hospitality."

"Not only will every facility be afforded the senior officer in command," he added, "to secure any information he may desire as to the safety of American interests, but also any suggestions offered by him in a friendly spirit will be similarly received, provided, of course, that such involve no infringement on Mexican sovereignty."

Obregon Orders Airplane Bombardment of Rebel Forces.

By the Associated Press.
MEXICO CITY, Jan. 19.—Government airplanes will bomb the rebels at La Piedad de Cabadas tomorrow, according to orders given by President Obregon after an inspection of the machines at Irapuato. It is believed the order means the initiation of the military operations against Gen. Estrada's insurgents, delayed by President Obregon until the arrival of the material purchased from the United States.

A group of deputies belonging to the Independent Party has suggested an investigation of the reported execution of Felipe Carrillo Puerto, Socialist Governor of Yucatan, to verify the truth of the statement by the Co-operatistas that he is still alive and held prisoner in Merida. Should he be found alive, the basis for the radical measures threatened against the Co-operatista deputies by the labor elements would be removed. The independent deputies plan to request guarantees for the safety of the investigators from the "provisional government" of the rebels.

The Obregon Government has decided to blacklist exporting houses abroad doing business with the insurrectionists.

Aguilar's Arrest Said to Involve Plot in Ranks of Rebels.

By the Associated Press.
NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 19.—Rumors persisted here today that in the arrest by Department of Justice agents yesterday of Gen. Candido Aguilar, son-in-law of the late Venustino Carranza, there had been nipped in the bud a plot to launch a revolution within the revolutionary ranks of Adolfo De La Huerta at Vera Cruz. Aguilar, who is held in the parish house of detention pending the arrival of papers authorizing his return to San Antonio, Tex., for trial on charges alleging conspiracy to violate the neutrality laws, would not discuss the reports. Aguilar was arrested aboard the steamship Nicarao, shortly before the vessel sailed for Vera Cruz.

"I was going home to see my mother, and then to fight him," he said, referring to President Obregon. "This criminal, this traitor! He killed my father-in-law. He killed Luis Blancho. He killed Murgia. It was he that ordered their deaths. I was going to fight to rid Mexico of him."

It was learned today that Capt. Camiro, deposed commander of the Mexican federal gunboat Bravo, in port here, was among the passengers who sailed for Vera Cruz yesterday aboard the Nicarao.

Texas Asks That Government Take Responsibility.

By the Associated Press.
AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 19.—Acting Gov. T. W. Davidson today acquiesced in the request of President Obregon of Mexico for permission to transport troops across Texas soil, reversing his decision of Friday at the urgent request of Secretary of State Hughes. In a telegram to Washington, Acting Gov. Davidson said 2000 Mexican Federal troops would be permitted to enter Texas at El Paso, provided the American Government assumed all responsibility for any damages resulting.

Obregon modified his request by asking that his troops be permitted to enter the United States near El Paso and go into Mexico at that point, instead of at Laredo, as originally proposed.

Gov. Hunt Notified by Hughes That Troops Can Pass.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 19.—The United States Government has granted permission for the movement over American soil of approximately 2000 Mexican troops from Naco, Ariz., to El Paso, Tex., according to a message received by Gov. Hunt of Arizona from Secretary Hughes tonight.

NACO, Ariz., Jan. 19.—The arrival of 450 volunteers from Southern Sonora at noon today swelled the force of Mexican federal troops awaiting permission to cross to the American side to 1750.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Official messages will be accepted by the All-America Cable Co. for Vera Cruz, Mexico, which will be transmitted over the cable line ordered closed Jan. 5 by President Obregon, Frank Phelan, vice president in charge of operation, announced tonight.

By the Associated Press.
BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Jan. 19.—Passengers arriving here today from Monterey said General Tapia, father-in-law of President Alvaro Obregon, had been arrested at Monterey by Federal officials, charged with being a rebel sympathizer.

Reports have been received from Matamoros of the landing of rebel troops at Soto La Marina, about midway between Matamoros and Tampico, and troops from the Matamoros garrison are reported to have encountered small detachments, which they claim to have routed. Consul Vasquez said tonight a large detachment of Federal troops is being moved out of Matamoros to attack the rebel bands in the vicinity of San Fernando, about 50 miles below Matamoros.

TROTZKY BLAMED FOR ROW IN SOVIET RANKS

Facts Made Clearer by Party Resolution and Speech by Stalin.

By the Associated Press.
MOSCOW, Jan. 19.—The facts about the dispute within the communist party became clearer today with the publication of a resolution adopted by the party conference paving the way for drastic punishment of discipline breakers, and publication of a speech by M. Stalin which in effect lays the blame for the entire affair on the shoulders of Trotzky.

The resolution aims at Trotzky's pet institution, the Red army, in which, it is declared, special attention should be paid to putting the work of propaganda on a "healthier footing." Many units in the Red army, prior to the present party conference, adopted resolutions favoring the platform of the faction opposing the party leaders.

For any attempt to conduct factional work in the army, offenders must be seriously punished, says the resolution. The promoters of factional groupings will be liable to suspension from the party, which may be brought about by a two-thirds vote of the Central Committee and the Control Commission, both of which are almost completely aligned with the party regulars.

Stalin's Speech Against Trotzky.

In his speech, Stalin said Trotzky was ill, perhaps seriously, and was ignoring all requests from the party leaders to say definitely what side he was on. Trotzky, he said, was guilty of six cardinal faults:

First, by writing his letter opposing the committee's scheme of party democratization after the committee had decided upon the plan, he committted breach of discipline and precipitated the whole affair.

Second, during the whole discussion Trotzky's attitude was capable of a double interpretation.

Third, he tried to show that the party's directing apparatus was acting against the best interests of the party.

Fourth, he arrayed the young rank and file of the party against the old guard leaders.

Fifth, he suggested that the wishes of the younger generation of the party should guide the party program.

Sixth, he proclaimed the right of freedom of groupings within the party.

Allege Undermining of Chiefs.

One of the other speakers, Yaroslavsky, said the opposition had carrie don propanganda in the Red Army, among the cadets, trying to undermine the leadership. Bitker, one of the members of the Concessions Committee, who since has been expelled from the party, had said the Concessions Committee received orders to "sell out Russia."

Yaroslavsky declared the opposition claimed to have won a third of the party military and communist groups, "but failed to win in Moscow. Probrashensky (one of the leading party economists and spokesman for the opposition) is trying to win the provinces, the first successes coming from Ryazan, Kaluga, Simbirsk and Chellabinsk peasant groups."

Sapronoff claimed 50 per cent of the Moscow groups for the opposition.

The conference decided upon a campaign for 100,000 new members to be taken only from the real proletarian groups, none of other origin to be admitted during the year.

High School Students Take University Awards Again to Their Families.

Two high school students of five who have been awarded scholarships given semiannually by Washington University to scholastic leaders in the graduating classes of the five St. Louis high schools for white pupils are members of families which have participated in the awards before. Miss Martha H. Biehle, 17, daughter of Mrs. Charles Biehle of 2817 South King's highway, who won the scholarship at Cleveland High School with a general average of 94.6, the highest of the present year, is a sister of Judson T. Biehle, who won the scholarship three years ago from the same school. Biehle is now attending the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston.

Frederick W. McCoy, 16, of 948 Laurel avenue, son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. McCoy, is the winner of the scholarship from Soldan High School with a general average of 93.4 per cent. He is a brother of Oliver H. McCoy who won the Soldan scholarship in January, 1922.

McCoy is one of two boys who won scholarships. The other is Sam Elson, 15, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Elson of 1223A North Thirteenth street. He is the youngest scholarship winner this year. He had a general average of 92 per cent and completed a four-year course at Central High School in three years. He intends to study law at Washington University.

Miss Roma Margaret Schaefer, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Schaefer, 2630 Natural Bridge avenue, led her class at Yeatman High School with an average of 94.2 per cent, only two-fifths of 1 per cent lower than the scholastic standard set by Miss Biehle.

The fifth scholarship was won by Miss Louise Boerjesson, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Axel Boerjesson, of 1324A Shenandoah avenue. Her general average for her high school career was 90.9. She will specialize in languages with a view of making teaching her profession.

180 Graduates at Soldan.

Frederick McCoy won his scholarship from the largest field of students. There are 180 students in the Soldan High School graduating class this semester. He will not enter Washington at mid-year but intends to enter in September. He has not decided definitely upon his course of study.

A total of 614 students are being graduated by the high schools. Cleveland ranks second to Soldan in the numerical size of its graduating class with 142 students. Central has 115 pupils in its class, Yeatman, 93, and McKinley, 84.

The McKinley High School graduating exercises will be held at 8 p. m. Monday. The Central, Soldan and Cleveland classes will be graduated Thursday at 8 p. m. and the Yeatman exercises will be held Friday evening at the same hour.

2500 CHILDREN INTRODUCED TO MYSTERIOUS FAMILY OF WOODWIND INSTRUMENTS

Missouri Theater Well-Filled Despite Snowstorm, at Second of Free Concert Series by Symphony Orchestra.

SHEETS of snow, driven by the wind, whirled across Grand boulevard yesterday monring and through the blinding white curtains came throngs of children, leaning against the wind, their faces rosy with the cold, to attend the second of this year's series of free concerts for which the Symphony Orchestra has been engaged by the Post-Dispatch. The streets were slippery and traffic ran heavily, but the children, mostly unattended by adults, threaded their way safely through, and as early as 10:15 began pouring in a steady file through the lobby of the Missouri theater.

There were diminutive urchins and tiny lasses, apparently below the minimum age of 10, and there were tall youths and grown girls from the high schools. Some of the smallest were in the care of brothers or sisters a few years older, and now and then a parent, or teacher, or hooded nun, appeared in charge of one or more youngsters. Once more it was a street car crowd, and for half an hour or more every passing car, from the four points of the compass, disembarked its scores of juveniles.

As at the first concert, on Jan. 5, unfavorable weather cut the attendance, but it was larger than on that former Saturday morning of below-zero temperature. The lower floor of the theater was filled to the last seat, and there was an overflow of several hundreds in the gallery. It was estimated that 2500 children made their way from all parts of the city, through the snow storm, to hear the concert.

Attentive Gathering.

By common testimony, this was the most orderly and attentive gathering in the whole series of Post-Dispatch concerts, now in their third season. Volunteers acting as monitors and ushers of the theater had little to do. Only a few attempted to leave before the program was ended. Many of them clustered about Rudolph Ganz, who directed the program, told him the concert was "fine," and promised to attend the next one.

The program, too, was one of the best as yet arranged for the particular purposes of these concerts. Last time, the bowed instruments—violins, violas, violoncellos and double basses, were the subject. Yesterday Mr. Ganz took up the mysterious family of woodwind instruments, with which many adults remain unacquainted after years of attendance at symphony concerts. One member of the Symphony Board, who was present, said this was the first time she had been able definitely to identify the voice of the bass clarinet.

"When we played the 'Spring Song' at the last concert" the director opened the proceedings, "I thought someone would write to the weather man, but I suppose you lost his address. Anyhow, he's snowing again. But as long as the little heart is warm, what does the weather matter?

"After the overture to 'Mignon,' I shall explain the woodwind instruments. But if you listen, you will hear that the overture begins with a clarinet solo, and afterwards you will hear the bassoon, flute and oboe." The overture was played, and was heard with utmost attention, followed by prolonged applause.

"I fancy," resumed the leader, "that you have read the excellent articles in the Post-Dispatch concerning the pieces we are to play today and the instruments we shall use. In other cities, children are paying 10, 15 and 25 cents to hear their orchestras; here, so far, these concerts have been made free for you through the generosity of the Post-Dispatch.

"The Universal Language."

"Sometime I believe you children will grow to love music so much that you will gladly pay your own dimes to hear these concerts. It won't happen this year, but maybe it will next year. Music is the universal language; it is instantly understood by children all over the world—Polish, German, English, white and colored. When music is brought to children, it gives you something lovely to think about, after your day's work is done and you've had your play in the snow."

The woodwind instruments, he continued, are so-called because they are made of wood and blown with the breath; but for the first of them, the flute, something nicer and of better tone has been found—pure silver. The flute, he said, is very difficult to master, and any man who devotes his life to playing it is doing something for art; only a serious, devoted and faithful musician can become a great flute player.

John F. Kiburz was summoned to the front of the stage, where he displayed his silver flute and then played passages of scales and ornaments, which the children applauded lustily.

The piccolo was introduced as the flute's "kid brother, half as tall or twice as small, just as you prefer. "At home," Mr. Ganz proceeded, "which makes the most noise, the boy of 10 or his little brother of 3?" There was laughter, which increased as L. Mack Close made his tiny piccolo whistle shrilly.

Instead of playing complete numbers to illustrate each instrument, Mr. Ganz hit on the happier idea of presenting only brief snatches. A bit from an intermezzo of "Carmen" was given to illustrate the flute, and a little fragment called "The Marionette" to exhibit the piccolo.

At the quaint tone of the oboe, played by John Leoncavallo, the children had another laugh. A strain from the Romanza of Dohnanyi's Suite, in which this instrument is prominent, was played. Then the oboe's elder brother, the English horn, was introduced, and Vincent Rifici ran its scales from top to bottom. It was illustrated by the opening solo in the Largo of Dvorak's "New World" symphony. This the children hailed as an old friend, because they sing the melody in school to words beginning "Massa, dear."

Clarinet Is Presented.

The clarinet, played by Rocco M. Zottarelle, was presented, and then its big brother, the bass clarinet, played by Charles Camacho. "The bass clarinet," said the leader, "is grown up; it has whiskers and beard." The reference was to its turned-up bell of metal. The children tittered when Mr. Ganz said a bass clarinet player would always be well off when traveling through a desert, because he could use the bell of his instrument for a drinking cup. The clarinet played a bit of Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," and the bass clarinet a snatch from the Dohnanyi Suite, carrying it down to its lowest note.

At the mention of the bassoon, which was described as the grouchy old uncle of the orchestra, the children became brightly interested, and there were "Ohs" and "Ahs" as Paul Litke raised his odd-looking instrument aloft. Many stood to see better. "The bassoon," said Mr. Ganz, "also has a great-great-uncle, 20 or 30 years older, and taller and fatter. It has a faculty of scolding the whole orchestra." There were louder exclamations as Noel Poepping held high in the air his huge double-bassoon, and as he played its range from top to bottom, down to the very lowest note in the whole orchestra.

To illustrate the bassoon, the orchestra played "In the Hall of the Mountain King," from Grieg's "Peer Gynt" Suite. This is by far the most popular number among the school children of the city; its name excited handclapping, and nothing would do but that it must be repeated. The interest was vividly increased because the children now knew it was the bassoon which imitated the heavy dancing feet of brownies, who are compelled to hasten their steps comically as the music waxes faster and faster.

There was no music to illustrate the double-bassoon, but the director said he is planning this summer to write a series of brief melodies for every instrument in the orchestra, and that he will call the one for double-bassoon "The Elephant."

A Tour of Europe.

This concluded the woodwind series, and it was announced that the children would be taken on a tour of Europe, "without the necessity of ticket, train or steamship." The first stopping place, it was stated, would be Spain; and for this visit the orchestra would play Moszkoski's "Malaguena." The children endeavored to repeat the strange and bristling name of the composer. In a few minutes, they were in Vienna, thanks to "The Blue Danube Waltz" of Johann Strauss, which was introduced as "the most famous of all the Viennese waltzes." Bohemia is only a step away from Austria, so Mr. Ganz asked: "Would you like to hear the 'Humoreske'?" "Humoreske! Humoreske!' came back a shout, for Dvorak's piece is another old friend of the children.

The final visit was to England, with Sir Edward William Elgar's march, "Pomp and Circumstance," which was recommended as "England's most famous march." Little feet tapped to its martial rhythms, and the children departed again into the storm, happily humming the broad and melodious theme of the march. The third concert will take place on Feb. 2 at the Missouri Theater, and the subject will be the brass instruments—French horns, trumpets, cornets, trombones and tuba.

Owing to the courtesy of the management of the Missouri Theater, this playhouse is donated free of charge for the Post-Dispatch concerts, together with its staff of ticket takers, program boys and ushers.

A. A. LESUEUR DIES IN CALIFORNIA AT 81

Secretary of State for Missouri 3 Terms; Edited Papers in Lexington and Kansas City.

Alexander A. Lesueur, 81 years old, Secretary of State for Missouri for three terms prior to 1896 and a native of St. Louis, died yesterday at the residence of a daughter, Miss Octavia Lesueur, at Burbank, Cal., according to telegrams to friends of the family in Missouri.

Lesueur was graduated from St. Louis University and engaged in mercantile pursuits until the Civil War. He enlisted as a private in the Confederate Army and had advanced to the rank of Captain before hostilities ceased.

He settled in Lafayette County after the war, reorganizing the Democratic party there and was for a time editor of the Lexington Intelligencer. He was president of the Missouri Press Association in 1882 and served in the House of Representatives from Lafayette County. He drafted the bill which authorized manufacturing activities by prisoners, making the penitentiary virtually self-supporting.

After serving as Secretary of State, Lesueur moved to Kansas City, where for 18 months he was editorial director of the Times, his connection being severed following a difference with other stockholders as to policies regarding Kansas City politics, during the term of Mayor Reed, now United States Senator.

Lesueur the went to Oklahoma, where he remained until a year or two ago, when he went to California. He is survived by his widow, who was Miss Florence E. Trigg, daughter of William K. Trigg of Lafayette Couty, and several children.

TAX BOOKS SHOW FURTHER SLASH IN BILLS OF $9819

Owner of Property at 23rd and Locust Streets Is Revealed as Beneficiary in Four-Year Period.

TOTAL LOSS TO CITY PLACED AT $64,650

Samuel Haas, Whose Cut in Assessment is the Second Largest Revealed in Fraud Inquiry, Is in East.

Samuel Haas, owner of business property at the northeast corner of Twenty-third and Locust streets, appears in the city records as beneficiary in assessment reductions amounting to $399,800, for the years 1919-22, inclusive, and as having saved a total of $9819 on his tax bills in the four years.

The Haas assessment reductions, made known yesterday by the Comptroller's investigators, are second in amount only to those discovered in the case of Max Kahn, trustee for Washington avenue property, on which there were reductions amounting to $472,500, with a tax saving of $11,575.95, in the years 1920, 1921 and 1923.

Assessments Cut $2,643,950.

With the Haas reductions added, the total reduction of assessments in the five years 1919-23, inclusive, reaches $2,643,950, and the total tax loss is figured at $64,650.50. The city's loss, however, will be reduced by payments of back taxes due. Bills have been and are still being sent out in these cases by the Collector, and a number of the taxpayers have paid, though such payment does not affect the criminal liability of any persons who may be found to have connived at a fraudulent reduction.

Bills for the back taxes due from Haas have been sent to the Collector for collection. The reductions in his assessments were made in 1920 and 1922 by incorrect copying from the Assessor's blotter books to the tax books sent to the Comptroller. In 1919 and 1921 the figures on the blotter books were wrong, and the investigators had to go back to the district assessor's plats for the correct amounts. The figures are:

Year.	Tax Book.	Blotter or Plat.	Tax Reduction.
'22	$133,130	$233,130	$2500.00
'21	43,850	158,850	2777.20
'19	54,330	139,130	1992.80

Haas was formerly president of the Samuel Haas Trimmed Hat Co., 2335 Locust street, which occupied a part of the property at the corner of Twenty-third and Locust streets. It was stated at the company's office that Haas had gone into another business. At Haas' home, Clayton and Price roads, it was said he is in New York.

The assessment reduction scandal, discovered Dec. 5, has thus far resulted in the indictment of two employes of the Assessor's office. These are William P. Etling, chief deputy assessor, and William E. Caulfield Jr., a clerk. Both are charged with bribery and alterations of records. The indictments against them have been based on reductions which were small compared with those in the Haas and Kahn cases. Three of the smaller taxpayers involved have testified before the grand jury in the cases, two against Etling and one against Caulfield.

NEGRO ROBBERS GET $13,521

Disarm Policeman Guarding Payroll in Kansas City.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 19.—Two unmasked negro robbers here today held up E. N. Daniels, cashier of the Irving-Pitt Co., as he was returning from the First National Bank in a taxicab and escaped with $13,521 in payroll cash.

The robbers who were waiting near the Irving-Pitt entrance, disarmed Robert B. Hartwell, motorcycle patrolman, guarding the payroll, and jumped into the taxicab, forcing the driver to continue several blocks. One of the robbers snatched the money satchel from Daniels and pushed him from the car, while the other held a revolver at the driver's head. This was the third large robbery here in 15 days. On Jan. 4, five men obtained $32,500 from messengers of the Centropolis State Bank. On Jan. 11, five men took $45,000 from messengers of the Main Street Bank.

Try to Identify Body Found on Tracks.

The Post-Dispatch has been asked to help to identify the body of a man found Friday night by the Big Four Railroad right of way, three miles northeast of Livingston, Ill. He was 5 feet 4 inches tall and tatooed on his left arm a peculiar design inclosing the initials 'H. W.' He was dressed in clothing purchased in this city. The body may be seen at Meyer's undertaking establishment, Worden, Ill.

Says Tuberculosis Deaths Could Be Greatly Reduced

Dr. A. J. Ochsner Discusses the Surgical Compression Method of Treating Affected Lungs.

About 1000 persons die of tuberculosis of the lungs every week in the United States, and this rate could be greatly reduced if cases where only one lung was affected were isolated and properly treated, Dr. A. J. Ochsner, president of the American College of Surgeons, said yesterday in an address at the closing session of the Missouri, Illinois and Kansas section of the College at Hotel Statler.

The method of which Dr. Ochsner spoke was surgical compression of the affected lung. "We all know that rest is what the tuberculosis baccillus doesn't like," said Dr. Ochsner. "We know, also, that it requires large amounts of oxygen. By compression the bacillus is deprived of both its needs and so the infection reduced.

"Compression empties the pus cavities, and as a result the patient will remain free from 'temperature' and his appetite increases, so that the other lung gets the benefit of his improved general condition. The patient has a definite margin of resistance. We add to the effective use of this margin of resistance to the extent to which we relieve him of fighting the condition in his diseased lung."

The close attention of the several hundred surgeons to the speaker's description of the operation was interrupted by laughter when Dr. Ochsner gave a hint that surgeons utilize human contrariness just as Tom Sawyer did in getting his fence whitewashed. Dr. Ochsner was explaining a point in the operation where the patient's coughing would seem to threaten rupture of an internal organ. "At first we told them not to cough," he said, "and the coughing couldn't be stopped. Now we tell them to cough, and they can't cough for the life of them."

Dr. Charles H. Mayo, president-elect, in the course of a lecture on gastric and duodenal ulcer, said: "I feel like advising some of my patients to embrace a religion that bans the eating of meat. Many people are hardening their arteries and shortening their lives through bacteria that feed on meat which in certain stomach condition, reaches the intestines undigested. Vegetarians have a better time of it in the middle period of life, anyway."

Likens Body to Machine.

In a clinical lecture at Barnes Hospital he likened the body to a great machine, oxidation in the body to the fire under the boilers, and the thyroid gland to the "little boy's hand that opens the draft."

"If too much of the thyroid is removed by operation," he continued, "the fires are low. If the gland is diseased, the fires are nearly out—and you can see they're nearly out. If you ask the patient a question he will ask what you said. If you repeat the question once or twice, perhaps he will answer, haltingly."

He told how it had been determined by experiment in a section of India where goiter was prevalent, that it was caused by "something wrong" in the digestive tract. Iodine is one element of the gland's secretion, he explained, and when the small amount of iodine necessary to health was not assimilated from the food, the thyroid, trying to supply it, became overdeveloped.

Food Burned Up Too Fast.

This caused extreme nervousness, high pulse rate, protruding eyes, and too rapid oxidation in the body, so that one might, "eat and grow thin," because food was burned up so fast. He said that in localities where this form of goiter was general a small amount of iodine was put in city water supplies as a preventive measure.

Discussing operations for removal of goiter or of part of an overdeveloped thyroid, Dr. Mayo concluded: "The death rate from such operations in the beginning was high. Much has been learned, however, of when and how to operate and how to treat the patient before and after operation, so that now we have a thyroid surgery unexcelled in safety except by obstetrics, where we have more patients when we get through than we had when we began."

Dr. Mayo is one of the famous Mayo brothers of Rochester, Minn., whose hospital and research foundation have played a large part in modern advances in surgery.

DUNCAN'S DANCERS' PROGRAM IS INTERESTING PIANO RECITAL

Anna, Lisa and Margot Eclipsed by Their Accompanist.

As a terpsichorean program, the appearance of the Duncan Dancers, last night at the Odeon, turned out to be an interesting piano recital. Anna, Lisa and Margot were quite eclipsed by their accompanist, Max Rabinowitsch, who was heard to excellent advantage in such pieces as Borodine's "At the Convent," Mendelssohn's "Spinning Song," and Scriabine's "Etude Pathetique." Even he accomplished the almost incredible feat of striking several wrong notes in Rachmaninoff's C-sharp Minor Prelude.

The trio of dancers had Isadora Duncan's method, that of dramatic interpretation instead of technique, but not her spirit and temperament. The chief number was a series of scenes accompanied by music from Gluck's "Orpheus." One had a vague impression of furies, blessed spirits and of the Greek minstrel leading Eurydice back from the shades. But mostly the succession of postures seemed almost unintelligible. It appears unwise to attempt to interpret this opera with an ensemble of only three.

There was another series of apparently meaningless or trivial measures to tunes of Mozart, and finally a lope about the stage to Wagners' "Ride of the Valkyries" music. So far as the dancing signified, they might as well have been butterflies as warrior-maidens. The attendance was moderate.

FORMER WIFE OF MACKLER AWARDED JUDGMENT OF $2050

Had Filed $5000 Claim Against Estate of Man Slain by Gangsters.

A claim of Mrs. Sarah Mackler against the estate of her former husband, Attorney Jacob H. Mackler, for support of their child Melvin, 12 years old, was granted yesterday by Probate Judge Holtcamp. She sought to recover $5000, but the court rendered judgment for $2050. Mackler was slain by gangsters on Feb. 21, 1923.

The boy's parents were divorced in 1913, the mother obtaining the decree. She alleged in her claim that Mackler failed to keep an agreement he made to adequately provide for Melvin's support and had contributed only $535 from the date of the divorce until his death.

Her petition was resisted by Mackler's widow, Mrs. Lena Mackler, 1119A North Clara avenue, who contended that the claim was barred by the statute of limitations. Mackler's estate is estimated at over $100,000. After making several specific bequests, including $5000 to the child by his first marriage, he gave the residue of the property to his wife.

Circuit Attorney Friday and laid the matter before him. Circuit Attorney Sidener said later he was convinced the injunction proceedings had not been brought in good faith by the promoters of the exhibition. He said every effort would be made to enforce the law.

The state statute against prize fights is:

> Any person who shall send, cause to be sent, published or otherwise made known, the challenge to fight what is commonly called a prize fight, or who shall accept any such challenge, or who shall engage in any such fight, or go into training preparatory to such fight, or act as trainer for any person contemplating a participation in such fight, any person who shall act as aider or abetter, backer, umpire, second, surgeon or assistant at such fight or in preparation for such fight, shall, upon conviction thereof, be deemed guilty of felony and be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than 10 years.

Law Against Sparring Matches.

Prize fighting has been held by the courts to be any fight for a prize or reward. The state statute against sparring matches is:

> Any person who shall engage in any public sparring or boxing exhibition, or who shall aid, abet or assist in any such exhibition, or who shall furnish any room or other place for such exhibition, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

Another state staute, relating to chartered cities, provides that such cities may license, tax and regulate sparring exhibitions. It is under this provision of law that the St. Louis ordinance, permitting boxing matches before clubs under a commission's regulation, was enacted.

It has been a matter of common knowledge that the clubs formed here to conduct boxing matches were legal subterfuges, and that anyone paying a stated admission price could gain admission to the shows. The tickets are usually in the form of a club membership card.

WEATHER CAUSES DIVORCE

Architect Says Wife Refused to Leave Southern Climate.

The weather, time-honored and harmless subject for light conversation, seems to have been the occasion of serious trouble in the marital affairs of Charles A. Hayes, 5893 Page boulevard, an architect, employed by the M. & O. Railroad, who was granted a divorce yesterday from his wife, Celie, on a charge of desertion.

Hayes testified he was married Nov. 2, 1916, at Mobile, Ala., and that his wife, accustomed to the warmth of the Sunny South, refused to accompany him when he was transferred to St. Louis, because, he testified, she complained, it gets too cold here.

MANEUVERS SHOW NEED FOR GREATER LAND PROTECTION

Weeks Says It Is Believed "Enemy" Blocked Juncture of Pacific and Atlantic Fleets.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Joint maneuvers of the army and navy in the Canal Zone and adjacent waters are believed by Secretary Weeks and War Department staff experts to have resulted in failure on the part of the Pacific fleet to pass through the canal in the face of theoretical enemy forces and rescue the ships of the Atlantic fleet engaged in Atlantic coast waters by other "enemy" war craft.

Secretary Weeks said today that, although the umpires at the maneuvers had not announced their conclusions, "it appears from available information that the juncture of our Atlantic and Pacific fleets has been theoretically prevented."

Time All-Important Element.

Describing the maneuvers, the statement said: "A state of war has been assumed to have existed since Jan. 14. Since that date the nation would presumably have moved toward mobilizations of its land forces. But now, only five days later, we may assume that we find ourselves faced with the necessity of giving increased land protection to our threatened coasts, to which our fictitious enemy has unhindered access by water.

"That being the condition our land forces would be required to assume a position of readiness for the protection of our coasts. For this purpose regular army troops would be rushed to our Atlantic seaboard. The National Guard from our central areas would follow as soon as possible. The mobilization of our untrained manpower would be in progress everywhere. We would be making feverish steps to mobilize not only our man-power, but our industries. Every community and activity of our nation would be affected."

The War Secretary said the maneuvers had demonstrated "the all-important element of time," adding that "utmost extravagance of lives and money in war will not compensate for neglect in peace."

Citizens' Training Important.

"The hours and days which a limited number of our citizens spend in time of peace in preparation and planning," he continued, "are of untold value in the time they save if war is thrust upon us. Our national defense act of 1920, our existing military organization and our mobilization plans are all devised with a view to facilitate transition from a peace to a war status."

Secretary Weeks declared the country has never been better prepared in the matter of time-saving preparations than it is today.

"Our general plans," he said, "are in a fair state of completion, though they will, of course, be subject to revision based on experience and study in future years. There remains the problem of arrangement of details for the assembly, administration and training of units in their local communities. Upon this work unit commanders of our National Guard and our organized reserves are now engaged."

MAIN STREET ENTERS INTO COLLEGE ROW

Albion Citizens Said to Resent Dr. Laird's Alleged Reference to "Hick" Town.

By the Associated Press.

ALBION, Mich., Jan. 19.—Until Dr. John W. Laird, 39 years old, president of Albion College, appears before the Board of Trustees in Detroit Monday, the result of the student rebellion against his regime here, remains uncertain. Friends of Dr. Laird, who formerly held pastorates in New York, New Haven, Conn. and Baltimore, explained his continued absence from his home and office by statements that he was filling a speaking engagement, but they could not say where.

Bishop Theodore S. Henderson of the Michigan area Methodist Episcopal Church, and W. W. Tefft, president of the board of trustees of the college, are reported en route from New York to Detroit. Both are expected to attend Monday's meeting, at which student charges of incompetence made against Dr. Laird are to be heard. At the same time a report of a committee of two board members who for several days have been investigating the college situation will be read.

Students Threaten to Strike.

Some members of the board of trustees and of the faculty expressed the opinion that Dr. Laird would present his resignation Monday. Spokesmen for the students who precipitated the row by creating an uproar in Friday morning's chapel and hissing the president from the room, said that if the boar dretained Dr. Laird as the school head, the student body would carry out its threatened strike.

Dr. Samuel Dickie, president emeritus of the college, said today that Dr. Laird's alleged "Main street" attitude toward Albion, which he is said to have referred to as a "Hick" town, aroused the townspeople against him. The practice of members of his family of sending out of town for merchandise was another thing.

Dr. Laird came here in June, 1923, from Baltimore. Though a comparatively young man, he had been preaching about 20 years.

When Disorder Began.

The disorders yesterday began with the throwing of hymn books when Dr. Laird entered the chapel, and continued for 10 minutes, subsiding only when the president walked from the room.

Dr. Laird said the chapel riot was precipitated by his expulsion of "a certain young woman" who he said had confessed to smoking cigarettes and going on an automobile drinking party. A "few dissatisfied students," Dr. Laird said, brought on the chapel uproar because of friendship for the girl.

Complains to Bishop.

Countering this statement, student leaders said the girl had been expelled without proper action by the Disciplinary Committee. They said the girl had filed a statement with Bishop Henderson in which she charged President Laird put his arms around her and attempted to kiss her. To this Dr. Laird replied, admitting the filing of the girl's statement, but saying that Bishop Henderson had exonerated him, and upheld his action in expelling her.

Dr. Dickie said that at a conference last year in Detroit, attended by Dr. Laird, Bishop Henderson and himself, "Dr. Laird gave us his word that he would leave Albion so as not to be present when the students returned Jan. 2, and that he would tender his resignation to take effect Jan. 25."

To this Dr. Laird replied: "I have not submitted my resignation, nor told any one I would resign."

Organization Is Merger of Eight Companies, Including Traffic Motor Truck Corporation.

The resignation of Clarence A. Earl, president, Walter M. Anthony, vice president and treasurer, and Walter J. Mery, secretary, of the National Motors Corporation, was announced at Chicago yesterday.

The National Motors Corporation is the merger of eight companies, including the Traffic Motor Truck Corporation of St. Louis, which represents a combined investment of about $80,000,000. No reason for the resignations was given.

T. C. Brandle, vice president in charge of the St. Louis plant at 5200 North Second street, said last night he had no advice of the resignations. The company manufacturs the National, Jackson and Dixie Flyer cars.

BABY MOORE REACHES EAST FOR OPERATION

Attempt to Remove Tack From Lung to Be Made Tomorrow by Philadelphia Specialist.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19.—Rushed here on a fast train from St. Louis for an operation to remove a tack from his right lung, 8-monthsold Cletus Moore lies in a tiny crib in the University Hospital, his fate in the skillful hands of Dr. Chevalier Jackson, who will operate on the child Monday.

The infant arrived in this city in the care of a nurse early today and was immediately taken to the hospital where Dr. Jackson's assistant, Dr. Gabriel F. Tucker, located the obstruction in the child's lung by means of X-ray examinations. He found the baby to be suffering from a slight temperature and some bronchial pneumonia. After thorough examination of the patient, it was decided to postpone the operation until Monday. Dr. Tucker found the baby was suffering no bad effects from his trip and as there was no immediate danger, he concluded that it would be advisable to study the results of the X-ray examinations thoroughly before operating.

In the hospital room, which he shares with three other baby patients, Cletus, smiling gazes undisturbed on the strange world in which he has suddenly found himself, tossing his tiny body restlessly, throwing out small hands stiffly at a twinge of pain.

When Mrs. Lela A. Parrishr assistant superintendent of the City Hospital, St. Louis, who has cared for the child in his 1000-mile trip to Philadelphia, draws near the crib of her charge, the baby beams upon her with large blue eyes and smiles to show his four front teeth. Once in a while, when he feels that dinnertime is overdue, he calls lustily for nourishment.

Crying makes him cough, and the cough shows there is congestion in the little chest, omniously foreshadowig pneumonia. It was pneumonia, Mrs. Parrish feared as the train raced to this city and this fear kept her vigilant through the anxious hours, listening for irregular breathing, watching the pulse.

"If I can only take him back well," Mrs. Parrish said, wistfully, as Dr. Tucker told her of the plans for the operation. "They are waiting so anxiously at his home for word as to the outcome of the operation."

Cletus is the son of Mr. ad Mrs. Lucius Moore, 3016 North Twenty second street, St. Louis. He is one of seven children, the oldest of whom is 12. The father earns $19.50 a week.

The child became ill four weeks ago and the mother took him to a clinic. Examination showed that the child had swallowed a carpet tack, which had lodged in the lung.

Dr. Jackson is credited with having saved the lives of more children by removing foreign objects from their throats and lungs than any other physician in the world. Using a delicate instrument called the bronchoscope, he successfully completes an average of three or four such operations in a week.

Trip Financed by St. Louis Catholic Organization.

The Moore baby was sent East at the expense of a Catholic organization after it was decided here that Dr. Jackson should operate. Three St. Louis surgeons were equipped with the device used in such cases, but Dr. Jackson as the originator of the technique was called in the case. He offered to operate without charge.

The congregation of Sacred Heart Catholic Church, 2336 University street, will say prayers for Cletus today.

300 BOYS THROWN TO FLOOR WHEN BALCONY RAILING BREAKS

Six Injured Seriously, 60 Others Hurt at International Track Meeting in New York.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—During the running of an event in the international junior and senior track and field tournament in the Thirteenth Coast Defense Armory, Brooklyn, a 100-foot section of the balcony railing collapsed this afternoon, throwing 300 cheering boys to the floor, 12½ feet below. Six of them were seriously injured and 60 others were hurt.

The running track was beneath the balcony. To see the result of the 440-yard run the boys rose en masse and leaned against the railing. It gave way as the runners crossed the finish line.

The balcony was made of iron, but fastened to a wooden base which gave way against the surging of the boys. Two physicians assigned to watch the athletes were among the first to extricate those scrambled on the floor, but in a few minutes 40 physicians and surgeons with 30 nurses arrived from five neighboring hospitals almost simultaneously with 25 police reserves and 30 firemen.

Many of the fallen untangled themselves and limped off, since the majority were only stunned, but a score or so were unconscious and were taken away in ambulance.

Thousands ran to the armory, surging inside, and had to be forced back by the reserves.

From Fall in Icy Water

Then—
Science Stops Cough Quickly with Mentho-Laxene

Buffalo Man's Open Letter

"I was soaked to my skin and frozen in ten below zero five years ago. Since then I have caught frequent colds and had a terrible cough winter and summer. I tried most everything. Went to doctors; medicine did no more good than water, so I just gave up. About a month ago I read about Mentho-Laxene. I bought a bottle that night and was coughing terribly. Just before going to bed I took a dose (just a single dose) and I didn't cough all through that night and slept sound, although my custom was to awaken five or six times and cough, cough for fifteen minutes. I have taken two bottles and don't cough at all now, and I feel fine, and I think this is most remarkable."

Signed, George W. Mellors, 135 Olive St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Any cough due to inflammation of the mucous membranes yields so quickly to the MIGHTY HEALING POWER of MENTHO-LAXENE that amazement and delight take the place of suffering almost like magic. Literally thousands have written thus.

Science Wins Again!

The same science that gave us the wireless and the airplane has given us a scientific cough remedy that stops obstinate, deep-seated coughs quickly, when all other methods fail. And remember, it is free from opiates, narcotics, chloroform and sickening sedatives that so often upset the stomachs of children and elderly folks. With this Master Prescription, coughs and colds are now quickly halted. This marvelous efficiency is due to a scientific method of combining imported Japanese Menthol with native extracts and essences in a powerfully concentrated form, which has a peculiar double action within the system—it quickly relieves the intense spasms that causes the cough, subdues the inflammation, heals the irritation, drives right out of the system the catarrhal phlegm and relaxes the congested membranes which cause obstinate coughs and colds.

Progressive leading doctors, scientists, chemists and druggists sell and highly recommend Mentho-Laxene for children of all ages and for adults. Any mother can feel free to give this pure medicine to her children. It is both inexpensive and very economical. Some prefer to use it full strength, while others dilute it with sugar syrup or honey, making a full pint of delicious cough syrup which children do not "fight." Every bottle is guaranteed satisfactory in every way or money back for the asking. The Blackburn Products Co., Dayton, Ohio

Mayor Writes
Mr. Andrew Lastine, five times mayor of Marne, Iowa: "I have been troubled with coughing spells for fifteen years. I tried nearly every known medicine without any relief. Then about three years ago I bought Mentho-Laxene. The first dose gave me relief. I now am able to rest and sleep, and always have a supply on hand."

Vine Grove Ave. Mother
Gentlemen: I have used two bottles of Mentho-Laxene cough medicine and think it is wonderful. My children are subject to spasmodic croup and I find Mentho-Laxene better than any doctor's prescription I've ever used. Respectfully, Mrs. J. A. McAllister, 3106 Vine Grove Av., St. Louis, Mo.

Sleep Impossible
Wisconsin—"My husband had influenza and pneumonia, which left him with a stubborn cough—worse at night—sleep became impossible; doctors and tried many so-called cough remedies to no avail. He has taken Mentho-Laxene for three weeks and is entirely relieved. I can surely say it is the supreme cough medicine in quantity and quality." Mrs. Monroe Zwoster, R. No. 4, Box 160, West Allis, Wis.

St. Louis Woman
Nov. 5, 1922.
Dear Sir: Seeing your Mentho-Laxene advertisement in a paper, I decided to try it, and it surely is all that one could possibly expect of a cough medicine. I would use no other. You may use this as a testimonial if you care to. Wishing you success, I am sincerely, Mrs. A. Morrison, 3750A Marine Av., St. Louis, Mo.

Blaine Av. [illegible]
Dear Sirs: I am using the second bottle of Mentho-Laxene. It has done all that is claimed for it, and I [illegible] speak too highly of its qualities for [illegible] colds and coughs. I have recommended it and you may use my name if you wish. [illegible] respectfully, W. [illegible] Bowler, 4120 Blaine Av., St. Louis, Mo.

SHOALS BID 'STILL STANDS,' FORD NOTIFIES COMMITTEE

Manufacturer, However, Said to Insist on Madden Amendment to Replace Gorgas Plant.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Henry Ford today notified Chairman [illegible]ittee that his offer for Muscle Shoals "still stands."

The McKenzie bill, which would authorize acceptance of his bid, was held by the Detroit manufacturer to be satisfactory if the Madden amendment, which provides for replacement of Gorgas steam power plant, is adopted.

He suggested, however, several other amendments and was assured by Kahn that they would be given "every consideration" when the committee resumes its study of the problem next Tuesday.

In a telegram to the chairman, Ford specified that the McKenzie bill should be amended to provide a substitute steam plant at or near Lock and Dam No. 17, Black Warrior River, and that the Government should include in the property sold to him, a strip of land 100 feet wide to serve as a right of way between the power plant and Nitrate Plant No. 2 as Muscle Shoals, with connection to Waco quarry, near Russelville, Ala.

The proposal of a group of southern power companies to operate the Muscle Shoals plants for 50 years for a rental of $100,000,000 was described as "the best offer the Government has ever received" for the project in a statement issued today by Representative Hull, Republican, Iowa, who initiated the correspondence with the Federal Power Commission which resulted in the bid.

PLOT TO DEPRIVE HER OF HOME ALLEGED

Mrs. Elsie Obear O'Neil Sues to Resist Ouster From 6644 Waterman.

Laurence W. O'Neil, 51 Kingsbury place, is charged, with his father, John F. O'Neil, vice-president of the Republic National Bank, in a petition filed at Clayton Friday by his wife, Mrs. Elsie Obear O'Neil, with conspiracy to defraud her of her marital rights in the residence at 6644 Waterman avenue. Mrs. O'Neil also is suing for divorce, alleging indignities.

The O'Neils were married in 1910. In the present suit Mrs. O'Neil asserts that following their separation in 1921. O'Neil deliberately defaulted interest payments on a deed of trust on the house, the result being that the property was auctioned off from the Courthouse steps on Sept. 5, last, for $13,275. Robert A. Burns outbid John F. O'Neil and ostensibly became the owner, but, Mrs. O'Neil alleges. he was acting as conspirator with and agent for Laurence O'Neil.

Last Monday Burns filed an unlawful detainer suit against Mrs. O'Neil before Justice of the Peace Ladd, in which he set forth that he is the owner of the Waterman avenue property, and that she had been unlawfully occupying it since the auction sale last September. He asked for damages and her removal from the house.

The suit of Mrs. O'Neil asks that Burns be enjoined from prosecuting the unlawful detainer suit and that he be compelled to convey back to Laurence O'Neil title to the property. She named the O'Neils, Burns and Harry M. Fisher as defendants. Circuit Judge McElhinney issued a temporary order in her favor and cited the defendants to show cause on Jan. 26 why her requests should not be granted.

John F. O'Neil yesterday denied the charge of conspiracy and said neither he nor his son have any interest in the house. The building was auctioned off to Burns, and has since passed into Fisher's hands, he said.

JOHNSON ASSAILS SALE OF ARMS TO OBREGON

Action of United States in Mexico "Immoral, if Not Illegal," Senator Says.

By the Associated Press.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Jan. 19.—The foreign policy of the Coolidge two angles by Senator Hiram Johnson of California here tonight. He not only reiterated his opposition to the World Court and the League of Nations, with or without reservations, but he also objected strenuously to the selling of arms and munitions by the United States to the Obregon forces of Mexico.

"Our action in Mexico is immoral, if not illegal," Senator Johnson said. "What a departure from the policy America has ever pursued. What an anomalous and paradoxical position is ours today. We, who were born in revolution. The United States Government finally says to the people inhabiting this continent, if you dare fight for what you deem to be right, if you raise your hands against oppression or wrong, the most powerful nation in the world, its genesis, armed resistance, will come to the aid of those you think your oppressors, and will maintain existing power."

Johnson told his hearers the bonus should be granted our war soldiers.

Defends Appeal for Bonus.

"Contrast the $30 a month received by the soldier during the war with what those at home made during that period," said the Senator. "Oh, ye business man, who protest against recognition of the soldiers, now, remember your attitude then.

"Not only was the principle of adjusted compensation recognized by our Government, but the Government during the war and for some months thereafter actually paid a bonus to its civilian employes. Certain of the great captains of industry, whose incomes are beyond the dreams of avarice of the ordinary man, prate and prate about commercialized patriotism. When these gentlemen have paid back into the treasury of the United States the profits they made during the war, they may be heard about commercialized patriotism, but until that day arrives, let them keep silent on the pitiful sum that is asked by the men who sheltered them and their business and enabled them to make their unholy profits.

.And remember this adjusted compensation bill can be passed and the sums due under it paid by the Government and taxes reduced, too."

Attacks Mellon Tax Program.

Johnson then went into the tax situation and contended that the Mellon plan worked in favor of the man with large income. He said that there were 13,600,000 persons who pay taxes on incomes of less than $10,000, while 330,000 pay taxes on incomes of more than $10,000. He gave figures that purported to show that men who paid on incomes from $250,000 to $5,000,000 would save amounts ranging from $49,000 to $1,330,000 under the Mellon plan.

The Senator repeated his attack on the Republican National Committee for putting back the Southern delegation representation in the national convention. He said that many politicians denounced him for interfering with an attempt, mentioned by Henry Ford, to nominate by default. 'As an American, I am ever using an American's prerogative," said the Senator. The Senator said that the farming interests must be helped and that lower freight rates would assist in doing this.

He turned his heavy guns on the World Court, which, he said, was in reality no court at all, but in the language of President Coolidge, was "merely a convenient instrument of adjustment to which we would go, but to which we could not be brought."

FEVERISH GAME OF POOL BETRAYS 2 ALLEGED ROBBERS

Youths, Who Later Are Said to Have Admitted Guilt, Caught Before $280 Holdup Is Reported

Two young men ran into the poolroom at Union boulevard and Easton avenue last night, rushed to a rack, seized cues, and began hurriedly to play a feverishly but inaccurate game of pool. Detectives Wren, Kincer and Lauer, night riders, who had dropped in to "look things over," were lounging in a corner.

"Those boys have something on their mind," one of them remarked. "They've been up to some mischief."

So the pair was arrested and searched. Each wore a hat and had a cap thrust in his pocket. One of them, who said he was Ed Sullivan, 20., 5511 North Market street, had $67 in crumpled bills and silver in his overcoat pocket. The other gave his name as Leo Seymour, 19, 5202 North Market street.

The prisoners were taken into Deere street station just as Paul Matthews and Frank P. Barrett, butcher and grocer at 1724 North Arlington avenue, reported by telephone that they had been held up and robbed of $280 in cash by two young men.

Further questioning elicited a confession from the prisoners, according to the detectives. Sullivan, however, insisted that $67 was the entire amount of their loot. Seymour said a revolver which he had was thrown in the street after leaving the shop.

HOLD UP CASHIER AND GET $2915 PAYROLL

Two Robbers Who Obtain Bussmann Co. Funds Overlook $350.

Edward C. Reid, cashier of the Bussmann Manufacturing Co., was a few feet from the company's plant at 3819 North Twenty-Third street, yesterday noon, when two young men held him up and took $2915 of payroll funds.

Reid had just returned by street car from the Northwestern Trust Co., Fifteenth street and St. Louis avenue, where he had drawn the money representing the week's payroll for 220 employes. One robber, described as tall and dark, pointed a revolver at him, while the other, short and red-faced, seized the package containing the money and ran west in the alley.

"Get him," he shouted back to the tall man. Thinking they meant to shoot, Reid pleaded:

"For heaven's sake, don't shoot. You've got the money."

Instead of shooting, the armed robber rapidly searched Reid, and then ran after his companion, overlooking $350 in Reid's overcoat pocket. Reid and others set out in pursuit, but found no trace of the robbers, and it is thought they fled in a waiting automobile.

Three robbers held up Nick Hibbeler, 2307 Pennsylvania avenue, manager of the Diamond Coal Co., 2133 Adams street, in his office at 6 p. m. yesterday, and escaped with $500 in cash and checks. The money represented the day's collections and the payroll. The robbers fled in an automobile.

Frank Burke, 2840A Easton avenue, Famous & Barr driver, was robbed of $100 cash collections by two men who boarded his wagon in front of 3622 Page boulevard yesterday.

Clerk Locked in Basement by Robbers Who Get $35.

Julius Bloch, a clerk in the army goods store of Julius Flescher, 5903 Easton avenue, was locked in the basement of the store yesterday, by three men who fled after taking $35 from the cash register.

When an employe of the J. F. Conrad Grocery Co., 13 North Sixth street, unlocked the door yesterday, he found that robbers had battered open the safe and took $400 in cash.

Holdups reported last night were Frederick Wagner, grocer, 719 North Vandeventer avenue, $12; Morris Appelbaum, haberdasher, 4123 Manchester avenue, $45; and Irvin Leinoff, 1213 Walnut street, $21.

STILL ANOTHER TWIST IN MISSING GIRL CASE

George Johnson's "Daughter" in Washington Says She Invented Whole Story.

George Johnson of 2911 Dickson street has heard so many different stories about his long lost daughter, Hazel, that he has decided to await further developments without permitting himself to expect too much.

On Jan. 7, just when Johnson and his wife were certain they had found Hazel after 23 years, a girl named Mrs. Olga Anne Cumberland was arrested in Washington, D. C. She confessed that she had posed as Hazel and asserted that Miss Johnson had been dead two years.

Police, unable to find a record of Miss Johnson's death, sent pictures of Mrs. Cumberland to the Johnsons. The pictures of Mrs. Cumberland corresponded with the pictures which Mrs. Cumberland had sent Johnson as those of his daughter.

Washington police then advanced the theory that Mrs. Cumberland was Miss Johnson, and had fabricated the "death" to keep her father and step-mother from knowing that she had been arrested. This theory, advanced in news dispatches yesterday gave the Johnston a momentary gladness.

Tells Another Version.

However, yesterday, a Post-Dispatch correspondent in Washington found Mrs. Cumberland at liberty on bond. She told another story. She was Mrs. Cumberland, all right, she said, but she had never known Hazel Johnson, did not know whether she was alive or dead, and had faked the whole thing.

"I did it in an idle moment," Mrs. Cumberland said. "I was bored and when I read the Johnsons' advertisement in the Detective Story Magazine I answered just for a lark. I don't know where Hazel Johnson is. Never saw her in my life."

Mrs. Cumberland, if indeed she is Mrs. Cumberland, is charged with purchasing about $300 worth of goods from department stores on account of her landlady.

She has told many varying tales but the Washington police are still of the opinion that she is Hazel Johnson. Just how they arrived at this conclusion, is not explained. Although the Johnsons identified pictures Mrs. Cumberland sent and those of Mrs. Cumberland as being of one and the same person, they do not know if they are pictures of Hazel Johnson.

Johnson admitted as much to a reporter who called at his home last night. He has not seen his daughter since she was six years old when she was taken away by her maternal grandparents, after the death of his first wife.

"The picture of the girl looks a bit like her," Mrs. Johnson said, "and we thought it might be Hazel. Now that all this has come up we don't know what to think."

They intend to make no move unless the girl in Washington communicates with them. She had carried on a correspondence for a year prior to her arrest, calling herself Hazel and writing endearingly to Johnson and his wife.

"It's a queer rigamarole," Johnson commented with interest but not feeling. "I'll wait and see how it turns out."

THREE SCARLET FEVER DEATHS IN ONE FAMILY IN 8 DAYS

Four-Year-Old Son of Florist at Des Peres, Mo., Latest Victim of Disease.

William Deutschmann, 4-year-old son of George F. Deutschmann, a florist of Des Peres, Mo., died yesterday afternoon of scarlet fever, the third child in the family to die from that disease in eight days.

The child's brother, George Bernard, 9, and a sister, Anna Marie, 6, died within three hours of each other last Saturday, Anna Marie from scarlet fever, and the boy from diptheria following a case of scarlet fever.

The children were buried at St. Peter's Cemetery last Tuesday, and that evening William became ill, his symptoms being those of the same illness from which his brother and sister suffered. His condition became worse, culminating in his death yesterday. There are four other children in the family.

LABORER DIES OF TETANUS

David Mansfield, 44 years old, died at city hospital yesterday of tetanus shortly after he was brought there from Missouri Pacific Hospital. The hospital's information is that Mansfield was a laborer empoyed by the Missouri Pacific Railroad, living at Hillsboro, Ill., and applied for treatment at the Missouri Pacific Hospital Friday morning.

The police have instituted an investigtion to determine how he contreted the disease. The physician in charge at the Missouri Pacific Hospital last night refused to discuss the case over the telephone.

WENT BACK FOR THE MONEY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 19.—When two thieves hopped into a Ford roadster owned by the Piggly Wiggly Stores this morning and drove it off they did not know it contained $2055 of Piggly Wiggly funds. The car stood in front of the store at 1310 Madison avenue while an employe of Piggly Wiggly headquarters went in with some change. He left the major part of his money in the roadster. Then the thieves happened along and drove off the car.

Out in Wolf River bottoms they got mired in the mud. Evidently they came back to Memphis and read an account of their "daring banditry" in the papers. For at 6 o'clock tonight, eight hours after the car theft, they drove back to the mired car and with the aid of an old negro transferred the six bags containing the money through 25 feet of mud and returned to town.

Cleveland Is Defeated by Soldan Team

West End Five Surprises by Running Through Five-Men Defense for 23 to 6 Score — Cleveland Had Ruled Favorite.

Soldan High School sprang a surprise in the Interscholastic Basketball League championship race at the Cleveland gymnasium last night, defeating the Cleveland quintet rather easily by a score of 23 to 6. The Cleveland five had been picked to win as a result of its showing in earlier clashes.

In the second game, Central won from McKinley by a score of 17-11. A crowd of 1400 witnessed the double-header.

Soldan last night showed a smooth working team on offense and broke through the Cleveland five-man defense at will. During the first half, Shaw was the main selected to toss field baskets, while in the second, Ritter starred.

The West Enders also showed a sterling defense as evinced by the fact that the defeated quintet was able to score only one field basket during the contest.

Soldan Gets Early Lead.

Cleveland started its reserve team, but after Shaw had netted four field baskets before the end of the first quarter, giving the West Enders an 8-to-0 lead, Coach Neuman sent in his regulars.

With the start of the second quarter McMillan counted the only field goal for the South Siders, but Rawdon equalized this with a long shot. Berkemeier scored two free throws for Cleveland, but Washburn came back with a field goal and Soldan led, 12—4, at the end of the first half.

In the third period, Cleveland was unable to score, while Soldan added four points on a field goal and two free tosses by Ritter. Ritter counted three more field baskets in the final quarter, while McMillan counted Cleveland's two points on free throws. Roberson of Soldan netted a free toss as the game ended.

RICKEY TALKS TRADE WITH BOSTON BRAVES BUT MAKES NO DEAL

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Branch Rickey, pilot of the St. Louis Cardinals, aroused baseball speculation on his arrival in New York today, but although he held a conference with owners of the Boston Braves and was believed also to have interviewed Manager John McGraw of the Giants, no definite developments apparently had resulted tonight from his visit.

Rickey and Emil E. Fuchs, vice president of the Braves, who, with Christy Mathewson, Boston president, attended a conference this afternoon, admitted discussing a possible deal between the Cardinals and Braves, but it was said nothing had been closed. Mr. Fuchs declined to discuss details, but intimated he might make an announcement tomorrow.

Despite Rickey's flat statement that he would not trade Rogers Hornsby, his great second sacker, either to the Braves or Giants, who bid $300,000 for him three years ago, reports persisted that Rickey and McGraw would reopen negotiations by which the Cardinal star would come to the National League champions.

HOW OLD IS THOMAS? ROW IS PROMISED IN HIGH SCHOOL LEAGUE

The age of Will Thomas, captain of the Central High School basketball team, is at present causing quite a row in Interscholastic League circles.

Thomas, who last year was picked on the all-star basketball, baseball and football teams, is one of the greatest athletes at the mid-city school. But his age may bar him from further participation in interscholastic circles.

There are two versions as to his age. The league officials contend he is going on 22 and that he was born Nov. 2, 1902. However, Stephen Douglas, principal at Central, claims that Thomas' father gave him an age which makes him 19.

Coach Callan last night before the game with McKinley was told not to play Thomas, as in the event it was found that Thomas was over age the game would be forfeited. But Central is standing on its records.

The league shows a birth certificate of a William Thomas, born Nov. 2, 1902, on Clayton avenue, whose mother's name was Margaret. Central officials claim that Thomas was born at 1608 Franklin avenue and that his mother's name was Agnes.

There have been rumors regarding Thomas' age for some time. He came to Central from Sandoval, Ill. Prior to last spring, the age limit in Interscholastic League was 21, but last March this was changed to 20.

BETHLEHEM PUSHED HARD BY THE GIANTS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Jan. 19.—Although victorious over the National Giants of New York in an American League game here this afternoon, the Bethlehem Steel soccer team was forced to extend itself to its utmost to win. The final score was 3 to 1.

Bethlehem, however, was handicapped throughout most of the game minus the services of Tommy Maxwell, the brilliant forward. Early in the opening period Maxwell wrenched his knee and was of little use to the team. However, he continued to play until close to the end of the half and did not return with the players at the restart.

Bethlehem (3).	Positions.	National Giants (1).
Oellerman	Goal	Forrest

St. Louis U. Five Defeats Rockhurst

Kansas City College Team Gives Billikens Hard Struggle and Loses in Final Minute, 37—34

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 19.—St. Louis University was given its hardest court battle of the season tonight by the Rockhurst College five, before a packed house in the Rockhurst Gymnasium. The Billikens won, 37—34.

St. Louis was doped to win by 10 or 15 points, but the Rockhurst College cagers, displaying brilliant basketball, battled their opponents all the way and lost only in the last few minutes of play.

The first half found the St. Louis team playing at top speed, Bradburn, forward, and Kapl, center, shooting goals after a brilliant passing game. Rockhurst trailed by six points at half time, but they showed to better advantage in the second period.

Rockhurst Spurts.

Soon after the final half was under way Rockhurst passed, dribbled and shot its way to a four-point lead. St. Louis, however, wiped out this advantage only to lose the lead again near the middle of the period. From then on until a few minutes before the final pistol shot it was a see-saw affair.

Stanton, St. Louis guard, played a whale of a game and Bradburn, a forward, was the star on the team's offense. Capt. Raybray, Rockhurst guard, made several of the longest shots seen in the Rockhurst gymnasium this season. Damon, the other guard, shared the scoring for Rockhurst, each caging five goals.

The high school team of Rockhurst defeated Grandview High in a preliminary contest, 23 to 12.

Joie Ray Victor In Special Race

Defeats Goodwin and Higgins at Fordham Games—McAllister Collapses.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Joie Ray, Illinois A. C. star, tonight won the special invitation mile run at the Fordham University track meet. His time was 4:26 1-5. William Goodwin, New York A. C., finished second, and Walter Higgins of the same club was third.

Ray took the lead on the first lap and set a fast pace, shaking off all competitors except Goodwin, who hung on until the stretch. Ray won by a foot.

After winning the first heat of the 120-yard handicap, Bob McAllister, the "Flying Cop," collapsed and withdrew from the race.

Vernon Ascher, junior national sprint champion, won the 440-yard run, defeating Tom Campbell, New York A. C., by four yards. Booth started from scratch.

MURCHISON TO COMPETE IN WILCO A. A. MEET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19. — Loren Murchison, outstanding sprint candidate for American Olympic team, has decided to adopt a program of preparation similar to that which resulted in his sensational form throughout 1923. This program calls for a stiff competitive indoor season and has resulted in his entry, among others, for the series of sprint races at the annual indoor games of the Wilco Athletic Association on Feb. 16.

Murchison, who holds the national 100 and 220-yard dash titles and also possesses world's indoor records at 60 and 300 yards, won the Wilco sprint series a year ago and was the outstanding star in the Wilco carnival last September.

DEMPSEY RESCUED FROM A DISABLED SEAPLANE IN ATLANTIC

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 19.—Jack Dempsey's greatest battle of one kind was fought in the middle of the Gulf Stream last Tuesday afternoon, it was revealed here for the first time tonight. And for once the heavyweight champion's powerful rights and lefts were powerless to bring him victory, for he, with Teddy Hayes, his trainer, and an aviator, drifted helplessly about on the waves in a disabled seaplane for more than two hours.

Dempsey and Hayes had been invited by a local flyer to take a trip. Several miles off the mainland the plane's motor began to miss fire and suddenly stopped. Although a stiff breeze was sweeping the water, a safe landing was made, but the engine defied repair.

For an hour it was worked on without results and the party set to work to hoist signals of distress. Another hour passed with the plane bobbing up and down like a cork. Finally a little fishing boat was sighted and frantic waving succeeded in attracting it to the scene of trouble. A rope was made fast to the plane and the heavyweight champion rode home in the hull of the flying boat, wet, but none the worse for his narrow escape.

A triple play by a girls' indoor baseball team was one of the features of a clash between the Columbia, Ill., Gymnastic Society and the Southwest Gymnastic Society at Southwest Turner Hall, Friday night, Columbia won, 12-11, and in doing so turned a triple play.

The Southwest team had the bases full when the incident occurred. The batter hit a line drive to Miss Louise Schneider, who stepped on second, doubling the runner and then tossed to Miss Krause on first, completing the three-ply killing.

Concordia Wins From Warrensburg

Seminarians Lead at Half, 16—11, and Capture Game by 29—21 Score.

Concordia Seminary kept up its winning gait when it defeated the strong Warrensburg team by a 29-21 score at Holy Cross Hall last night.

The downstaters came to St. Louis with a winning streak of three games but were unable to stand the splendid attack as well as impenetrable defense of the "preachers." The game was a fast affair from start to finish.

High man in scoring for Concordia was Riedel, who scored six field goals and one foul goal, besides playing a splendid game at center. Hutson was high man for the visitors with five field goals and three foul goals.

In the preliminary the St. Louis Midgets won their second straight game, when they defeated the Holy Cross team 25-19. Harms of the Midgets was the outstanding star with six field goals.

Pikers Hold Visitors To Low Score and Win Fifth Valley Victory

Ames Jumps Away to Momentary Lead but Washington Holds 15 to 4 Advantage at End of First Half—Seago Is Star.

Washington University continued its march toward the Missouri Valley Conference title by winning its fifth straight game of the season from the Iowa State College quintette by a 25 to 12 score at Francis Gymnasium last night. A capacity crowd witnessed the game.

The Pikers completely outplayed the visitors in every branch of the game and after the first five minutes of competition took the lead which they never relinquished. The Piker shooting was deadly, and time and again Coach White's players displayed an uncanny ability to hit the mark with long distance shots.

Ames displayed a fast short-pass attack, but the Washington guarding was airtight. The visitors were able to score only one goal from the floor during the first half and only three field baskets in the final period. The guarding of Paul Wiel was one of the spectacular features of the Piker defense. Wiel was in on every play and smothered innumerable rallies under the Piker goal.

Seago Leads Scoring.

Russ Seago, Piker center, lead the scorers with a total of five field goals, several of them caged from difficult angles. Capt. Jack Minner, who is leading the conference scorers, sank two baskets and three free throws to add seven points to his total.

Ames immediately took the lead when Young scored twice on foul throws but Capt. Minner of Washington also caged two free tosses and the score was 2—2. Fisher caged the first field goal, giving Ames the lead 4—2. Wagener, on a pretty pass from Minner, evened the count, and Minner made it 5—4 for Washington on a free toss.

At this time, J. Behm replaced Raff at forward for Ames. Seago immediately scored, making it 7—4 and Ames took time out. On a clever pass from Minner, Seago again scored, increasing the Piker lead to 9—4. N. Behm went in for Fisher at forward for the Iowans. This did not stop the Piker attack, for Wagener sank a long distance shot and Seago followed with another, giving the Pikers a 13—4 lead. Ames again took time out. Wagener raised the Piker total to 15 with a pretty throw from under the basket. The score at the end of the half was Washington 15, Ames 4.

Reserves Get Chance.

The Pikers continued their slashing attack in the second half and had no dificulty maintaining their advantage. With the score 25-12 and only four minutes to play, Coach White yanked his regulars and sent in his second team. Neither outfit was able to score thereafter.

Ames opened the second half with an attack on the Piker goal, but the excellent work of Wiel and Cox, Piker guards, held them back. Roberts then sank a basket for Ames, making the score 15-6. The ball had cleared the hoop, but bounced out of the basket after hitting the net work below. The referee allowed Ames the point at the request of the Piker captain. Cox and Seago then scored two goals for the Pikers who were leading 19-6. Jacobson of Ames made it 19-8, but Seago made a pretty one-hand shot to keep Washington ahead at 21-8. Raff and Young scored twice for the visitors on foul throws, but Minner came back with a long basket for Washington and Raff then tallied for Ames, making the count 25-12 in favor of the Pikers. Washington then sent in four substitutes. The game ended a few minutes later without further scoring.

The Pikers' next conference game will be with Grinnell College next Saturday night at Francis Gymnasium.

Oklahoma Defeats Nebraska, 32–20

Wallace Stars as Sooner Basket Squad Runs Over Husker Five.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NORMAN, Ok., Jan. 19.—Oklahoma handed the visiting University of Nebraska basketball squad a 32 to 20 defeat today at Norman. The game opened with a Nebraska flash which sent the visitors into the lead but Oklahoma quickly overcame the 5-point lead and the first period ended 15 to 14 in Oklahoma's favor.

It was not until the second period that the Sooners opened up with a furious attack that completely puzzled the visitors. Nebraska literally stood still and allowed the Sooners to hang up 17 points in the second period compared to but six of theirs. For the first 14 minutes of the second half, the Huskers failed to count.

Wallace of Oklahoma was the brilliant light of the game with his marvelous work at both forward and guard. The Huskers were never able to solve this little athlete and he played with them, around them, through them, and shot five goals from the floor and a free throw for high score honors of the game.

Capt. Usher and Cozier were the outstanding men of the Husker five, although both scored an equal number of points. Capt. Usher proved the better man with his spectacular floor work and the great number of opportunities he made for himself in goal shooting. His markmanship was decidely poor.

GOLF ASSOCIATION SETS DATE FOR EASTERN QUALIFYING TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—The Professional Golfers' Association has decided to hold the eastern qualifying tournament for the national open championship over the course of the Worcester, Mass., Country Club on May 28 and 29. The western tournament probably will be held on a Chicago course about the same date, but the P. G. A. has not yet fixed these details.

The plan for holding two preliminary sectional tournaments, both under P. G. A. auspices, will be tested this year for the first time. About 80 professional stars will be qualified for the championship finals, to be held June 5 and 6 at Oakland Hills, Detroit.

AUSTRALIAN YOUTH SETS NEW SWIM RECORD

By the Associated Press.

SYDNEY, New South Wales, Jan. 19.—Andrew Charlton, 16 years old, Australian swimmer, established a world record in defeating Arne Borg of Sweden in an 880-yard swimming race here yesterday. Charlton negotiated the distance in 10 minutes 51 4-5 seconds and finished 15 yards ahead of Borg.

The time given would be a world's record for 880-yards either in a tank or open water. The previous marks were, for the tank, 10 minutes 55 2-5 seconds, established by Norman Ross of Chicago, and for open water, 11 minutes 8½ seconds, by Arne Borg.

The 500-meter race was won by the European champion, Thunberg of Helsingfors, Finland, in 43 2-5 seconds, which is two-fifths of a second lower than the world record. Boeckl, the Viennese figure skating expert, is not attending the meet, having sprained an ankle while training.

If the Boxing Game Lacks a Punch, the Governor Might Be Able to Supply One

Boxing Body Will Take Up Coliseum Fiasco, Tuesday

Complaints Made to Circuit Attorney and to Board of Police Commissioners.

Bill Muldoon to Be High Commissioner of National Boxing Body

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 19.—A resolution proposing to elevate William Muldoon, former chairman of the New York Boxing Commission, to a position in the boxing world similar to that held by Judge Landis in the baseball world, will be offered by W. F. Sailor, secretary of the Minnesota Commission, at the annual convention of the National Boxing Association, which opens at Louisville, Ky., next Monday, Sailor announced today.

The support of the boxing commissions of other states toward this resolution has been pledged, Sailor said.

Whether the boxing game would continue in St. Louis following Friday night's fiasco at the Coliseum was the topic of conversation in sporting headquarters yesterday. While the prevailing opinion appeared to be that the sport was dead, Chairman Harry Uhlemeyer of the boxing commission was formulating plans by which he hoped to restore the game.

Opposition to the pastime was apparent in complaints to both the Circuit Attorney's office and to the Board of Police Commissioners.

Whether future bouts can be held here is entirely dependent on the result of the case to be tried later in Circuit Judge Frey's court. The case was postponed indefinitely yesterday.

The Angelica Club, in this case, asks that all interference with its boxing shows be discontinued until Dec. 6.

The plea is made that the club is a legitimate organization under the laws of Missouri and such entertainments as it holds for the benefits of its members are private and not public afairs. The Missouri law is operative only against PUBLIC fights or boxing contests.

Chariman Uhlemeyer of the boxing commission, when asked what if any effort would be made to make good the public's losses on the show Friday night stated that the unused receipts from last week's show, plus the profits of a boxing program planned by the Angelica club would suffice to take up all the stubs of tickets for last Friday night's entertainment.

Uhlemeyer Outlines Program.

Uhlemeyer outlined a fight program of merit and said he would make an effort to have the entire commission support it at the next gathering of the city boxing body which is set for next Tuesday.

Principals who had been expected to take part in the program Friday night had departed for their respective homes yesterday. Visiting boxers and managers received return transportation.

High-Priced "Beauties" Who Will Be Given Tryouts in Majors

GLENN WRIGHT
MAX BISHOP
EARL COMBS
PAUL STRAND

14 High-Priced Stars Will Get Tryouts in Major Leagues

Athletes With Combined Value of $500,000 Come Up From High-Class Minors—Strand, Who Goes to Mackmen, Had Great Record in Coast Circuit.

By Herman Wecke.

Fourteen baseball players, with a combined value of close to $500,000, will be given tryouts in the major leagues this spring. Of course, more youngsters will get chances, but only the high-priced athletes are figured in this list. All but one of these tossers came from the three class AA circuits, which shows that the members of the Pacific Coast, International and American Association are still able to get fabulous sums for their stars.

Connie Mack, after his success with the high-priced Sammy Hale last season landed three stars of the minors. First of all, he obtained Max Bishop, a second-sacker from Jack Dunn's five-time champion Baltimore club for a price said to be $35,000. Then he electrified the baseball world by paying a sum reported at $65,000 for Paul Strand, Salt Lake City outfielder, while attending the Chicago meting. This he followed by buying Al Simmons, an outfielder, from Milwaukee for $25,000. This means that the lanky Cornelius will try out $125,000 worth of talent at the spring training camp.

Figuring the amount of money spent, the deals made by the two New York clubs with Louisville only recently come next. It is reported the Giants gave $50,000 for Wayland Dean, a pitcher, while the Yankees turned loose the same sum for Earl Combs, outfielder. The two trades established a record for high prices for American Association stars.

St. Louis Boy to Get Chance.

Other deals in which quite a bit of money figured were those for Dudley Lee, the former Brownie, for whom the Red Sox are reported to have given Tulsa, $30,000; the sale of Johnny Jones, a St. Louis boy, and Rube Yarrison, to Brooklyn by Portland; the purchase of Jakie May, one-time Cardinal southpaw, by the Cincinnati Reds, and several others.

The high-priced stars who will be given tryouts and the sums they are reported to have brought, follow:

Paul Strand, Salt Lake to Athletics	$ 65,000
Max Bishop, Baltimore to Athletics	35,000
Al Simmons, Milwaukee to Athletics	25,000
Dudley Lee, Tulsa to Red Sox	30,000
"Wiz" Kremer, Sacramento to Pittsburg	30,000
Glenn Wright, Kansas City to Pittsburg	30,000
Tom Sheehan, St. Paul to Cincinnati	35,000
Jakie May, Vernon to Cincinnati	30,000
Wayland Dean, Louisville to Giants	50,000
Earl Combs, Louisville to Yankees	50,000
Johnny Jones, Portland to Brooklyn	25,000
"Rube" Yarrison, Portland to Brooklyn	25,000
Elmer Jacobs, Seattle to Cubs	10,000
Pitcher Blake, Seattle to Cubs	10,000
Total	$460,000

Strand, who away back in 1914, was tried out by the Braves, seems to be the star of the lot, figured on minor league records. Strand was the batting champion of the Coast League with an average of .394 for 194 games. He established a record with 325 hits. Included in this lot were 43 home runs, 13 triples and 66 doubles. This shows that 122 of his safeties were good for extra bases. In addition, Strand scored 180 runs and drove in 187 more. He pilfered 22 bases. If the outfielder hits near his 1923 standard in the American League, he will prove a valuable man for Connie Mack.

Vespers' Speed Will Be Tested

Cup Survivors Oppose Fast Team in Hoovers—Millers vs. Scullins.

The Vesper soccer team, leaders in the St. Louis Soccer League race and only local survivors in the national championship cup race, will have no speed advantage over their opponents in today's league double-header. They are scheduled to play the Hoovers in the second game of the afternoon. If the Hoover halfback line handles the ball well on the attack the Vespers may come out second best.

The Ben Millers will oppose the Scullins in the first game, starting at 2 p. m.

Thirty-five minute halves will prevail, an addition of five minutes being made to the regular league rule, to better prepare the Vespers for the 45-minute halves required in all cup games.

The Ben Millers have not played together as a team very frequently in the past two months and they may show the effects of a lack of practice. It is probable that Aage Laursen, the recently imported Dane, will again appear on the forward line.

The Vespers are leading the league with a three-point advantage over the Hoovers who are second. The Scullins are last but they are only one full game behind the Hoovers and only one-half game behind the Ben Millers.

Fall River Is Winner in Cup Semi-Final, 2-1

American League Team Enters Eastern Final, Beating Abbot Worsted Eleven.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Jan. 19.—Fall River entered the Eastern final of the national cup competition here today by defeating the Abbot Worsted F. C. of Forge Village, Mass., by the score of 2 to 1 in the Eastern semifinal of the national challenge cup competition.

The defeat of the Forge Village aggregation at the hands of the American Leaguers was not a big surprise, although the low margin of victory certainly indicates the rugged battle displayed by the Boston district team in defending their lines against the major leaguers.

Fall River outplayed Abbot Worsted throughout the contest, with the exception of the first 15 minutes or so, but the forwards' shooting prowess was far off color.

Johnny Reid headed in the initial score of the game on a corner kick from McKenna after 20 minutes of play in the first half. Dundas equalized for Abbott about 5 minutes later, when he made a broken field run. Capt. Brittan of Fall River headed in a cross from McKenna just a few minutes before the whistle that ended the first half.

Referee Lambie was severely scored by the crowd of 5100 fans for decisions that proved unfavorable to both sides at various stages of the game.

NATIONAL BASEBALL FEDERATION ADOPTS NEW AMATEUR RULE

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 19.—The National Baseball Federation in annual convention here, today decided to separate the administrative affairs of each of the three classes of baseball coming under its jurisdiction. Whereas in the past, amateurs, industrials and semipros alike had a voice in the affairs of each class, under today's decision the president of the N. B. F. will appoint a committee, made up of representatives of one single division to take charge of the affairs of that division. The committees are expected to present recommendations at a federation meeting tentatively scheduled for next April.

An amateur henceforth will be one who has never received any monetary remuneration or the promise of such for his services on the diamond previous to, or during, the year in which he desires to join an amateur team. A player who, after obtaining permission for a try-out with a professional league club, is unsuccessful, will be reinstated as an amateur on obtaining an unconditional release from the professionals.

Under the definition adopted today, an industrial player will be one who has been for 30 days prior to the opening of the baseball season, a bona fide worker for the industrial plant or concern on whose team he wishes to play, and has received no remuneration for his playing subsequent to June 1 of the preceding year.

The following officers were elected: President, Ralph S. Davis, Pittsburg; first vice president, V. E. Zetterlind, Detroit; second vice president, Judge Arthur Speigel, Cincinnati; third vice president, Fred Thomas of Cleveland; Secretary-treasurer, John H. Gourley, Cleveland. Mayor Clayton Townes of Cleveland was chosen counsel for the organization. Three new members of the board of directors were installed, as follows: Frank A. Ruth, Baltimore; Col. Waite C. Johnson, District of Columbia, and Doik Novario, Cleveland.

Second Thoughts Wins in Feature at New Orleans

Delante Beaten Off by a Length in Driving Finish With Barracuda Third.

PARKE'S ERROR COSTLY

Rider Becomes Excited and John Finn Defeats Moonraker by Half Length.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 19.—It is no longer Delante, the unbeatable. It is Delante, the consistent, though. For the game little McClain gelding, although he finished second to Second Thoughts in the mile and 70 yards feature at the Fair Grounds today, displayed the characteristics that made even a defeated thoroughbred a hero. In the worst part of the going all of the way around the oval, the little son of Seth put his head down in the last 70 yards and drew the best qualities out of the winner. Barracuda finished in his usual position, third.

From the break Second Thoughts, by nature a sprinter and going the route for the first time in her career, took the lead. Delante raced up to within a length and a half of her. This position was maintained by the pair until the last sixteenth. In the final drive, Second Thoughts, under splendid siding pushed off every bid Delante made and stuck it out to win by a length.

Parke Loses by a Nose.

Ivan Parke lost a nose decision in the Rex Handicap at six furlongs, an affair that found three fairly clever three-year-olds breaking as Bill Hamilton lifted the webbing. The finish saw Rinkey, Mah Jong and King O'Neill racing like a team 100 yards from the end. Neither could be said to have an advantage. It was purely a battle of riders. Marinelli, on King O'Neill, won it. Parke wes second Mah Jong was third.

Even great riders make mistakes. This was apparent in the third race, the sprint feature of the day. The race was won by the inconsistent John Finn, which beat Moonraker and Mercury in a driving finish. Moonraker broke on top of the field and had opened up a two-length lead. John Finn had his running boots on and was a fast coming second from the break. Mercury topped the others. They raced in this order until the final sixteenth, the only difference being that John Finn cut the lead of Moonraker and Mercury the advantage of John Finn. At the last sixteenth pole Moonraker still retained a slight margin when Parke grabbed his whip and pounded the son of Broomstick. John Finn was noticed to gain at this juncture, and, as he evened terms with Moonraker, Parke evidently became a bit excited and grabbed for his leather strap.

Parke's Mistake Fatal.

The margin of John Finn's victory was just half a length, the distance that Parke lost by his frantic beating of the Whitney color bearer in the last 100 yards. Moonraker but managed to beat Mercury for the place. The rest of the field was outclassed.

Paul Micou began proceedings by duplicating his effort of a few days ago. As on the occasion of his previous start, Paul jumped out from a gang of charging quadrupeds in the first and by the margin of a half length the placing judges recorded his victory. He beat Jou Jou, the favorite. Capt. Costigan's race was probably best of the three. The Collins colt was practically left, and had to go to all corners of the track, but his cyclonic rush landed him a length behind the winner.

The royal John horses, King and Duke, were selected by the public as the most likely winners in the second, a cheap affair at a mile and 70 yards. The King got the honors. Georgette, an outsider, stepped in and outstayed the other royal horses for the place.

The consistent Freezy Sneezy, with Chick Lang in the saddle, got up in time to cop the sixth from Pequot by a neck. East Indian, with Parke, finished gamely.

Parke showed the way from start to finish in the final number with Runquoi. Broomflax, a well played favorite, stuck it out long enough to get the place over Duelma, an outsider.

WHEATON, 2-YEAR-OLD, IS SOLD FOR $17,500

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 19.—Wheaton is the first two-year-old developed at the Fair Grounds to attract the attention of owners desiring to obtain crack juveniles. He was purchased today by J. McMillan from J. W. Dean for a reported price of $17,500.

Wheaton started three times at the local track and won two of the races. In both triumphs he carried 120 pounds.

Detroit Women's Aquatic Team Meets St. Louisans Thursday

Olympic Team Member and State and District Champions Compete at Tower Grove Pool Against Local Team.

A novel intercity athletic competition will be the dish of St. Louisans, Thursday evening, when the Detroit Women's Aquatic team meets a team of St. Louisans at the Tower Grove Pool, Grand boulevard and Juniata street. The primary object of the meet, arranged by Verne Lacy, chairman of the Western District A. A. U., is to provide competition for the St. Louis squad which aspires to places on the American Olympic team.

Among the visiting swimmers will be a fancy diver who was on the American team at Antwerp in 1920, several Michigan and Central A. A. U. champions and a couple of phenomenal young swimmers whose time trials indicate that they are of national championship caliber. It is believed to be as strong a women's team as could be gathered together in the middle-west, except for the absence of Sybil Bauer of Chicago.

Men's Competition.

In addition to the special competition between the St. Louis and Detroit women swimmers, there will be a series of events for men swimmers in which the Principia Academy team will compete against a team of unattached men coached by Sherman McBride.

Hugh J. Sheean, former St. Louisan, who is now a member of the Detroit Athletic Club, was instrumental in arranging the meet.

The Detroit contingent is made up of the following:

Edwardina Kranich, Michigan champion at all distances from 50 yards to 225 yards, heralded in Detroit as a coming national champion.

Evelyn and Edith Fehr, 15-year-old twin sisters, who press Miss Kranich closely for honors in the 50 and 100 yard events.

Hazel Hutchinson, also a specialist in the short distances.

Minnie Mae Baldwin, fancy diving champion of Michigan, from the low board.

Mrs. Vonnie A. Malcomson, Central A. A. U. champion at high diving, undefeated in the district for the past six years and a member of the 1920 American Olympic team at Antwerp.

The team was selected from 300 women swimmers who are regular competitors in the Detroit district.

It was at first intended to hold the meet at the new Washington University pool but the athletic authorities at that institution flatly refused to co-operate.

Grace Stewart, 100 yards free style.

Anne Farrell, 50-yard free style.

Rose Wertheimer, 100-yard breast stroke and 50-yard free style.

Lucille Spillman, 100-yard free style.

Misses Stewart, Ressler, Spillman and Hose will form the St. Louis relay team against the four best sprinters of the Detroit team.

In the men's division of the program, the following local swimmers will appear:

Principia team — Morey, Rixner, Clark, Kline, Bonnie, Rice, Reinholt, Penfield, Rigelon, Reynold, Ellis, Allen and Green.

McBride's squad—Callahan, Baker, Stephens, Barringer, Schleiman, Fuidge, Wunderlich, Chapman, Burns, Saul, Furman, Meyer.

Banquet Thursday.

There will be a banquet at 11 o'clock Thursday evening after the meet, at the Statler Hotel, in honor of the participants, and the public is invited to attend.

"Seeded" Draw To Be Used in Squash Tourney

Entries Received From Omaha and Cincinnati — Event Begins Wednesday.

Drawings for the Western Squash Tennis tournament, which begins on the courts of the Racquet Club Wednesday, will be made tomorrow according to an announcement by Drummond Jones, acting as chairman of the Arrangements Committee in place of W. C. McCluney, who is out of the city.

Jones said the "seeded" draw would be used in order to bring the better players together on the closing days of the tournament and to permit the weaker local players to finish their matches early.

Entries have been received from Cincinnati, Omaha and New York. Cincinnati will send six players, Omaha probably nine and New York one. Al Conlin, the professional of the Cincinnati club, will accompany the team and it is expected that matches will be arranged for him with Joe Dyson, Racquet Club "pro" and Jack Cole, professional of the University Club.

McCreery Will Compete.

Andrew McCreery, city champion, Roland Hoerr, J. R. Shepley, Maury Hill and Jim Wear are expected to represent the University Club in the tournament, although elimination matches now in progress may change the lineup. The same condition prevails at the Racquet Club where elimination trials are being held. However, E. A. Limberg, Sam Kennard, J. B. Spencer, Dan Jones and J. B. Berg will likely compose the club's team.

The team play will be for a trophy donated by the Racquet Club, which will go to the winning five and be put into competition each year. In addition to the team contests the individual tournament has attracted a large number of local players and it is expected all the members of the visiting teams will play.

A gallery has been erected above the courts at the Racquet Club which will seat a limited number of spectators. It is possible that a plan permitting one group of spectators to watch one set and then clearing the gallery to admit others to enable a greater number to see at least a part of the matches will be adopted.

COLUMBIA CAN BLDG. TO HOUSE AUTO SHOW

Ample Room for Exhibits—Dates, Feb. 16 to 23 Selected to Exhibit Passenger Cars, Trucks and Accessories.

The automobile trade of St. Louis is in jubilant mood. A building has been found which will accommodate in a wonderful way the seventeenth annual Automobile Show, from Feb. 16 to 23 inclusive. The contract for this building was closed last Monday after a search which had been made for three months by a committee of the association, consisting of Messrs. Joseph A. Schlecht, Phil H. Brockman, F. W. A. Vesper and H. F. Fahrenkrog. Not an unoccupied building was to be found in St. Louis of a character suitable for an Automobile Show, which requires not less than 150,000 square feet of exhibit space.

Monday it was discovered that the immense building of the Columbia Can Co., on the north side of Natural Bridge avenue, just east of Union boulevard, was not yet occupied. Negotiations were opened with the officers of the Columbia Can Co. through Samuel Igou of the Igou Motor Co. Yielding to a sense of civic duty, L. F. Westerbeck, president of that company, and his associates consented to postpone their occupancy of their new building for a month to permit its use for the seventeenth Automobile Show. The building extends 500 feet along Natural Bridge avenue by a depth of 150 feet, with an L on the east end, 115 feet by 150 feet.

A Show Committee has been appointed, consisting of Joseph A. Schlecht of the Mound City Automobile Co., Phil H. Brockman of the De Luxe Automobile Co., Samuel Igou of the Igou Motor Co., H. F. Fahrenkrog of the Kardell Motor Car Co., who is president of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, and Robert E. Lee, who has been manager of the Automobile Show for the past 17 years. This committee has announced its preliminary plans for the show. Two floors of the building will be used for the automobile exposition.

The committee has decided that accessory displays will be placed in the west half of the first floor and displays of commercial cars, trucks and trailers in the east of the first floor. All of the passenger cars will be grouped on the second floor, which contains about 70,000 square feet of space. The decision to have trucks displayed comes from an expressed desire of truck dealers of St. Louis to exhibit.

In the accessory department it is expected that there will be more individual displays than ever before at any St. Louis automobile show because of the ample room and the attractiveness of the first floor location.

Forty St. Louis automobile distributing firms will exhibit 62 lines of passenger motor cars. These will all be the very latest creations in the automobile world and inclusive of several of the newly announced lines. Among these will be the Chrysler, recently widely advertised and shown at the New York Automobile Show. The Rollin car, also just announced and shown first at the New York show, will be exhibited. The show will be inclusive of every make of automobile which is distributed at the St. Louis market.

The show will be opened at noon on Saturday, Feb. 16, and will continue until the following Saturday night, Feb. 23, midnight. Invitations will be mailed in a few days from the office of the show manager, Robert E. Lee, to 10,500 automobile and accessory dealers in the territory surrounding St. Louis to attend. The normal attendance of dealers is about 6000. Application has been made to the various passenger associations for reduced rates.

Show Manager Lee has already put to work a large body of men who are cleaning the building and immediately after that is finished the decorators will begin to embellish the great structure.

Outside the building for many blocks in every direction there is ample room for parking. It is estimated that 5000 automobiles can be parked within three blocks of the show building.

On the third floor of the building a restaurant will be conducted for the serving of meals for those who will spend most of the day at the show and for light refreshments and soft drinks.

Visitors to the show will be taken to the second floor passenger car display in two large elevators and will walk down at their leisure via three stairways. One-way traffic up and down will be the rule.

MANY SEE VELIE AT BENJAMIN SALESROOM

JEROME J. BENJAMIN, president of the Cole-Benjamin Motor Co., who last week announced the securing of Velie distribution in this territory in addition to the Cole, states that many visitors came to see the new Velies at his showroom during the past week. Several sales were made both of Velles and Coles. In addition to the cars, Benjamin is showing in his salesroom as a special attraction, a white-enameled cut-out Velie motor. A feature of this part of the exhibit is the way it illustrates the Velie force-feed system of lubrication. It also calls attention to the sturdy construction of the Velie power plant.

HAWKINS MOTOR CO. TO HANDLE THE GRAY

Milton L. Strauss of the Anderson-Strauss Co., distributers for the Gray car in the St. Louis trade territory, announced Saturday that the agency for St. Louis, East St. Louis and St. Louis County had been placed with the Hawkins Motor Co., now located at 3870 Washington boulevard.

Both the Anderson-Strauss Co. and the Hawkins Motor Co. will move to new quarters at 2907-09 Washington boulevard, the Anderson-Strauss Co. during the coming week, and the Hawkins Motor Co. about Feb. 15. The building on Washington is very spacious, has a large room in the rear for shop and parts and the salesroom in front has plenty of floor space to display the entire new Gray line wel.

The Gray for 1924 has been much improved. The wheelbase is four inches longer on all models and the bodies are now being built by one of the largest body-builders in the country, and have been greatly refined.

The lines are better and at the New York show, where the cars were exhibited for the first time they were one of the features. The power plant in the 1924 Gray is the same low-speed, low-compression engine that brought many economy records to Gray last year. Prices on the 1924 Gray range from $630 for the touring car to $875 for the sedan, all prices being F. O. B. Detroit.

FIRESTONE BRANCH TO SHOW BALLOON FILMS

A special, private showing of an interesting film on balloon tires will be given by the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. branch here in their salesroom at Compton and Locust on Tuesday evening, Jan. 22, at 8 p. m. According to W. G. Sabine, branch manager, this film is extremely attractive, among other things, giving slow-motion views of what happens when the occupants of a car are riding on balloon tires. Seventy-five St. Louis automobile dealers will receive special invitations to attend this special showing.

TELLS WHY DORT MOTOR PERFORMS SO WELL

H. C. Merry of the Wilson Motor Car Co., Dort distributers, and a close student of automobile engineering for 20 years, has just issued a statement concerning the operation of the Dort six-cylinder engine which is interesting.

"I have had so many people praise the beauty, roominess and luxury of the new Dort sixes," said Merry, "that I began to believe that the public was overlooking the fact that the Dort six motor was so fine a piece of mechanism. The average motorist doesn't seem to care to know much about the motor so long as it doesn't cause him any trouble.

"One of the foremost features of design contributing to the performance of the Dort six motor is its regulated full-pressure oiling system. A cushioning film of oil is supplied under pressure to all crankshaft, cam-shaft and rocker arm bearings, pressure regulated according to the load.

"Vibration means loss of power and undue wear. To prevent both of these results, all reciprocating parts of the Dort six motor have been designed as light in weight as the needs of strength permit. The connecting rod assemblies, which include the rod, piston, piston pin and rings, are held within ¼ ounce in weight in any one motor.

"The crankshaft is put in static and dynamic balance on the latest type precision balancing machine. It is mounted on the balancing machine on rollers and rotated at high speeds. The amount of run-out of any of the bearings is held within very close limits, insuring a very smooth-running motor throughout its speed range."

WRIGLEY PREDICTS GOOD 1924 BUSINESS

"I look for the year 1924 to be a world-beater in a business sense," says William Wrigley Jr., the world's largest chewing gum manufacturer.

Wrigley's business interests cover many other widely diversified lines, including office buildings and motor car manufacturing. He is a director of the Auburn Automobile Co., one of the oldest in the industry, the St. Louis distributors for which is the Mound City Auto Co.

"I don't expect politics to interfere with business and the advancement of our country's economic and industrial development," Wrigley declares. When a prominent newspaper (the Chicago American) sought opinions on the 1924 outlook from business leaders, Wrigley was one of the first to be interviewed.

NEW COMPANY NOW BUILDING CHRYSLER

Walter P. Chrysler's new motor car, the Chrysler six, is being built and distributed by a new motor car company, the Chrysler Motor Corporation, an associate of the older Maxwell Motor Corporation and Chalmers Motor Car Co.

Wholly new machinery, tools, dies, jigs, etc., necessary to build a motor car have been installed in the great plant of the Chalmers Motor Car Co., which has been completely re-equipped. Maxwell-Chalmers dealers throughout the country will handle the car, in St. Louis the Ward Motor Co. having been named as distributers.

Details of construction of the Chrysler reveal even more advanced innovations in design than were incorporated in the first statement of the car. They disclose more clearly that scientific applications of numerous fundamental engineering principles were contributed to it in ways not heretofore brought out.

"In this car," says Walter P. Chrysler, "have been combined ultimate beauty and smartness, economical light weight and operating qualities, ideal size for ease of operation and convenience in parking, extreme roominess and comfort, with material quality, performing ability, long life and road solidity. We hope, within the next three or four weeks, to produce sufficient cars so that the public, through demonstrations, can learn for itself exactly what I mean."

GARDNER DRAWS CROWD AT NEW YORK SHOW

Three closed cars, two open vehicles and a special gold chassis with many cutouts displaying inner working parts was exhibited by the Gardner Motor Co., Inc., of St. Louis, and aroused much interest among visitors to the recent New York automobile show, according to Walter H. Yeldell, sales manager of the company.

The open vehicles and the attractive gold chassis with its revelation of the Gardner engine and other mechanical units in operation reveal many refinements never before displayed at the show by this company. The fundamentals of design have not been changed. but the observant discovered many attractive refinements, especially in the bodies.

The Cost of a Car

is no measure of its value

These are the things to consider

THE cost of a car depends in large part on volume and efficiency. It is no criterion of value.

Studebaker builds 150,000 fine cars yearly. All of them are Sixes. The main costs are divided by that enormous output. Thus at prices of $975 and up we offer the utmost in quality. We offer maximum values.

Don't judge these cars by prices. Under other conditions they might cost twice as much, yet offer less than these.

Some major costs

Quality cars require costly facilities. Studebaker has $50,000,000 invested in modern plants and equipment. $8,000,000 in drop forge plants alone. $10,000,000 in body plants, to carry out the Studebaker standards.

There are 12,500 up-to-date machines employed to build these cars. Some are enormously expensive.

Few outputs justify such facilities. Then parts must be bought outside, and profits paid to others.

Studebaker engineering costs $500,000 per year. That to us is $3.33 per car.

Our Department of Research and Experiment employs 125 skilled men. It makes 500,000 tests per year to maintain our standards.

Our Bureau of Methods and Standards fixes the requirements for every part and detail. 12,000 inspections are necessary for each car to insure against flaws and mistakes. We employ 1,000 men to make them.

Cars like the Studebakers cannot be built without such facilities, such research, such care. Yet enormous output alone makes them possible at Studebaker prices.

The best we know

Studebakers represent the best we know. And with our army of engineers, with our wealth of experience, we probably know what is best.

We use 35 formulas for steels. Each is best suited to certain parts, as proved by years of tests.

On some steels we pay the makers a bonus of 15% to get them exactly right. There is no room to excel us there.

We machine the entire surface of each crank shaft, as was done on Liberty Airplane Motors. That extra cost is heavy. But thus we get that perfect balance, that absence of vibration.

We use more Timken bearings than any other car which costs under $5,600. They cost considerably more than ball bearings.

These facts apply to all Studebakers, of all styles and sizes. The materials used in all chasses are alike.

Beauty—Luxury—Finish

The Studebaker coach work has been famous for decades. No one can excel it.

The finish is produced by 26 operations, including 15 coats of paint and varnish.

Open cars have real leather cushions. They cost, over imitation leather, about $25 per car.

No closed cars could be more luxurious. That lining of Chase Mohair is made from the soft fleece of Angora goats. A velour lining would save about two-thirds that cost—up to $100 per car.

Note how every detail denotes infinite care. That, as you know, is expensive.

Note the completeness of our larger models. The nickel-plated bumpers, extra disc wheels with cord tires, a steel trunk, a courtesy light. These are rare extras, even on the costliest cars.

Nothing is stinted

Compare part by part with any rival cars. Studebaker will show you some scores of advantages.

Then consider Studebaker history. For 72 years this name has stood for quality. When people rode in carriages, Studebaker built the best. Now those same traditions are applied to motor cars alone.

Consider Studebaker records. Mark how these cars in service have multiplied demand, until people last year paid $200,000,000 for Studebaker cars.

Consider their service records. One Studebaker car, built in 1918, has run 475,000 miles. It is still in active service. It lately made a midwinter trip from Los Angeles to New York. That means 80 years of average service, of 6,000 miles per year.

What more can you dream of in a motor car than the Studebakers offer?

Just Go and See

Studebaker is today the leader in the fine-car field.

Studebaker builds more quality cars than any other concern in the world.

Buyers of fine cars last year spent over $200,000,000 for Studebaker models.

The demand for Studebakers has almost trebled in three years—as people found them out.

Then go see them. Compare them with any car you will. Don't spend $1,000 or over without knowing what Studebaker offers. You owe that to yourself.

FRENCH EXCHANGE SLUMP FEATURES MARKETS OF WEEK

Money Market Experiences Brief Reaction From Extreme Relaxation Which Followed the Release of Year End Funds.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—The Evening Post, in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Inconclusive fluctuations which reflected a settling down after the unusual movements occasioned by year-end influences have characterized the markets during the third week of January. With the reinvestment demand slackening slightly, aggressive strength naturally was less noticeable. Profit-taking appeared and as the previous strong advances has weakened technical positions, corrective reactions were in order. The declines in securities were, however, smaller and briefer than might have been expected. Support appeared and short sellers found themselves in a rather uncomfortable position. The money market also experienced a brief reaction from the extreme relaxation which followed the release of year-end funds. A transient tightening was sufficient, however, to attract back to New York sufficient funds to steady time and commercial paper rates at about 4¾ per cent and to make call money available at 4 per cent. The Federal Reserve statements meanwhile revealed an extraordinary contraction in the country's needs for credit and currency and showed that current ease is likely to persist.

Trend of Cotton.

"In the cotton market, however, something more than seasonal influences were at work. Liquidation appeared on a fairly large scale and the trade buying which had been coming in when reactions carried prices to about 33½ cents, failed to materialize. The result was a break which carried the May future down close to 32 cents, as tired longs let go. On the surface, the decline was due to the absence of spot demand, which usually is light at this season of the year, and the smallness of which is emphasized in the present instance by the curtailments of textile mills and by the uncertainties over the British cabinet and railway situations. Fundamentally, however, the present behavior of the cotton market is a perfectly natural and inevitable consequence of what has gone before. Exports during December were unusually heavy and the curtailment at domestic mills was smaller than had been expected. The statistical position was strengthened until it had to be weakened. Curtailment became inevitable unless there was to be a vacuum at the end of the cotton year—a condition which is unthinkable. Such corrective movements must proceed until an equilibrium is restored. This does not mean that cotton prices must fall to any certain figure, or, in fact, fall any farther. Readjustment already has been taking place. It does mean that cotton must be consumed at a lower rate and that the chief regulatory instrument is price.

"Excepting those trades which have suffered from the mild winter, the reports from industry are cheering. Automobile makers are encouraged by show results and are expanding production schedules. Building construction is going ahead at a high rate and promises to keep its particular branch of the steel industry busy for months ahead. Steel makers as a whole are expanding production. They are operating their plants at 75 per cent of capacity, and the Steel Corporation can now boast of an 85 per cent operation. The existing schedule of prices is being maintained and some small advances have occurred in both pig iron and certain of the steel products. The market appears to have turned slightly in the sellers' favor. There is no particular inclination to contract for long periods ahead, which is not surprising in view of the prompt service which the railroads now are furnishing. No great industrial speculative movement seems likely. The signs do point, however, to the development of a satisfying volume of business.

Slump in the Franc.

"Extreme demoralization in the market for French francs and striking weakness in certain of the other foreign exchanges featured the start of the week. The normal rallies from such overdone declines developed and in turn gave way to moderate recessions. Another increase in the Bank of France was, as might have been expected, of comparatively little influence. The real bullish factor on the franc was the French Government's declaration of its intention to strike at fundamentals by balancing its budget. Much has been made of the point that the "ordinary" French budget has been balanced. This is beside the point, however, as long as the "extraordinary" budget consisted chiefly of expenditures for pensions and interest charges on bonds already issued against reconstruction expenditures. When France balances her budget her currency will appropriately reflect the great strength of her national resources."

"Steadiness shown by stocks yesterday was even more pronounced in today's rather dull short session. A good undertone for the general list, pronounced strength in a number of specialties and public utility shares, such as Consolidated Gas and General Electric, and some further selling by professionals of market leaders, such as Baldwin, Studebaker and Pan-American Petroleum, tells the story of the first hour. In the second hour, however, an attack was launched on Cast Iron Pipe, which induced selling of certain other stocks. Nothing more than irregularity resulted, nevertheless, and the selling pressure on the main body of stocks at no time became pronounced. Announcement of a new stock issue by Phillipps Petroleum depressed the shares of that company, but the effect was offset by further advances in eastern and midcontinent grades of crude oil, and oils held firm. Railroad shares were neglected. Bonds were firm, with special activity in the Japanese issues, following news of the new loan.

Exchange Market Down.

"Foreign exchanges here were largely influenced by the London market where a weakish tone prevailed on continued political uncertainties, and the threatened railway strike in England. While the best quarters in London now doubt that the men actually will walk out, the situation nevertheless is disturbing, especially at this time when business is nervous over the possibility of a labor government. Actual business transacted on this side was small and the rates established were in effect an adjustment to the London market. Sterling lost a cent at $4.22 5-8, while French francs declined 11 points to 4.52 cents. Most of the other principal currencies moved in sympathy, though there were a few exceptions. Dutch guilders were firm as were Norwegian krone. Danish exchange, however, continued decidedly weak and Japanese yen folowing their recent recovery to 46.80 in response to news of a release of foreign gold balances reacted to 46.15.

BANK REPORTS INDICATE TRADE IMPROVING SOME

ecial Wireless Dispatch to the New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Arthur W. Kidy, editor of the Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in financial review today, says:

"The markets are benefiting temporarily by such contrasting factors the milk and watery utterances Labor's leader at a critical moent when he is seeking power, ound intrinsic conditions in the arkets, the rally in the franc and erling, and a natural reaction in eling on the part of those who pected the skies to fall on the e of the advent of a labor governent. The recovery may go further, t underlying anxieties are quite changed.

"It is generally expected that the Government will be defeated on onday.

"The underlying truth is that our litics are in a melting pot. eanwhile evolutions necessarily ill be accompanied by a prolonged riod of uncertainties detrimental financial activities.

Situation Is Complex.

"The situation is the more comex because definitely reassuring atements by the Labor Governent might greatly change the sitution, inasmuch as some factors are aking for better trade and business. ll annual banking statements indite that trade is improving slightly. oth deposits and loans are advancg. Conditions, however, are highly nsitive, either to favorable or unvorable influences.

"The bank rate here is not likely follow Continental movements, cause the situation is not of the nd where a higher bank rate ould help immediately. A further mplexity, however, is that logically the country with the highest vorable trade balance and largest ld supplies should be reducing its ate. Hence there is a tendency in me quarters to anticipate an early ecline in your Federal Reserve ate.

Favors Payments.

"It is believed that the reparation xperts committee already is making progress in its examination of erman affairs. It is argued here at any German currency stabilizaion scheme should include a plan r partially paying interest and deeming mortgage indebtedness in old. Otherwise German industries ill be still more able to compete ith those of the Allies on an unly favorable basis.

BANK REPORTS INDICATE TRADE IMPROVING SOME

Special Wireless Dispatch to the New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of the Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in financial review today, says:

"The markets are benefiting temporarily by such contrasting factors as the milk and watery utterances of Labor's leader at a critical moment when he is seeking power, sound intrinsic conditions in the markets, the rally in the franc and sterling, and a natural reaction in feeling on the part of those who expected the skies to fall on the eve of the advent of a labor government. The recovery may go further, but underlying anxieties are quite unchanged.

"It is generally expected that the Government will be defeated on Monday.

"The underlying truth is that our politics are in a melting pot. Meanwhile evolutions necessarily will be accompanied by a prolonged period of uncertainties detrimental to financial activities.

Situation Is Complex.

"The situation is the more complex because definitely reassuring statements by the Labor Government might greatly change the situation, inasmuch as some factors are making for better trade and business. All annual banking statements indicate that trade is improving slightly. Both deposits and loans are advancing. Conditions, however, are highly sensitive, either to favorable or unfavorable influences.

"The bank rate here is not likely to follow Continental movements, because the situation is not of the kind where a higher bank rate would help immediately. A further complexity, however, is that logically the country with the highest favorable trade balance and largest gold supplies should be reducing its rate. Hence there is a tendency in some quarters to anticipate an early decline in your Federal Reserve rate.

Favors Payments.

"It is believed that the reparation experts committee already is making progress in its examination of German affairs. It is argued here that any German currency stabilization schemes should include a plan for partially paying interest and redeeming mortgage indebtedness in gold. Otherwise German industries will be still more able to compete with those of the Allies on an unduly favorable basis.

The Oklahoma City, Shawnee Interurban Railway will take over 38 miles of the line from Oklahoma City to Shawnee, and will issue $800,000 in first mortgage bonds and $800,000 in capital stock. The balance of the line, running from Shawnee to North Colgate, a distance of 77 miles, will go to the Oklahoma City-Ada-Atoka Railway, which will issue $1,600,000 in securities, half bonds and half stock.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—The Phillips Petroleum Co. today offered its common stockholders 296,106 shares of additional common stock at $30 a share in the ratio of one new share for each four shares now owned. President Phillips, in a letter to stockholders, explained that the offering was made in order that the company may largely liquidate its current indebtedness, including all bank loans, and improve its general position.

New York Bond Market.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19. — Bond prices moved within narrow limits in today's dealings, with railroad issues extending their losses under the pressure of profit-taking. St. Paul four of 1925, which made marked gains earlier in the week, yielded more than a point, and weakness developed in Northwestern 3½s and New York Central-Lake Shore 3½s. Seaboard, Missouri Pacific and Reading issues held firm. An advance of a point in Gray & Davis 7s provided the only feature in the industrial list. Trading was light in United States Government and Treasury issues, prices remaining virtually unchanged.

Crude Oil Price Advanced.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 19.—Crude oil prices were advanced at the opening of the market today as follows:

TULSA, Ok., Jan. 19.—The Prairie Oil and Gas Co. today posted new prices for crude oil in the mid-continent field, including Oklahoma, Kansas and North Texas. The prices represent increases of from 15 to 25 cents, and make the new prices from $1.15 to $1.75.

BARTLESVILLE, Ok., Jan. 19.—The increase in the price of crude oil announced today brings the total advance in some grades in the last 30 days to more than 50 per cent. The Empire Oil Co., with headquarters here, met the new Prairie price at once.

DALLAS, Tex., Jan. 19.—An advance of 15c to 25c per barrel for Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas crude oil was posted today by the Magnolia Petroleum Co. New prices are: Under 28 gravity, 75c per barrel; 28 to 30 gravity, $1; 31 to 32.9, $1.15; 33 to 35.9, $1.40; 36 to 38.9, $1.60; 39 and above, $1.75; Corsicana heavy, 75c.

The raw silk market was quiet in Yokohama, but unsettled here, with prices for Japanese products showing advances ranging from 20c to 25c on some grades and other grades not quoted.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review today, says:

"The foreign exchange market was unsettled to a condition approaching demoralization at intervals during the week, some of the leading exchanges showing a virtual collapse on Monday, when a number were established at the lowest prices in the history. French exchange was without a nearby market on that day, when checks on Paris sold as low as $4.27 and sterling made a new low for over a year on the decline to $4.22½ for demand. This situation especially in French exchange, was attributed to the political and financial tangle in which that country has become involved as the result of the complications resulting from occupation of the Ruhr and failure to reach an agreement on the question of German reparations. This situation naturally called for hurried support, and what was regarded as Government buying started an upturn on which [illegible] checks rose as high as $4.75 on Wednesday, only to recede again on the following days. Sterling rallied about 4 cents from its low level, a good part of the strength coming not only from Government support, but from the purchase of £1,000,000 or more by importers for transmission of balances to London.

"Belgian exchange sold at the new low record of 3.98 and sharp declines were sustained in other continental rates in the first part of the week. Weakness in this market on the various days was preceded by heavy declines in London and Paris, the trading on the other side being reported as in very large volume. Speculation must have entered into the situation to a considerable degree, as houses with Stock Exchange connections were among the heaviest sellers of French exchange and toward the end of the week the same houses appeared as bidders for large blocks.

"Japanese exchange, after pronounced weakness in the first few days, when yen sold as low as 43.10, had an abrupt change in connection with announcement of an intention on the part of the Japanese Government to release part of its gold reserve and on the statements published yesterday of arrangements for placing a new low. On these developments yen made a quick advance to 46.80.

"South American rates were weak for a time, but rallied from their low levels with the exception of Uruguay, which was down over 5 cents from its high of the week. Canadian developed strength, ranging from $97.26 to 97.87.

"Foreign exchanges here were largely influenced by the London market, where a weakish tone prevailed on continued political uncertainties, and the threatened railway strike in England. While the best quarters in London now doubt that the men actually will walk out, the situation nevertheless is disturbing, especially at this time, when business is nervous over the possibility of a Labor Government. Actual business transacted on this side was small and the rates established were in effect an adjustment to the London market. Sterling lost a cent at $4.23⅝, while French francs declined 11 points to 4.52 cents. Most of the other principal currencies moved in sympathy, though there were a few exceptions. Dutch guilders were firm, as were Norwegian krone. Danish exchange however, continued decidedly weak and Japanese yn, following their recent recovery to 46.80 in response to news of a release of foreign gold balances, reacted to 46.15.

Trading in raw sugar futures was of an evening up character and prices moved within a very narrow range. Final prices were 2 points higher on January and unchanged on later months. January, 4.95c; March, 4.75c; May, 4.83c; July, 4.89c.

The demand for refined sugar continued of fair proportions at unchanged prices, which ranged from 8.25c to 8.60 for fine granulated. Refined futures nominal.

GRAIN LIST LOWER ON LOCAL MARKET

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Jan. 19.—Grain futures closed lower on the local market. Talk of prospective liberal wheat shipments from Argentina and attention given Canadian wheat stocks were included in events of day. There was report locally of 100,000 bushels of corn being bought in country.

In the local cash grain market Saturday soft wheat of milling qualities met a good demand on decline of 1c. Local mills and mill order buyers took sound No. 3 and better grades. Only a few cars of hard wheat were offered and demand was slack. Prices were nominally 1c lower. There was sale of car of Iowa No. 2 hard 11.74 per cent dry gluten at $1.10. It was reported that Western No. 2 hard 12½ per cent protein was offered to arrive at from 8½c to 10c over Kansas City May, freight to add. Corn offerings were cleaned up under good general demand at prices ranging from barely steady to 1½@2c lower. The local trade and shippers were best buyers of oats at ½c under previous day. Some was carried over.

GRAIN FUTURES CLOSE LOWER IN CHICAGO MARKET

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—Wheat had a setback at the start today under pressure from Northwest houses. On the break, support developed after Eastern houses had picked up the surplus offerings. The Eastern buying was believed to be against export sales. It was not of any great volume, but it was sufficient to relieve the market of pressure. A further decline in foreign exchange had a depressing effect on exporters. A further snowfall was reported over many parts of the winter wheat belt. Local shippers reported an improved inquiry from outside mills for cash wheat. Primary receipts were light. Wheat closed ⅛@¼c lower. May $1.08⅛@1.08¼, uJly $1.06¾, September $1.05¾.

Corn acted stubborn in the late trading. There was liquidation and stop-loss selling at the start and later local bears sold. At 78c for May some of the local professional that unloaded long corn late yesterday and early today supported the market. The cash situation is weakening. New England was offering to resell corn that they bought in the Northwest to Chicago shippers at 1½c under a Chicago basis. One shipper bought back 25,000 bushels of corn from New England at a profit. Country offerings were light, but receipts were much heavier today. Corn closed ¼@⅜c lower. May 78⅛@78¼c, July 78⅞@79c, September 79⅞@80c.

Oats were easier with other grains. Trade was not particularly active. Oats closed ¼@⅜c lower. May 46⅞@47c, July 44¾@44⅞c, September 43¼c.

Provisions were easier. There was a little hedging pressure, while support was lacking. Lard closed 15@20c lower, and ribs 5@7½c lower.

HOGS LOWER, CATTLE HIGHER FOR WEEK

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle and calves	18,778	22,273	22,576
Hogs	114,289	110,235	90,427
Sheep	5,905	6,614	6,833
Horses and Mules	3,866	3,703	5,204
Totals	142,838	142,825	125,040

Hogs closed lower, lambs and most cattle higher, and sheep steady for the week at the St. Louis National Stockyards. Combined recipts were of moderate volume. The gain in beef steers for the period was 25c. A spread of $7 to $9 per cwt covered the major part of the transactions. Several good weighty droves scored $10 and the top was $10.60, awarded Thursday for a car of yearlings. Light steers and heifers were of slow sale practically throughout the week, and values averaged barely steady on the finish. Some desirable droves cashed around $8 and $9, followed by plainer consignments at $3 to $7 mainly. While the better grades of beef cows ended about steady for the period, plainer offerings, including canners and cutters, were 25c higher. The range in butcher cows was $3.50 to $7, while the bulk brought $3.75 to $5. Cutter cows on the close were valued at $2.75 to $3.50, and canner cows at $2.25 to $2.75. Bulls started the week steady, but finished 25c lower. Beef animals carrying weight were most numerous at $5 to $6, followed by bolognas at $3.75 to $5 and canners in the $3 column. Stocker and feeder steers, in light supply and moderate demand, moved up 25c for the period. A considerable part of the run brought $4.25 to $6.50. Top was $7.25 and common grades, on the other hand, graduated down to $3. From a $12.50 to $13 basis Monday, best light veal calves descended to a $11 to $11.50 level Tuesday and Wednesday. A slight rise placed closing quotations at $11.50 to $12.

Hog Offerings Heavy.

Heavy offerings of swine featured the week's trade, with the total for the six-day period at 114,289 head, compared with 110,235 for the previous week and a run of 90,427 for the corresponding period a year ago. Quality has been good as a rule, although the number of pigs received was generous. Breaking markets ruled during the greater part of the week, with sales closing sharply off. Monday and Tuesday found prices dropping under generous receipts, while Wednesday witnessed a rally which failed toward the latter part of the day. The tendency from then on was downward, with sales for the week closing 25c to 30c lower on butcher weights from 190 to 250 lbs., these weights clearing generally in a spread of $7.20 to $7.25. Lighter kinds are also lower, with sales from $7.10 to $7.20 on the 160 to 180 lb. averages, showing a decline of 30c to 35c from a week ago. Pigs are also sharply lower for the week, with sales ranging from 35c to 50c off. Strong-weight kinds are exhibiting the least loss, with 130 to 150 lb. pigs at the end of the week clearing from $6.50 to $7. The medium-weight kinds are a flat 50c off, with sales ranging from $6 to $6.50 mainly. Light pigs and peewees at $5 to $6 are also 50c lower. Trading has been generally unsatisfactory on the pig classes throughout the week, orders being somewhat scarce for these offerings. Packer sows, in common with other classes of swine, are closing off for the week, with sales ranging from 15c to 25c lower. Stags close about steady for the week, with offerings ranging from $4 to $4.50, according to the weight and quality displayed by the offerings. The week's close finds different classes of hogs selling at the following prices: Good butcher hogs averaging from 190 to 250 lbs. at $7.20 to $7.30; light hogs and shipping grades from 160 to 180 lbs. at $7.10 to $7.20; strong-weight pigs averaging from 130 to 150 lbs. at $6.50 to $7, with medium-weight kinds from 110 to 130 lbs. at $6 to $6.50, and light pigs and peewees from 110 lbs. and down at $5 to $6. Packer sows at $6.25 mainly, and stags at $4 to $4.50.

Sheep Receipts Modest.

For the past week, sheep and lamb receipts were modest, the total offering being 5905 head, compared with 6614 for the previous week and 6833 for the corresponding period a year ago. Quality has been running rather plain recently with a large percentage of half fat and Southwestern lambs included in the receipts. For these classes the demand was slack with salesmen finding it difficult to obtain anything like satisfactory action. In fact some of the offerings sold little better than cull lambs. Buyers, however, were keen for the best grades, these classes showing an advance in price of 25c over the previous week's close. Good to choice offerings of lambs are quotable at $13.25 to $13.75, with the medium to good grades selling generally at $12.75 to $13.25. Plain to medium quality kinds are quotable at $12.25 to $12.75 and the cull offerings are clearing largely in a range of $8 to $10, some offerings higher according to weight and quality. Thin lambs of very common quality, known as skips, are quotable at $3 to $6. The demand for mutton ewes has slacked up somewhat, although prices show no material change from a week ago. This class of sheep has been arriving in fair numbers during the past week and enabled buyers to fill most of their orders. Good to choice quality, light fat ewes are quotable at $6.50 to $7.50, with the medium to good quality kinds selling from $5.50 to $6.50 largely. Plain to medium grades are quotable at $4.50 to $5.50. Choppers and buck sheep close steady with sales ranging from $2.50 to $3.50 mainly. Canners are also steady with offerings ranging in price from $1 to $2, according to weight and quality displayed.

Horses and Mules.

Horse and mule receipts were of generous volume the past week, combined arrivals aggregating 4000 head, of which about 2000 were on commission. There were more than three times as many mules as horses included in the receipts. A strong, active demand featured the trade in horses, and both Southern and Eastern classes were on the improved basis. It was only on the leggy, light-bellied stuff that any difficulty of movement was encountered. Mules, though not as active as horses, held to a generally steady level. The fat, good-haired offerings moved quite freely, although it took time to move the cold-haired, green stuff. Offerings, in liberal volume, sold on the alleys and at auctions.

COTTON IS IRREGULAR ON NEW YORK MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Early declines were followed by advances in the cotton market today, with March contracts selling up from 32.80c to 33.38c, or 42 points net higher. March closed at 33.15c, with [illegible] unchanged to 23 points higher. [illegible] were generally 14 to 13 points above [illegible].

The market opened steady at advances of 12 to 16 points on relatively firm cables and overnight covering orders. This initial bulge met a renewal of liquidation, while there was also some Southern and local selling which appeared to be inspired by rumors of full private ginning returns, reports of mill curtailment in Canada and complaints of difficulty in selling cotton goods at prevailing prices in the domestic markets.

Offerings, however, were much lighter than they were earlier in the week and after showing net losses of about 16 to 20 points on the more active positions, prices turned upward on covering. According to local brokers, the market looked as if it had been pretty well sold out earlier in the week, and covering was stimulated during the middle of the morning by private reports from Liverpool indicating that labor [illegible] English railroads would probably be avoided. May advanced from 33c to 33.37c and July from 31.98c to $32.53c. At these prices the market showed net gains of 30 to 42 points, and the close was well off from the best on most months as a result of realizing for over the week-end. It was rumored that private returns pointed to a ginning of 9,906,000 bales to Jan. 16. This seemed to make rather a bearish imposition on sentiment early, but was later commented upon as about in line with the Government's crop estimate of 10,081,000 bales.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 86,385 bales, against 96,735 last year. Fall River sales of print cloths for the week were estimated at 50,000 pieces.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Spot, quiet; middling, 33.35c.

New Orleans Spot.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 19.—Spot cotton quiet, 13 points higher; sales on the spot, 178; to arrive, 100; low middling, 31.38c; middling, 33.38c; good middling, 34.50c. Receipts, 4258; stock, 228,343.

WILL KEEPS FEELING AGAINST CHURCH ALIVE

Alton Woman, 84, Specified Home Should Never Be Sold to Congregation Next Door.

In death as in life, the late Mrs. Lois Caroline Swift, 84 years old, of Alton, is continuing her resentment against the Upper Alton Presbyterian Church, adjoining her homestead, because of the church's efforts to buy her property. Her will, filed for probate at Edwardsville yesterday, left the house and lot to a grandson, Henry Hoyt Cox, of Chicago, with the provision that it "shall not be sold by him or his heirs to the Presbyterian sect or congregation."

Mrs. Swift died at Alton about a week ago. To trace the cause of her antipathy it is necessary to go back in community history to about 1832, before people began to realize that St. Louis, not Alton, was to be the metropolis of this region.

Early History of the Church.

Enoch Long, an elder of the Presbyterian faith in those days, was instrumental in forming a union congregation of Presbyterians and Congregationalists, and deeded to the new organization a lot on College avenue, Upper Alton, now in the City of Alton. He provided in the deed that the members of the two sects should treat each other fairly in all matters, and that if one sect withdrew from the union the other should lose title to the property.

Incidentally, Elijah P. Lovejoy, Alton editor, who was killed by a mob in 1836 because he favored abolition of slavery, thereby gaining posthumous fame, was acting pastor of the congregation for a time.

After some years passed the Congregationalists withdrew from the union, but the Presbyterians were not forced to give up their location. Still later, Mrs. Swift's husband, who is dead, bought the lot next door to the church, at 2618 College avenue. Swift, whose given name was Harry, was a civil engineer and formerly city engineer of Alton. A question as to supposed "overlapping" of the two lots—church and home—as described in the records, arose.

Obtained Quit-Claim Deed.

The Swifts, it is understood, obtained a quit-claim deed to the church lot from the heirs of Elder Enoch Long, but never asserted their purported right to claim the ground. As a way out of the difficulty the congregation offered to buy the Swift's place but met with indignant refusals. Of late the church members have thought they could make the purchase after Mrs. Swift's death. Evidently she got wind of that idea and did her best to forestall it in her will, which was made Nov. 17 last.

The church is flourishing and has considered enlarging its building if it got the extra ground. As an immediate step to straighten out matters the church has filed suit in City Court at Alton to quiet title to its own lot. It is suggested at Edwardsville that the Swift lot could be bought by the church if the heir to it would agree to sell first to a third party, which apparently would not violate the letter of the will.

That document set forth no reason for Mrs. Swift's action. Her friends said that she was of a religious turn of mind, and it is said at Alton that her antipathy did not result from a dislike of Presbyterians as a sect. It is a provision of the legacy to her grandson that her daughter, Mrs. Harriet Guillet, now about 60 years old, be allowed to continue living there as long as she wants. Mrs. Guillet says she expects to spend the rest of her days there, and she shares her mother's feelings about the church.

An inventory filed with the will values the property at $4000 and values Mrs. Swift's personalty at $150. Her personalty she willed to other grandchildren, as follows: Feather bed, silver teaspoon and $1 to Bowman Cox of Chicago; $1 and a comforter to Maurice Cox of Chicago; $1, six spoons and a bedspread to Mrs. Irene Cox Peck, and the residue to Eugene Cox, a theater decorator, of St. Louis.

CABANNE'S MOVIE MANAGER ARRESTED IN NEW YORK CITY

Effort to Be Made to Bring Him West on Check Charges Made in Kansas City.

Alexander Beyfuss, manager for William Christy Cabanne, the movie producer who tried to start a St. Louis movie firm last year, has been arrested in New York City for the Kansas City police in connection with charges that he passed $19,850 in bad checks of the "William Christy Cabanne Special Productions" in Kansas City last year. Gov. Hyde has issued a requisition for his return to Missouri.

A Kansas City detective is in New York to bring Beyfuss back if extradition is granted by New York State authorities. Beyfuss obtained bail after his arrest and is to have a hearing in New York Tuesday.

Efforts of a Post-Dispatch correspondent to reach Beyfuss for a statement have been unsuccessful. An account of the charges against him was published last Thursday.

WASHINGTON COULD NOT BE ELECTED TODAY, HEAD OF BAR ASSOCIATION SAYS

He Would Be Barred by Antisaloon League, Blue Law Forces, Blocs and Demagogues From Any Place at Constitutional Convention, Saner Declares.

Robert E. Lee Saner.

This Country, Founded as Republic, but Not as Democracy, in Danger From Moral Lilliputians' Efforts to Alter the Constitution Selfishly, He Holds.

By SAMUEL D. McCOY,

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.

HE lives in Texas. His name is Robert E. Lee Saner. The 20,000 lawyers who belong to the American Bar Association apparently think his last name fits him, for they elected him their president.

Saner visited New York recently. Just before his arrival he had been making addresses on the Constitution. When he got to New York he was asked what sort of men might be chosen today to sit in a constitution-making convention, supposing we had that to do all over again.

"I can tell you who could not be elected to such a convention," said Saner. "The giants who took part in the convention which drafted the Constitution 135 years ago. They would be ruled out today."

"Why?"

"Because it would be impossible under the present dispensation to elect them. A representative of the Antisaloon League would immediately send out a questionnaire asking George Washington and John Marshall if they ever in all their lives took a drink, and a representative of the Blue Sunday League would interrogate Benjamin Franklin as to whether he ever flew his kite on Sunday in Philadelphia."

"Do you mean to say that even such great statesmen as those would be treated in that way if they were alive today?"

Moral Lilliputians.

"I mean that this is the age of the moral and political Lilliputians, and the land of Lilliput, instead of producing Gullivers, shackles them by the overwhelming numbers of its mediocrity and mendacity."

"You are not satisfied, then, with American citizenship as it is today?"

"No. We have wandered far in the past 10 or 15 years from the ideals and conceptions of the Fathers as to constitutional government."

"Is this a critical period?"

"It is certainly one which calls for serious thought by every American citizen. Wherever a railroad crosses a highway there is a sign which reads, 'Stop—Look—Listen.' Momentous changes have arisen out of the World War. There are three tendencies today which are as dangerous to the American people as an express train is to a man who stands in front of it. We ought to listen—now, at once, before it is too late—to the real voice of the great American people."

"What is that voice? Where can it be found?"

"In the Constitution of the United States. It represents the landmark toward which all previous efforts for a larger freedom and a better government have converged, and from which all our subsequent history developed. Here and now I plead that it shall not be removed."

Not Founded as Democracy.

"Is there any danger of it being removed?"

"It is threatened."

"In what way?"

"By democracy. We hear much these days about 'making the world safe for democracy,' about 'representative democracy,' about 'the democracy of the American nation.' To those who have studied the history of the Constitution, it is needless to say that never in the wildest debates that preceded its adoption did its founders dream of establishing on this continent a democracy or a democratic form of government."

"They did not? Then what was their purpose, and what did they actually establish?"

"The thought and purpose of those great men was to establish a republic, and a republic was established."

"There is a difference, then?"

"There is as much difference between a republic and a democracy as there is between day and night."

"What prompted the formation of a republic in preference to a democracy?"

"The men who made the Constitution wisely foresaw that with its diversity in population and with the possibility of its unparalleled extension geographically this nation would not find the theory of pure democracy either a safe or a suitable form of government. They, therefore, ordained that the only form of government, on the one hand to safely swerve from tyranny, on the other hand from mobocracy, should be one in which the people, not as individuals, but through their representatives, chosen for their wisdom, knowledge, sincerity and patriotism, should control that Government."

Age of Quackery.

"And has not their decision been respected by the American people?"

"It was not until this present generation that the visionaries, the doctrinaires and the demagogues became an established institution in our national life and evolved a new theory of government for the American people."

"And what is that theory?"

"The theory that change—rapid, unconsidered change—means improvement. At the present time, in the various Legislatures and in Congress there are no less than 80 different proposals for amendments to the Constitution of the United States!"

"Is that a great many, an unusual number?"

"You have only to remember that between 1789 and 1909 only three amendments were adopted."

"What is the reason for all these suggestions for changes?"

"The reason is that this is the age of political quacks and political quackery. Any ambitious politician who desires to attract the attention of the discontented, to appeal to the resentment of the failures and to flatter the sinister ambitions of men and women who desire above all other things to see the American form of Government and the American Constitution overthrown immediately, bases his candidacy and erects his platform on the proposition of adding one or more amendments to the Constitution of the United States for the purpose of momentarily riding into office through this appeal made to these elements of discontent.

"Paternalism Runs Mad."

"Not only is Constitution-tinkering the leading outdoor and indoor sport with the typical politician today, but, hand in hand with it, goes the steadily increasing encroachment of the Federal Government upon the rights of the commonwealths and the individuals who are citizens of those commonwealths. Paternalism in this country today runs mad.

"We are no longer a united, homogenous people. We no longer legislate and plan for the benefit of the American people as a whole nation. We are now confronted by 'blocks,' which are always engaged in their sinister kindling of the flames of class consciousness, and the attempts by ambitious and weasel-minded demagogues to divide the citizens of this nation against themselves.

"We have the uplifters' bloc, the farm bloc, the militant-feminist bloc, the labor bloc, the dry bloc and so on without end. Each of them combines a self-seeking minority under the marshalship of highly paid professional bulldozers and reformers.

"Organized Clamor Rules."

"Now, if the Constitution creates so perfect a Government as we who love it contend, how is it possible for this situation to exist? Our Government emanates from the people. The people made it and its immortal continuity rests in the people. The legislative and executive powers are vested in representatives of the people, chosen by the people. It is manifestly impossible for these representatives to know what the thousands of people who elect them desire. All that reaches their ears is the clamor of propaganda.

"Organized clamor rules today. Any minority, well organized, may overcome, by telegrams and letters and petitions and personal appeal, overcome the manifest good of the people when that good is backed by a majority that is dormant."

"Is that fact—that most American citizens are asleep, so far as governing themselves is concerned—at the bottom of all these ills and dangers you have described?"

"That's the whole explanation."

"And how can matters be improved?"

"The restoration of good government reposes in the reviving of a sense of personal responsibility to the Government. This spirit must be awakened. There can be no return to the wisdom of the great men who founded this republic until every citizen shall recognize his duty to his country as being above the demands of any party, bloc or clique which he may have been induced to join."

"Are none of these organized groups, these blocs, serving good purpose?"

"Well, one asks the Government to take over the transportation of the country; another asks that it be given a subsidy from the Treasury; a third demands a guaranteed loan at a lower rate of interest than anyone else can get; the fanatic asks that the morals of this entire nation be placed in the hands of a bureau in the city of Washington, and the bigot asks that the tastes, efforts, habits, thoughts and emotions of his neighbor be standardized and controlled by law.

Need of "Intelligent Bloc."

"What we need in this country today is just one more bloc—and that is an intelligent bloc that will combine the average ordinary American citizen, irrespective of his environment, his past political affiliations and his party prejudices, into a voting mass that must sooner or later rebuke and destroy the present tendency toward bloc legislation, if this nation is to survive."

"These tendencies are seriously undermining the American system of Government?"

"Seriously? Why, the centrifugal force of our system is weakened, the centrepetal force increased and the spheres are revolving inward on their orbits. It is passing strange, and sad to relate, that there are strong men who rejoice in this unbalancing and deliberately contend that the center is the true repository of power and source of privilege—men who, if they were charged with the care of the solar system, would shred the planets into the sun, and, exulting in the sudden splendor, little reck that they had kindled the conflagration that presages universal night!

"It is time to call a halt; it is time to get back to the fundamentals, back to the real sources of our strength, back to the republic that, under the Constitution, the Fathers so wisely conceived and so successfully instituted, back to the government of the whole people by the whole people, for the whole people.

"Our American republic has lived until this good hour because

France Accused by Lloyd George of Trying to Exasperate Germany Into Starting a Greater War

LONDON, Jan. 19.

IF the object of statesmanship be to convert Europe into a shambles within the lifetime of this generation, then Quai d'Orsay is on the right tack. Under the Poincare regime, French policy has set itself assiduously to the task of exasperating an exhausted but still formidable people of 70,000,000 by arrogance, insult and stinging oppression.

The special correspondent of the Times has revealed something, but by no means all, of the methods of the French military occupation in Germany. No self-respecting people could possibly tolerate what is happening in the occupied areas without banking up their resentment for future action. The black troops—the kind of accommodation which decent German citizens are forced to provide for them—subsidizing and protecting by the French of the movement for tearing the Rhineland from the fatherland—the holding down of Germany by French troops whilst she was defending herself against mutilation—deportation of tens of thousands from their homes in the Ruhr—negotiations with great industrial magnates of terms which can only be carried out by increasing hours of labor and diminishing wages of workmen—abuse of powers given by the treaty of Versailles on the Saar in order to maneuver permanent annexation—all done with the thousand petty insolences that military men in the ascendant naturally indulge in. A people who will bear all this tamely are not the kind that would hold an armed world at bay for four years and surrender then only when their children were starving. Let us own the truth about a brave foe whom we have vanquished.

All Central Europe Endangered

As if to make sure that the explosion, when it bursts, shall spread over the whole continent, special measures are being taken to arm, equip and train huge armies throughout Central Europe and to effect military understandings for striking together when the hour arrives. All these armies tend to become provocative and oppressive to disarmed neighbors and may well induce conflicts with more powerful neighbors. Great armies were directly responsible for the great war. There are greater armies in the aggregate being raised and organized today, and they may well plunge the world into a greater war. And they will do so unless something or somebody intervenes. The tramp of armed men and the rattle of artillery have an intoxicating effect upon the nations. There is no wine that turns the head as completely as the military swagger. We know from experience what a danger to peace one nation with a swelled head can become. What will happen when several nations are so affected? Poor Europe!

Central Europe has always been a volcanic region. One had hoped that after the terrible eruption of 1914 the volcanic fires would have been so exhausted that they could not break through the crust of good sense for at least a generation—if ever again. But the French will not leave them alone. They are working with diabolical ingenuity to break down the crust and bring us once more face to face with these hidden fires. If this goes on, they will once more flame up with consuming fury. I hate having to revert so often to this topic. I only do so because I am convinced of the danger to civilization which is involved in the reckless policy pursued recently by French statesmen. Unless means are taken to arrest it in time, an overwhelming catastrophe to mankind is inevitable.

The aggressive policy pursued by the French ministry is as cowardly as it is foolish. Trampling on a fallen foe is as contemptible an act as a man can commit. It does not make it any less despicable that the fall was not compassed by the trampler's own prowess but by the active help of others, whose combined efforts at last succeeded in tripping up the foe and pinning him to the ground. When he lies prostrate, securely legged and roped, the kicking of him begins. It is a poor sport and it is very foolish.

These former foes will not be roped forever. One way or another, the vanquished nation will arise infuriated with the base treatment, and France will then discover how her behavior in victory has disgusted all the friends who stood by her in her trouble before. French statesmen realize this since the new military combinations, which are being organized elsewhere. France, who cannot afford to honor her obligations to Britain and the United States of America, can find plenty of money to equip European nations with destructive weapons, to intimidate—and when called upon to tear—their neighbors. She cannot afford to pay interest upon these debts, so the burdened taxpayers of Britain and America must continue to do so whilst she is utilizing her resources in militarizing Europe. What does she hope to gain by this policy?

New Alignment of Powers

Instead of Russia, the British Empire, Italy and the United States of America, next time there will be by her side Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Jugo-Slavia and Rumania! That is the calculation. What statesmanship! If war came again between France and Germany, one word from Russia would neutralize three out of four of these new allies. And even if Russia were mute, no Polish, Czecho-Slovakian or Rumanian statesman would commit their armies to an invasion of Germany with the knowledge that a redoubtable Russian army stood on the other side of vulnerable frontiers. Russia wants Bessarabia and Rumania does not want to part with it. Poland has Vilna and Galicia and her slice of White Russia to think about. Russia is not too pleased about these territories being in Polish hands. What would happen if Poland marched her armies into Germany at the request of the French General Staff? There would be a smaller Poland for the remnant of these armies to return to. And as for Czecho-Slovakia, the Czechs are wedged between 3,000,000 Germans inside their own frontiers on the west and 7,000,000 hostile Magyars on their southern frontier. Under these circumstances, I cannot see a prudent Minister entangling an army corps of Czecho-Slovakia in the mountains of Bavaria on a French quarrel. Mr. Benes (the Foreign Minister of Czecho-Slovakia) may negotiate protocols in the hospitable atmosphere of Paris. He is a fussy little man, who trots about Europe—to adopt a Gilbertian phrase—"running little errands for French Ministers of State." But the Czechs are a hardened, practical race and very few of them have lived in Paris and inhaled its incense into their systems. They have struggled hard to win back the national freedom they lost centuries ago. They have secured it largely by luck. I predict that when the time comes they will not risk that precious good fortune by engaging their national existence in a quarrel between France and Germany, provoked entirely by French politicians anxious to pose as heroes before their own public.

France's New Friendships

It is the supreme interest of the Czechs, having regard to the geographical position of Bohemia and its internal racial conditions, to be on terms of amity with her neighbors. It does not suit their interests to become mere jackals of the French lion. When the German rhinoceros recovers his strength, the jackals may be trampled in the coming struggle. For these reasons, these military conventions will break down if ever the time comes for relying upon them. French statesmen will then find that they have recklessly thrown away friendships that proved steadfast in days of trial and got nothing in return but shadows that shrink before the fires of war. By the aid of those friendships France has been emancipated from the constant terror that darkened her outlook for over 40 years; she has recovered her lost provinces, added hundreds of thousands of square miles to her colonial possessions and become the most powerful military power in Europe. No French statesman in his most radiant dreams ever had such a vision of triumph. The Poles, the Czecho-Slovaks, the Slavs of Southern Austria and the Rumanians of Western Austria have, by the same means and without much effort or sacrifice on their own part, recovered their national rights.

Are all these dazzling gains to be thrown away because there is not enough wisdom amongst the men who guide the affairs of Europe to restrain greed, ambition and insatiable vanity—national as well as personal? That is the question of the hour.

Dawes Should Institute International Vulture Hunt, Maximilian Harden Says

Declares Certain German Leaders Perverted Meaning of General's Speech, Thereby Adding to His Burden.

By MAXIMILIAN HARDEN
The Noted German Publicist.
Special Cable Dispatch, Copyright, 1924.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.

THE name of Gen. Dawes has become more popular in Germany overnight than "Rough Rider Teddy's" name ever was.

Col. Roosevelt appeared to many persons during his visit here, as a more powerful and a more honest Wilhelm, but Germany has no types like Gen. Dawes. A German president of an experts' commission would have made a solemn and tiresome speech, recapitulating the whole history of money since paper notes were first printed and would have closed the speech, after a plethora of figures and statistical data, with assurance of his sense of duty and unswerving justice.

The General does it differently. He declares it is no time for speeches. Two expressions in his remarks stand out: "Rubbish" and "carrion vultures." For him rubbish includes nearly everything that has heretofore busied the Reparations Commission, and vultures are demagogic nationalists whose wild shrieking fills all lands with lies.

"It is the cause, my soul," said Othello, who was also a General. Dawes thinks the same with the simple and not awfully original basic thought of his speech is that Germany can pay her debts only after her currency is stabilized, her budget balanced and her production increased. But all this was outshone in dark Germany by the two fire balls.

Dawes' Remarks Distorted.

Did Germany want to prove that she is plagued not merely by greedy foreign vultures on the Rhine who howl songs of triumph over unpopular separatism but also by their own vultures? They quickly perverted the common sense of Dawes' speech into a damning verdict against France and thus burdened him with the ungrounded suspicion of being partisanly pro-German. Since then he has been praised as a messiah.

Vultures are gluttonous, cunning and cowardly, but also stupid. He who regards their howling soon loses ability to form sober judgment about events. Just as the delirium tremens sufferer sees mice dancing the shimmey, so our alcoholics of nationalism now see only the death dance of Frenchmen whom universal wrath will soon sweep from the earth.

Yesterday the Franco-Czech alliance which merely gives expression to the intimate relationship created by sentiment and interest represented an attempt to find vassals for desperate France in Eastern and Middle Europe. Today the same people think the Italo-Jugo-Slav treaty has checkmated all French intrigues, burst the "Little Entente" and completed France's straightening isolation. Blind foolishness believes Ramsay Macdonald will attend to the rest and will bring the golden fleece of English and European peace across the channel from France and restore Germany to our old glory—the same Macdonald who, in a letter to the Socialist Renaudel, declared himself the friend of France and who will be compelled by his Cabinet position to conduct carefully his temporizing policy.

And the franc sinks while General Hell and Maria waves the Stars and Stripes in the Astoria Hotel in the face of the dying Poincare. All this justifies celebration of the Prussian kingdom and of the empire—January days of 1701 and 1871—by festivals whose speakers blab of royal eagles ascending and Kaiser's crowns returning, and thus lay upon the Germany the dangerous suspicion that she is preparing new wars of conquest while a friendly world relieves her sufferings. Such wicked childishness murders humanity's sleep and weakens its working energies.

The Italian-Serbian Treaty.

Italy and Serbia have concluded a treaty which gives each just what it needs, no more: To Italy a secure base on the other shore of her Adriatic, an open road to the Balkans and Orient and certainly that Fiume with enough hinterland, will flourish; to Serbia guaranty of her territory against the Bulgars and Magyars, defensive support of the neighboring great Power, a good commercial harbor and possibility of civilizing Albanian co-operation with Italy.

Every well-meaning man should rejoice at such sensible agreements. The firmer Italy's eastern bases become the easier it will be for her to reach an agreement with France. The more France's anxious distrust disappears the readier she will be to collaborate practically on the Rhine and in the Ruhr with nations on an equal footing.

A confidential circular of non-European banks to which a great name undeservedly lends prestige, indicates big speculation is going on which is to bring vast profits through the franc's fall. The speakers are employing the same experience vultures which devoured the Russian rubles, Austrian kronen and German mark.

General Dawes should take advantage of his popularity to institute an international vulture hunt. Then the world could breathe freely.

Our Interference in Mexico.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT is commonly understood that the American Government's attitude toward the Obregon Government is right, on the grounds that the United States has officially recognized it, and for the reason that the established government of Mexico is considered justified in its present situation. But I do not think the attitude of the revolutionists has been rightly understood.

If there is a big revolution in Mexico, there must be something wrong with the Mexican Government, for it is ridiculous to suppose that a big revolution can be raised by virtue of unfair dispositions on the part of the revolutionists, and not as a protest against some unrighteous policy followed by the Government.

The fact that Obregon is really in need of prompt assistance by the United States is an indication that justice itself, which is always with the people, does not favor him at all, the Mexican people (in its majority) sympathizing with the De la Huerta revolution.

All the men who actually participate with De la Huerta in leading the movement against Obregon, had good positions (the best) in the Obregon administration, which they left to join that movement. I say, they left those good positions to join a revolution against the Government with which they could have fulfilled all their ambitions, if they had any. Therefore, personal ambition alone cannot be adduced as a good reason in disfavor of the De la Huerta movement.

The interference of the United States in the Mexican situation, so far as it tends to aid the Obregon Government, will probably be detrimental to the development of Mexico, because the revolution, for the reason of having acquired big proportions, might ("might" is the least we can say) be right, and, being right, it will never die, but will last, keeping the country in an agitated situation.

But, take the extreme case in which the revolution, due to the persistent efforts of the United States, is totally eliminated. Then the Obregon Government will be held in contempt by the Mexican people because it was simply unable to overcome by itself the revolution, and had stood by means of a foreign stress, and not by the natural means of mere reason and justice (the feelings of the people).

Leave Mexico alone in its actual conditions. Help neither Obregon nor the revolutionists and justice and reason themselves will decide the future.

"A BELIEVER IN JUSTICE."

An Unexplained Custom.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I WOULD like to ask, merely as a point of information, why it is that the word "Negro," when seen in the writings of white men, is almost invariably begun with a small "n"? I say that I would like to ask this question merely as a point of information. In the grammars I have studied (all written by reputable white authors) I am told, among other things, that proper nouns should begin with a capital letter. You can readily see, then, why the persistent and almost universal practice, by the best white writers of the day, of beginning the proper noun "Negro" with a small "n" (and this with the evident sanction of white publishers, newspaper and magazine editors, including the editor of the "Post-Dispatch") has poor little me in such a hopeless dilemma.

LIONEL ROBERT STEPHENS.

Another Bonus Argument.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THERE are a great many people who seem to think that able-bodied ex-service men should not receive a bonus, claiming that there is no way of placing a money value on such service as such service should be rendered under patriotic motives. If all the soldiers had enlisted through choice I would say yes, but this patriotic bunk makes me tired.

How many of the commissioned officers would retain their positions through their patriotism to the cause if their salary should be cut to $30 per month? It's a well known fact that had they depended on a volunteer enlistment there would have been no American army to invade a foreign country. But it was simply a case of have to and the Constitution of the United States was ignored to make it possible. The Constitution plainly says that property of a citizen shall not be confiscated without making adequate remuneration for same. If stopping a man's income and appropriating his services is not a confiscation of property, what can it be called? Some of the boys were taken away from good positions paying from $150 to $200 per month and torn away from their families and stood up as targets for German bullets at a salary of $30 per month.

I am a small taxpayer and would like to see taxes reduced, but if it has to be done at the expense of the ex-service man I don't want any reduction. There is but one honorable thing to do, and that is to pay the boys a bonus and thereby give them back a small part of what they have actually been robbed.

H. R. ROCKWELL.

READ, LISTEN, CONSIDER.

On Feb. 26 next the most important election in Missouri, in 49 years, will be held. On that date, the voters of the State will pass upon the amendments to the State Constitution submitted by the Constitutional Convention.

The amendments prepared by the Convention are the results of long and laborious efforts to improve the present Constitution, adopted in 1875. The existing Constitution admirably fitted the conditions of its day, but the changes in conditions, the increase of population, industry, commerce and wealth, and the necessary adoption of modern methods have made parts of it antiquated. The machinery of the government has not been adequate, nor efficiently organized to handle the vastly increased business of government with promptness, effectiveness and economy.

The people of Missouri have long recognized the inadequacy and unfitness of some of the provisions of the old constitution to meet the requirements of present state and municipal conditions. This dissatisfaction has been manifested by many efforts to amend the Constitution. Since 1908, ninety-three amendments have been proposed, but only seventeen adopted. The vote on the amendments submitted by the Legislature or by initiative has been affected by political conditions and considerations which have defeated some of the best. The cost of submitting these amendments, however, has been more than $440,000, and it has been estimated that the average cost of submitting each of the amendments has been more than $25,000.

Recognition of the cost and unsatisfactory results of this desultory method of submitting particular amendments at special elections was the moving cause in the campaign to have the Constitution revised by a deliberative assembly in the form of a Constitutional Convention, so that the amendments needed might be carefully considered and prepared, and presented as a whole at a constitutional election in which there would be no other issue to confuse the minds of voters. The Constitutional Convention wisely decided not to revise the entire Constitution, but to submit the improvements it regarded as necessary, in the form of amendments. It retained the best provisions of the existing Constitution and amended only those parts which it concluded required changes. It has submitted 21 amendments.

The discussion of the amendments is now on. Proponents and opponents of the constitutional changes to be submitted are engaged in a statewide debate which will determine the fate of the amendments.

The purpose of this article is not to discuss the amendments, as a whole or in part, but to emphasize the importance of careful, unbiased, informed judgment on the part of the people, and the registering of that judgment at the polls. Every citizen of the State should read the address of the convention, in which the convention's history, work and conclusions are fully set forth, with the reasons therefor. The aim of the convention was to modernize the organizations and methods of the three departments of government—the executive, legislative and judiciary. The amendments provide for the reorganization of the executive and administrative departments, which have been organized at haphazard with useless and overlapping branches; and to obtain compact, co-ordinating officers and boards, capable of efficient and economical operation.

The object of the changes relating to the judiciary department has been to co-ordinate the whole system, so that all of its parts may contribute to efficiency and speed in the trial and determination of cases. Instead of regarding each department of the courts as separate from all others, as at present, the amendments provide for the co-ordination and co-operation of all the courts and judges as a part of a complete working system. They provide also for reforms of procedure which will expedite trials and promote substantial justice, a reform which has been sadly needed.

Provision has been made for home rule and complete local self-government in the cities, thus establishing a sound democratic principle and relieving the Legislature of deliberation and action on a great number of subjects which do not properly fall within its sphere.

We warn citizens against the demagogue, the special interest advocate, who will twist the best provisions of the amendmets into apparent menances to the public good. The woods are full of these wolves in sheep's clothing, who are trying to mislead and confuse the voters.

Unless the cost of the convention and its laborious work, much of which may be judged at a glance as valuable, is to be lost, the voters must read, listen and consider so that their judgment may be thoroughly informed and their votes intelligently cast.

BROTHER UPSHAW'S CONSTITUTION.

The Rev. William David Upshaw, Congressman from Georgia, is the Chevalier Bayard of prohibition—the dryest of the drys. And he wants everyone else to be as dry as he. His ambition's apogee, to use his own words, is to see "the United States a Sahara Desert." He has a plan for making that mirage a reality.

The plan is this: All men in public life, from the President down, should "walk out into the open and lift their hands to high heaven and take a new oath of allegiance to the whole Constitution of the United States and the American flag."

Brother Upshaw fears, as well he may, that many of our public men, when swearing to uphold the Constitution, entertain, subconsciously, perhaps, a mental reservation as to the eighteenth amendment. Anyhow, they don't abide by it. The effect on private conduct is malign. When law makers are law breakers who will obey the law? That is Brother Upshaw's question. It unhappily is in point.

But is Brother Upshaw as sincerely devoted to the "whole Constitution" as his phillipics imply? Is not his anxiety focussed on the eighteenth amendment? Has he ever inveighed against the flouting of other provisions in our organic law? As a minister of the gospel, as a Representative in Congress, as a citizen of Georgia, would he have our public men unreservedly pledge their fealty to the "whole Constitution"?

The gentleman is aware, of course, that other amendments to the Constitution are dead letters. He knows they have, in effect, been repealed by the sanction of the whole country. He knows why.

The Rev. Mr. Upshaw is a fervent, eloquent prohibitionist. But is he altogether ingenuous when he urges upon our public men the "new oath of allegiance to the whole Constitution of the United States"? He wants the eighteenth amendment in full power and effect in every state in the Union. Does he make the same recommendation for the fourteenth and fifteenth? If he will take those two amendments down to Georgia Brother Upshaw will have a quick exit from the cares that infest these damp-dry days.

ENEMIES AND FRIENDS OF RIVERS.

The Mississippi River has more friends today than at any previous time in its history. This is easily accounted for. The American people have got to have cheaper transportation. The only way to get it is by developing our rivers and by co-ordinating them with the railroads establish a national transportation system. In this program the Mississippi River, by reason of its size and the incomparable territory it can be made to serve, necessarily commands first attention.

But if the Mississippi's friends are more numerous than ever its enemies are still active. How active they are was evidenced in a speech made before the Illinois Manufacturers' Association in Chicago the past week by Congressman Newton of St. Louis, who has done, and is doing, such valuable work for the cause of our inland waterways.

At Chicago Mr. Newton discussed the proposal to divert 10,000 cubic feet of water per second from Lake Michigan into the Chicago, Illinois and Mississippi rivers in order to insure a channel nine feet deep and of greater width from the Great Lakes to the gulf, and the objections to the proposal. The objections have been entered by Canadian and New York power interests, notwithstanding that these same interests have for years been diverting a much larger quantity of water from Lake Erie. It was alleged that the proposed diversion would lower the level of Lake Michigan and would be prejudicial to lake transportation. Mr. Newton disposed of the objection so effectually with facts and engineering data as to raise a question as to the sincerity of the protest.

It was when he left the technical field of engineering and discussed the economic service of river transportation that Mr. Newton talked a language which all business, beginning with the basic industry of agriculture, can understand. The average rail rate throughout the country last year was almost 11 mills per ton mile. But the Mississippi barge line, operated by the War Department, profitably carried freight between St. Louis and New Orleans for 3 1-4 mills, while on the Great Lakes the rate is about 1 1-7 mills.

That is the difference in cost between rail and water transportation. Like most men who have really studied the subject, Mr. Newton believes the railroads, under existing conditions, cannot materially reduce their present freight rates. Yet those rates must be reduced. They constitute too heavy a tax on industry. The one practicable way to reduce them is by utilizing the rivers. The cost of adequately deepening and widening the rivers and building the whole river transportation plant, including boats, barges, terminals, everything, is negligible compared with the cost of maintaining the railroads, which require, in the judgment of Secretary Mellon of the Treasury Department, not less than a billion dollars a year.

The enemies of the rivers, for all their resources and resourcefulness, can be overcome. The game of "strangling the rivers" is played out. River transportation is a sheer business necessity.

A SAGA OF SALESMANSHIP.

The Shipping Board sold seven ships for $3,850,000 that cost the Government $28,501,832. The same board sold a single ship, the City of Los Angeles," for $100,000, on which the Government spent $2,826,000 in reconditioning. In other words, on an investment of $31,327,832 the Government has lost only $27,477,832, or a fraction less than 90 per cent.

All this happened with the Government in the hands of "the party of efficiency." The bungling Democrats, it is assumed, will frankly admit that they could never hope to compose such a saga of salesmanship.

The Ways and Means Committee may need hearings to discuss the detail of tax reduction. None are necessary to find out what the people think about it. They demand tax reduction, and at this session.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE DIXMUDE.

The loss of the Dixmude, following so many dirigible disasters, has created serious distrust in the public mind as to the practicability of that type of construction. This distrust is even said to have penetrated military circles. Be that as it may, judgment is likely to be suspended by an open letter in Le Matin of Chairman Kerguezec of the Senate's Naval Committee to the French Minister of Marine.

Insisting that "these deaths require explanations," Senator Kerguezec asks: "Who ordered this cruise?" and thus quotes from an article in L'Aeronautique written by the commander of the Dixmude before the fatal voyage: "For a long cruise resistance, endurance and, above all, solidity, are necessary. Now, the Dixmude is decidedly fragile and incapable of severe service. It was designed for war, a war raider, not for a long cruise."

Not only was this judgment of a practical airman ignored, but events full of warning were disregarded. Senator Kerguezec reviews a flight in November when the Dixmude was caught in a storm and was only saved from destruction by meteorological service. Was any arrangement made, he asks, to provide meteorological service on the last cruise? The storm in which the ship perished could have been foreseen, he says, and a notice wirelessed from Eiffel Tower. Was this done? Was the machinery tested? Was the ship thoroughly overhauled? What special preparations, if any, were made for this hazardous voyage for which the Dixmude was unfitted?

The implication in those questions is that all those precautions were omitted. The official investigation, presumably, will determine the facts and fix the responsibility. Justice to the dead demands that, and so does justice to the living who still are ready to go up in the skies in dirigibles.

MR. ANTWINE'S OPINION.

"WHY doesn't someone rise and tell us that getting the hired man back on the farm and making him content there really lies at the bottom of the agricultural problem?" Mr. Antwine asked.

"A commission appointed by Mr. Harding to find out what could be done for farmers had no suggestion to make. There are at least seven men in the United States Senate who have a mandate from farmers to get something done, and I think there are more than 20 men in the House who were sent there by the farmers' revolt from the old parties.

"Not one word from any of these quarters about the hired man, his place in history and economics, or the impossibility of bringing farming back as a profitable industry without his active sympathy and aid.

"Yet every farmer knows that with the disaffection of the hired man the decline of farming began. It may be said that throughout the great agricultural states the hired man as we knew him is unknown. The cheering spectacle of that Job-like creature somehow happy to till the soil and asking no very great wage for it has given way to the disquieting picture of the occasional financier who helps out at $5 a day. The one man made farming, and the other made the farming problem.

"It is said that when America was discovered agriculture declined in Spain until the empire was ruined. The hired man, who had made Spain fertile and placed her among the great empires of all time, had gone to America. Most of us likely imagine that Spain gained by the discovery, but we have the word of history that she was indeed ruined by it.

"One of the most profound men of our time is Flinders Petrie, the archeologist. He says every civilization has been built upon the backs of the toiling masses, and that every civilization has fallen when the toiling masses looked up and saw the sky. The decline of Rome began when the slaves revolted.

"This is what is going on in the world today. It accounts for the singular political situation in England. Even the stolid Russian peasant has seen the sky. The Mexican peon has seen it. The Japanese coolie has seen it. Everywhere the great toiling masses have straightened up from digging in the ground and said, 'Why, how beautiful that is!'

"So it is beautiful. It is the sky. It has stars in it and worlds without end. Far away at night it reflects the glow of the city. The hired man has seen it. He has gone to the city.

"Meanwhile the farm lies deserted, desolate, the hired man departed and its glory gone. Senator Brookhart says the propaganda to make us believe the farmer is prosperous is exceeded only by that for the Mellon tax plan.

"Yet nobody says anything of the hired man or asks if there is a way to get him back," Mr. Antwine said.

It is a wise taxpayer who knows his party.

Sir: We are the world's greatest nation when it comes to reform. We allow ourselves to drift gradually into evil ways and then, at one fell swoop, we abolish all the sins of the past and start anew—at least, we fool ourselves into thinking so. The Philadelphia cleanup is typical of the American spirit, in this respect.

It appears that the staid old Quaker City, utilizing its "sleepy" reputation as a mask, was after all a very naughty place. Something had to be done. General Butler was called in, and it was only a matter of hours before the saloons were abolished, the tenderloin closed, and crime made a thing of the past. A clean sweep! What could be more glorious? After all, it seems to be a very simple matter, and other large cities might well follow the example. Yesterday Philadelphia was a dark stain on the nation's map. You could even buy liquor there. Today, it is a spot of lily white, shining in virgin purity. How truly charming!

General Butler's record leaves no doubt as to his ability and sincerity. Criticism is not for the General, but for ourselves as a people. We delude ourselves into thinking that we can destroy a weed by cutting off the top; that a snake driven into its hole is dead. The Philadelphia "reform," like scores of others in the past, will have as much permanent effect as castor oil on a chronic dyspeptic. The people of the Keystone metropolis are doubtless just as thirsty, and otherwise wicked and depraved, today as a month ago. The city's fair name, however, has been publicly vindicated. The word has gone out that Philadelphia has turned over a new leaf. That, of course, is sufficient; at any rate it might be, if we couldn't remember such incidents as the election of Mitchel in New York, and, for that matter, Blankenburg, in the Quaker City itself.

There is one little thing we Americans need and apparently don't want—a system of government by a few laws, reasonable laws, that can and will be enforced all of the time. A scheme by which our statute books bulge with useless and often ridiculous legislation, ignored 364 days in the year and enforced all at one time on the 365th, can never be productive of the best citizenship.

RELIGIOUS REFORMERS.

HENRY S. PRITCHETT in January ner's.

IN our day, as in the days of Cope those who speak in the name of C are quick to invoke the civil power endeavor to enforce their concep truth. No contrast could be great that between the methods of reform this type and those of the Master in name they speak. He lived and taught a small state in a half-barbarous age what He taught and the method of teaching are true for all time and for places. In His day, as in ours, war drunkenness were terrible evils. He took no crusade against them. He no effort to invoke the civil power to pel obedience to His views. But He that love of God and of man which enters into the hearts of men, make and slavery, and drunkenness to cease it is the only power that can. He saw in the large, we see it in part. Today thinking, in its conception of the and reactions of the forces of the has gone far beyond that of Copernicus of his contemporaries. It has come only to gauge the mechanical forces which the earth and the planets move also to see dimly what we call gra and light, and electricity, and magne are not separate and distinct forces that they are different manifestations that infinite force which moves and mates the universe. And we also, as man beings, cannot doubt, as we see more and more of these relations, that these forms of activity are part of that infinite and eternal energy in which ourselves live and move and have our In the presence of such a conception the universe, fragmentary as it may tolerance and patience become us best most of all, the intellectual morality comes only through faithful study.

THE SIXTEENTH AMENDMENT.

From the Baltimore Sun.

IN connection with the question of eral tax reduction, as related to the emption of the income from certain of securities, there has been frequent ence of late to the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution. Representative Frear Wisconsin contends that these exempt curities may be reached under this ment by presenting the question to the preme Court of the United States, other Congressmen maintain that constitutional amendment is needed der to make them liable. One advant in the Frear suggestion is that it settle the question more quickly through a new amendment. A case of kind could be given the right of way if there be sufficient pressure of opinion behind it, the Supreme Court give the Frear view very serious ation. Inasmuch as the sixteenth ment is likely to figure more or less nently in Congressional discussion time to come, it may be worth while quote it for the benefit of those unfamiliar with its exact phraseology it is: "The Congress shall have lay and collect taxes on incomes whatsoever sources derived, without portionment among the several without regard to any census or tion." Apparently very plain and hensive. Could a new amendment any plainer or more compre it has been animated and protected by our Constitution. It will continue to live just so long as we stand squarely on the foundation principles enunciated in that greater charter of our liberties—and it will live because we will have convinced the great mass of our people that we have a better Government than any other that is now being proposed by doctrinaires and various representatives of communistic states. I will wage the vision of your fathers against all these visionary schemes.

WASHINGTON COULD NOT BE ELECTED TODAY, SAYS BAR ASSOCIATION HEAD

"The Constitution of the United States is the one great Gibraltar of well balanced Government left in this world. Bolshevistic intrigue, popular commotion and partisan fury may dash their mad waves against it, but they shall roll back shattered and spent. Persecution shall not check, fanaticism disturb, nor revolutions change it. But it shall stand towering sublime like the last mountain in the deluge, while the earth rocks at its feet and thunders peal above its head, majestic, immutable, magnificent! Thus let it be typified—the Constitution of this republic, standing as the rock of Gibraltar in the midst of all the attacks upon it, is maintained through an intelligent appreciation by American public opinion—endeared with a nation's love, respect and reverence; enshrined in the minds and hearts of a grateful people; rearing itself in imperial grandeur, a mountain peak to guide our footsteps in the future as it has in the past!"

LONG AGAINST MELLON PLAN

So Former Senatorial Candidate Refuses Place on Committee.

Breckinridge Long, candidate against Senator Reed for the Democratic nomination for the office of United States Senator from Missouri has refused to accept an invitation to become a member of a national committee to promote the Mellon plan of tax reduction. Long says he favors the Garner plan to make smaller reductions in taxes on large incomes and larger reduction in taxes on smaller incomes.

Long, in a letter to Henry W. Taft, chairman of the committee in New York, said he believed the Garner, or Democratic plan, was the better, and that it, instead of the Mellon plan, would receive public approval.

FAMOUS COMPOSERS TO BE HEARD HERE

Dohnanyi to Give Piano Recital Friday Night—Enesco to Appear Jan. 29.

Ernst von Dohnanyi, famous Hungarian composer and pianist, whose "Suite in Four Parts" made a distinct success when played recently by the Symphony Orchestra, will appear in a pianofort recital Friday night at the Sheldon Auditorium, under the auspices of the Piano Teachers' Educational Association of St. Louis. Another celebrated composer, Georges Enesco, a Rumanian, will make his first St. Louis appearance as violin soloist at the Morning Choral Club's concert on Jan. 29.

According to present plans, which are subject to change, Dohnanyi will play several of his own works, including his Rhapsodie in F-sharp Minor, Op. 11, No. 2; Rhapsodie in C Major, Op. 11, No. 3; Cappriccio in A Minor, Op. 23, No. 3; Pastorale; Etude in F Minor, Op. 28, No. 6; and the composer's arrangement of the waltz, "Naila," by Delibes. Other works listed are Schumann's "Etudes Symphoniques," Op. 13; and Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 109.

8-Year-Old Pianist to Appear.

An 8-year-old St. Louis girl, Selma Muriel Frank, will make her debut with a piano recital at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon at Vandervoort's Music Hall. The program as announced will comprise Bach's Thirteenth Invention, the Gigue from the "French Suite," No. 6, and the Gavotte from the Fifth French Suite; Scarlatti's "Pastorale;" Mozart's Fantasia in D Minor, Haydn's Sonata in E Minor, two Chopin Preludes, Ilyinsky's Berceuse in G flat, Scharwenka's Barcarolle, Op. 62, No. 4; and Beethoven's Concerto in C Major, with the child's teacher, Victor Ehling, at a second piano.

Enesco, appearing at the Odeon, is to play Handel's concerto for violin, in D Major; Chausson's "La Poeme;" Corelli's "Folies d'Espagne" and the Introduction and Rondo Cappriccio of Saint-Saens. The choral numbers, under the direction of Charles Galloway, will include a new work by Percy Grainger, Joseph Holbrooke's setting of "Sunrise," a poem by Douglas Malloch; "The Three Singers," by Victoria Harris; and a dramatic cantata, "The Highwayman," by Deems Taylor, with baritone solo by Raymond Koch.

Paderewski's Program Announced.

The program for Ignace Paderewski's recital at the Coliseum on the evening of Feb. 1 is announced for the first time: Fantasia and Fugue in G Minor, Bach-Liszt; Andante con variazione, Haydn; Sonata, Op. 57, Beethoven; Variations on a Theme by Paganini Brahms; Chopin's Ballade in A flat, Nocturne in D flat, Op. 27 and the Scherzo in B-flat Minor; and the Mozart-Liszt "Don Juan Fantasy."

The New York String Quartet, which made a favorable impression here last season, will give a second concert on the evening of Feb. 4 at the Wednesday Club Auditorium. The proceeds will be devoted to the Symphony Orchestra's guarantee fund. Sergei Rachmaninoff and Siegfried Wagner are both announced for the evening of Feb. 6. The former will play his fifth St. Louis recital at the Odeon, and the later will conduct the Symphony Orchestra in connection with a St. Louis Massenchor concert at the Coliseum.

Florence Macbeth, coloratura soprano, will present Wolf-Ferrari's opera, "The Secret of Suzanne," at the Odeon on Feb. 9. She will be assisted by Joseph Royer, baritone, and Luigi d'Alle Molle. Besides the short opera, Miss Macbeth will give a recital program.

Grand Opera Performances.

The St. Louis Grand Opera Co. announces that it will give performances of "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Il Barbieri di Seviglia" and "Traviata," at the Odeon on March 11, 12, 14 and 15. M. A. Rossini is general director, and Frederick Fischer is musical director. Rogelo Baldrich, tenor, has been engaged as guest artist, and roles will be sung by St. Louis singers, including Helen S. Phillips, Esther Baker, Joseph Lanza, Joseph Buccolla and M. A. Rossini. The chorus consists of 60 St. Louisans, and 40 of the Symphony Orchestra men will be employed.

A new set of chimes, recently installed in the organ of Graham Memorial Chapel, Washington University, will be used for the first time during Charles Galloway's free organ recital, at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The program follows: Concert Overture in B, James H. Rogers; Pastorale, Franck; "Christmas Bells," Lemare; Sonata in D minor, Merkel; "Marche Nuptiale," Guilmant, and "Grand Choeur Dialogue," Gigout.

The fourth annual concert of the Alhambra Grotto Choral Club will be given Saturday night at the auditorium, Grand boulevard and Magnolia avenue. F. V. P. Hilligardt will conduct. Dudley Buck's cantata, "Paul Revere's Ride," will be the principal number. Other works scheduled are Henry Hadley's "The Song of Marching Men." Bach's "New Let Every Tongue Adore Thee." A. P. Risher's "The Song of David," Oley Speaks' "On the Road to Mandalay," Edward German's "Rolling Down to Rio," and G. W. Stebbins' "Ode to March."

Widower Found Asphyxiated.

Wilton Lucia, 69, a widower, was found dead in bed in his third floor rear room at 4057 Page boulevard yesterday. A burner on a gas heater in the room was turned on but unlighted, and Lucia is believed to have been asphyxiated accidentally.

BRIDGE HEARING ENDS WHERE IT STARTED

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The House Interstate and Foreign Commerce committee today wound up its hearing on the Dyer bill, proposing a three-year extension of time for the completion of the St. Louis Free Bridge, and took the question under advisement. Chairman Winslow announced that he would call the committee together for discussion of the bill next Tuesday. What action the committee would take remained in doubt at the end of the hearing.

Presentation of the St. Louis case was coupled with statements by Frank H. Gerhart, Senator Reed, David Kreyling, secretary of the Central Trades and Labor Union, and John J. Heil, president of the Tenth Ward Improvement and Taxpayers' Association.

Senator Reed declared that opposition to the proposed extension of time came mainly from the railroads. He pointed out there was no valid objection to the one now sought.

East St. Louis Represented

For East St. Louis, Charles Roger, president of the Chamber of Commerce, disclaimed any desire on the part of that city to injure St. Louis. The object of the East St. Louis delegation, he said, was to prevent St. Louis from "defacing" the east side by building the proposed northeastern approch, which he said would be a "hideous structure, 22 feet up in the air, running through a residential section." He said that St Louis already had a completed bridge, which the railroads could use if they so desired.

In reply to a quetion as to why the brige was not used by the roads, he said that St. Louis was paying the penalty for having "abused and mistreated" the railroads in the past. The best solution of the bridge problem, he declared, was for Congress to refuse a further extension of time.

N. C. McLean, a former president of the East St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, declared that his city was not opposed to further building on the east side so long as it did not work to the detriment of the city. He declared that the northeastern approach, which he called the Gerhart approach, would go through some of the best property in East St. Louis and skirt the edge of Jones Park. There was no assurance, he asserted, that the roads would use this approach, if built, any more than they had used the Reber approach, which he described as the work of an "engineer of sense." He said he would not oppose the passage of the bill with a provision permitting the Illinois Commerce Commission to pass upon suggested projects on the East Side.

Against Blanket Authority.

The East St. Louis contention, he said, was directed against a blanket grant of authority that would let St. Louis build where and what it pleased on the East Side.

Replying to questions by committee members, he said he would not object to a provision requiring St. Louis to get a "certificate of necessity and expediency" from the Interstate Commerce Commission before being allowed to build a bridge extension. He preferred having that the authority be vested in the Illinois State Commission.

What Kind Of Blood Have You?

Thin, Pale and Watery—Keeping You Weak, Nervous and Rundown, or Rich, Red Healthy Blood With Plenty of Iron in it To Give You Strength, Energy, Power and Endurance?

IRON IS RED BLOOD FOOD

Says Physician

How NUXATED IRON Puts Roses into the Cheeks of Women and Helps Give Renewed Strength to Men.

If you tire easily, if you look pale, haggard and worn, if you feel generally weak, nervous and run-down it would probably astonish you to look at a drop of your own blood under a powerful microscope and compare it with a drop of pure, healthy blood—rich in iron. Actual blood tests show that a tremendously large number of people who are weak and ill lack iron in their blood and that they are ill for no other reason than lack of iron.

For want of iron you may practically be an old woman at from 30 to 35, weak, down-hearted and "all fagged out." You may be in such a highly nervous, irritable state that you "go all to pieces" on the slightest provocation, while at 50 or 60 with good health and plenty of iron in your blood, you may still be young in feeling and so attractive and full of life as to defy detection of your real age.

"Iron is red blood food," says Dr. E. Sauer, "and organic iron—Nuxated Iron—helps to build up the red blood corpuscles and give increased power and endurance."

Nuxated Iron represents organic iron in such a highly condensed form that one dose of it is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating half a quart of spinach, one quart of green vegetables or half a dozen apples.

Plenty of Iron makes rich, red blood corpuscles like these.	Lack of Iron makes weak, pale blood corpuscles like these.

It's not always the youngest woman that is most sought after—there is an indescribably alluring fascination in the rosy cheek, the inviting lips and sparkling eyes of a woman whose blood is filled with iron. You may be afflicted with iron starvation of the blood and not know it, just as thousands of other women are.

Over 4,000,000 people annually are using NUXATED IRON. It will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. It often increases the bodily and mental vigor, strength and endurance of weak, nervous, "run-down" folks in two weeks' time. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain satisfactory results. Beware of substitutes. Nuxated Iron comes in tablets only—never in liquid form. Always look for the word "Nuxated" on every package and the letters N. I. on every tablet. Sold by all druggists.

NUXATED IRON ENRICHES THE BLOOD—GIVES YOU NEW STRENGTH AND ENERGY

WHIM OF WOMEN WRECKS MARKET FOR SEALSKINS

They Want Coats Every Year and Thus Fur Lasts Too Long, Fouke Tells Committee of Inquiry.

SO GOVERNMENT FINDS SALES SLOW

It Would Better Sell at Auction at Any Price to Stimulate the Market, He Declares.

A woman wants a new coat each year. She does not care particularly for one that might wear and look well for three years or possibly longer. Although a sealskin coat should wear well for more than one season, yet it is not popular for these reasons, which were among those given Friday by Philip B. Fouke, president of the Fouke Fur Co., in explaining conditions in the fur market to a special committee of department store executives appointed by Secretary of Commerce Hoover to work out a method of disposing of Government sealskins.

Fouke told the committee they were dealing with an inverse economic proposition in attempting to find a stimulus for the sealskin market.

Advises Sale at Any Price.

"The Government," he said, "would do well to throw all the skins on hand on the market at whatever prices they would bring at auction."

Hudson seal, made of dyed muskrat skins, is being worn as a substitute for the genuine, he said, because Hudson is cheaper, and the price of genuine Alaska seal must come down before the genuine will become popular with women.

The Fouke Fur Co. lost $2,000,000 in dressing and dyeing sealskins for the Government since 1913, instead of realizing a profit of $3,000,000, as has been charged by persons demanding an inquiry into the company's contract with the Government, Fouke said. Therefore, this contract could not be responsible for prices of sealskins.

Seal Fights Cause Loss.

Not the least of the causes of loss to the Fouke Fur Co. are the warlike proclivities of bull seals. Next to fish as a diet, the bull seal enjoys a free-for-all fight with his fellows. The result is that every few years it becomes necessary to do considerable slaughtering of these old fellows to restore peace on the Pribiloff Islands, where the catch is taken each year.

Wounds suffered in these battles, Fouke said, create scars that damage the skins when ready for dressing. All pelts are shaved on the nether side as part of the preparation process, and in bull pelts old wounds are uncovered that make the pelts worthless or nearly so.

But they have to be dressed and dyed along with the others, and while the Government may make some money from their sale, the company loses in the dressing and dyeing.

He attributed the general high price of furs to many profits taken before the public is reached, pointing out that trapper, receiving dealer, manufacturer and retailer share in profits before milady gets the coat.

DENTISTS PLAN TO OPPOSE $15 YEARLY LICENSE TAX

Bill Offered in Board of Aldermen Will Go to Committee Friday.

A bill providing that dentists be taxed $15 a year for licenses to practice was introduced Friday in the Board of Aldermen, and next Friday will be referred to the Special License Tax Revision Committee, of which Alderman Eilers is chairman.

The bill would require dentists to state where and when they studied for the profession and to give the dates of their certificates from State Dental Boards when making application for their annual licenses.

The St. Louis Society of Dental Science has called a meeting of dentists for next Wednesday at Hotel Jefferson, to discuss the measure with a view to opposing it and the St. Louis Dental Society is considering similar action. Dentists hold that they are professional men, as are physicians and ministers, who are not taxed for licenses to practice their professions, and say there is no good reason why dentists should not also be exempt.

DYER INDORSEMENT VIEWED AS BABLER-DICKEY FEELER

Congressman Has Support of Group Which Has Controlled Missouri G. O. P.

Through an indorsement of Congressman Dyer of St. Louis to succeed Jacob L. Babler as Republican National Committeeman from Missouri by the Twelfth District Republican Committee, the Babler-Dickey faction of the party sent out a feeler. If the Dyer suggestion meets with favor he probably will be supported by Babler and the element which has enabled Babler to control national Republican politics in Missouri.

One of the purposes of the indorsement, it was said, was to determine whether the faction directed by Gov. Hyde and his appointees would accept Dyer. Hyde was disposed to support Dr. E. B. Clements of Macon, chairman of the State Committee, but virtually abandoned Clements when he learned that many of his appointees at the capital would not willingly aid the Clements candidacy. The National Committeeman will be named by the delegates to the Republican national convention in Cleveland June 9.

Post-Dispatch Takes First Place in Real Estate Advertising in St. Louis!

Real Estate Advertisers, during 1923, broke away from time-tattered precedent, which is often a dangerous guide, and joined that great group of successful modern advertisers in other lines who give the bulk of their advertising to and get their maximum results from St. Louis' ONE Big Newspaper—the POST-DISPATCH—Daily and Sunday.

For Years The POST-DISPATCH Has Been

First in Total Paid Advertising
First in Local Display Advertising
First in National Advertising
First in Want Advertising and NOW First in REAL ESTATE Advertising

THE REASON: The City Circulation of the Sunday Post-Dispatch is approximately 80% more than that of the other Sunday newspaper. The City Circulation of the Daily Post Dispatch exceeds that of the morning and one other evening newspaper Combined.

There Is No Substitute for a Responsive Circulation

ART LEAGUE URGES CITY BEAUTIFICATION

Campaign for Better Use of Art in Bond-Issue Improvements to Be Waged.

Better municipal use of art in connection with the bond issue improvements and the beautification of the city and a special campaign for advancement in decorative and industrial art are important features of the St. Louis Art League's program which is to be inaugurated immediately.

At an art spirit dinner of the Board of Governors and members of the league and guests at the Chase Hotel Wednesday at 7 p. m. Mayor Kiel will outline opportunities now presented for making St. Louis one of the most beautiful cities in the country.

The first feature of the Art League program to be developed at this time is progress in decorative and industrial art. A series of exhibitions will be given, showing the use of art in one industry after another.

The decorative mosaic work in the New Cathedral will be the subject of the league's first major exhibition. It is asserted that St. Louis will lead the country as the center of the art mosaic industry, because of the Cathedral decorations.

The Cathedral decorations will be featured at Wednesday's dinner when Archbishop Glennon will be the guest of honor of the Art League.

Speakers on different phases of art will include Breckinridge Jones on his observations while abroad as to the practical applications of art to objects of daily use; President W. Palmer Clarkson of the Chamber of Commerce, on Industrial Art as a Commercial Asset; Frank P. Glass on Art as a Factor in Progress; Clark McAdams, president of the Artists' Guild, John J. Griffin, Faithful Navigator of the Knights of Columbus, Fourth Degree, and others.

Manufacturer's Representative

One of America's largest radio manufacturers, with established business in this territory, desires a representative to work jobber and dealer trade. This is an unusual opportunity, with demonstrated large income possibilities. Do not apply unless you can prove selling ability to radio or electrical trade, and are thoroughly responsible financially. Straight commission basis. Box R-237, Post-Dispatch.

AT THE TRAINING-CAMP

Generally applied to army affairs is the word "training-camp."

Obedience is its first requisite; other requisites follow rapidly; all compulsory.

But there is another (the original) training-camp of far more importance which fits the individual for the army training-camp; that is the HOME.

HOME is the training-camp for life's vicissitudes. HOME is the place where our future men and women are molded. The more pleasant the surroundings, the more perfect the model.

Make of home a place of harmony, not discord, and a multitude of life's tribulations will never occur.

A place of delight is the "Home Training-Camp!" (Signed)

Rose Bower Is Setting for Wedding of Miss Alice Busch, 1922 Veiled Prophet Queen, to Louis Hager Jr.

Busch Mansion, on Historic Grant's Farm, Transformed Into Southern Garden in Mid-Summer — Reception Follows Ceremony.

AMONG the ci-devant Queens scattered about the world, there is none more charming, her friends aver, than Miss Alice Busch, whose realm was of the make believe, and whose reign was but a year, who took a consort last night at the historic Grant's Farm, in St. Louis County.

The bride, the Veiled Prophet's Queen of 1922, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August A. Busch and a granddaughter of Adolphus Busch, who founded their house and fortune in St. Louis. The bridegroom was Louis Hager Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hager of Hawthorne boulevard.

A spacious mansion set in the midst of a vast estate, its rooms transformed with thousands of roses to resemble a Southern garden in midsummer, was the setting for the ceremony. An orchestra played the wedding march, while a bevy of young women attendants presenting a rainbow-like appearance in their pastel-shaded frocks, descended the stairs under pink rose-covered arches. Before the bride walked her nieces, Jacqueline Jones, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Drummond Jones, and Marie Eleanor Busch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adolphus Busch III, in exquisite lace trimmed pink chiffon frocks, scattering rose petals from tiny baskets. Adolphus Busch Orthwein, in velvet, carried the wedding ring to be worn by his aunt.

Last of all was the bride, on the arm of her father, her tall slender beauty well set off in a clinging directoire ivory satin gown, made quite long, and with a high rose point lace collar at the back such as Catherine de Medici might have worn at a court function. The slight skirt drapery was finished at the waist line with a huge cabuchon of orange blossoms, from which tendrils hung to the floor.

More of the lace, its rose pattern outlined in pearls, fashioned the long tight sleeves, pointed at the hand and softened at the shoulder by cascades of pearls which fell over them. The main court train, depending from the lace collar, was satin lined with sheer silver cloth and interlined with a faint pink. Across the end of its six-yard length was sewn a graceful bow knot of orange blossoms, extending part way to the top, and over this fell a rose point panel appliqued on tulle. The bride's hair, of the heavy chestnut shade, is worn full about her face, and was uncovered. Her veil was arranged under a dainty band of orange blossoms. She carried white orchids combined with lilies of the valley, with showers of white gardenias.

The gowns of the bridesmaids were crepe chiffon—Misses Eppes Hawes and Inez Thomas of Dallas wore pink; Miss Claire Garneau and Mrs. Warne Niedringhaus were in blue; Mrs. William D. Orthwein Jr. and Miss Rebecca Chase in green, while Mrs. Donald Church Bixby and Miss Marguerite Moll, as matron and maid of honor, wore yellow and orchid respectively. Made in the bouffant mode, they had full skirts with three scalloped flounces, full, round necked bodices, without sleeves. The only trimming was a spray of French handmade flowers with silver stems fastened at the left hip, each spray containing the colors of all the gowns. They carried great armfuls of spring flowers—jonquils, freesia, butterfly roses and sweetpeas, tied with yards of satin ribbons to match their frocks, arranged in a series of loops and ends.

The procession moved forward through an improved satin aisle with satin covered posts topped by drooping roses to a corner of the garden in the long living room where a year ago almost the same guests paid her homage at the famous American beauty ball.

Here was built a pergola, raised from the floor and specially lighted with dozens of frosted globes where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Ivan Lee Holt of St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church. Bride's roses entwined the pillars and studded the trellis work and smilax-covered walls.

Mr. Hager had James Walter Smith as best man and Dozier Carleton Cook, Clarence Maloy, Donald Church Bixby, Warne Niedringhaus, Arthur Hickman, August A. Busch Jr., and Martin Lammert III as groomsmen.

During the reception which followed, a buffet table was set in the dining room, while the bridal party was seated at an oval table in a large alcove. Over the doorway hung a wedding bell of lilies of the valley and white roses, and a huge silver basket of roses and lilies adorned the table itself. One of the porches was enclosed as a smoking room for the men, the walls covered with smilax and flowers.

The gifts were varied and beautiful. Mr. Hager gave his bride a gold mesh bag, with a diamond and sapphire studded top. Her gifts to her attendants were green gold sports pins in the shape of riding crops, with centers of horses' heads set in crystal. Mr. Hager presented his groomsmen with stick pins to match with the whip lash curled about the crystal. Among the many other gifts were a chest of flat hammered silver from Mrs. Adolphus Busch; a massive silver coffee service from her parents, who have also given them the ground near Grand View Farm, the home of their son, Adolphus Busch III and will build a home for them in the spring; a dozen silver service plates from Mr. and Mrs. Hager, parents of the bridegroom; a dozen crystal grapefruit holders with silver banding from Mr. and Mrs. Percy Orthwein; a silver platter from Mr. and Mrs. Drummond Jones and a dozen demi-tasse cups of porcelain and silver from Mr. and Mrs. August A. Busch Jr.

Imperial Ball Marking Entry of 18 Debutantes Into Club, More Gorgeous Than Usual

Number of Buds Invited This Year Twice as Large as Last—Entertainment Rooms of St. Louis Club Brilliantly Decorated for Event, Which Is One of Year's Crowning Social Festivities.

AGAIN, on Friday evening, the portals of the Imperial, that exclusive organization whose history dates back many years in St. Louis society, were opened and 18 of this season's debutantes were admitted as members, at the annual ball given at the St. Louis Club. The honor is regarded by the young women as the highest conferred during their careers as buds. Although it is an annual custom, the number invited this year is twice as large as last because of the unusually long list of young women "out" this season, and it is doubtful if the membership has ever been increased by so many at one time. The club, when organized in the earlier days by a small group of social leaders, was known as the Home Circle, and the dances, as the title implies, were held at the members' homes, but its growth compelled a change, and so the St. Louis Club was chosen as a permanent meeting place. Descendants of those families still are members. To these parties come dowagers, their daughters and granddaughters alike, each gorgeously gowned and be-jeweled, making a brilliant picture in a setting of rose and gold.

As is usual in the decorations, dozens of American beauty roses and quantities of smilax shipped from the South for the occasion decorated the entertainment rooms of the club. Here dinner was served to 400 guests at 8 o'clock, and dancing followed. Wrought iron standards of pussy willows lent a spring-like touch to the reception hall. The balustrades were smilax covered, and at intervals the steps were lighted by tall gilt lamps. The landing at the ballroom entrance was canopied with rose silk supported by golden spears.

The main dining room was filled with tables seating from 10 to 18 guests. Against the front windows a long table for the 24 patrons and patronesses had for its centerpiece a huge silver bowl of roses set in a bed of green, while traceries of the vine graduated to either end, where silver candelabra each held six tall pink tapers. Garlands of smilax spanned the ceiling, where lights, encased in great globes of rose petals shed a pink glow. Dozens of smaller tables overflowing into the breakfast room and library each bore a single pink taper in a silver holder.

Gold dipped smilax outlined the great mirror opposite the ballroom door and trailing downward gave a background for the receiving party. Over their heads hung the Imperial crown, the chief insignia of the organization. The decorative scheme was further enhanced by a rose silk drapery, supported to the ceiling by spears from which hung gilt balls, diffusing the light and ending in festoons at one end of the room. Tall Imperial golden vases filled with roses, placed at intervals about the room, formed as usual an important part of the decoration. The orchestra, seated on a raised dias, was concealed behind palms and ferns.

IMPERIAL BALL MAKING ENTRY OF 18 DEBUTANTES INTO CLUB, MORE GORGEOUS THAN EVER

One of the most striking gowns in the brilliant assemblage was worn by Miss Grace Whitelaw Wallace, Veiled Prophet Queen. Of white velvet, it glittered with red and white rhinestones, and was finished at the hem with a broad band of fur.

Misses Mary Virginia Collins and Miss Katherine Steedman, both special maids to the Queen in the Love and Beauty Court, wore pastel shades. Miss Collins in a beaded pink robe over silver cloth, and Miss Steedman in blue brocade with an overskirt of silver lace.

Some of the young women chose the gowns made for their debut balls. Such was the case of Miss Emily Catlin Shepley, whose attractive frock was white satin and silver. Miss Louise Bemis was in white velvet with white fox fur trimmings. She carried orchids.

Miss Frances Collins, daughter of Mrs. H. Blakesley Collins, wore a delicate blue with crystal trimmings, and Miss Janet Lee Collins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Collins, was gowned in white silk lace, made simply.

The style of years ago was employed in the fashioning of Miss Harriet Lane Cates' gown. It was built of white moire, with the tight bodice and full skirt, and its trimmings were garlands of pink roses. She carried a bouquet of roses in the corresponding shades.

Miss Mary Christy Tiffany was gowned in silver cloth.

White velvet, fashioned over Nile green, was worn by Miss Lucy Hoblitzelle, daughter of William E. Hoblitzelle, and coral velvet with rhinestones by Miss Marie Carr Taylor. A rhinestone ornament finished the side front, and she carried a sheaf of valley lilies.

Miss Rachel Lee Cuendet and Miss Mary O'Fallon were in white. Miss O'Fallon's frock was chiffon over satin, embellished with pink roses, and the same flowers were used in her arm bouquet.

Miss Mary Francis Dickson was lovely in pale blue satin and diamonds. The only debutante invited who was not present was Miss Trimble Hoblitzelle, who, with her mother, Mrs. George K. Hoblitzelle, has sailed for a world tour.

Each year a group of matrons is chosen for membership to act as patronesses and to stand in the receiving line. Serving in that capacity Friday night, in addition to Mrs. Jones, who already has ben mentioned, they were:

Mrs. John Lawrence Mauran wore silver cloth brocaded in white, and a corsage of lilies of the valley and gardenias.

Mrs. John Tilden Davis Jr. chose a magnificent creation of gold and white brocade, and with it wore orchids and Spanish blue iris.

Mrs. Henry Clarkson Scott, fond of the more subdued shades, wore black and silver, and carried dark red roses which harmonized so well with her dark hair. Mrs. Scott's married daughter, Mrs. Thomas Blumer of Boston, who is visiting her, attended the ball.

Mrs. Daniel Kayser Catlin chose yellow as the tone of her costume, and her gown, which was of satin, was trimmed with rhinestones. She wore yellow beads and carried roses to match.

Mrs. George Shepley Tiffany and Mrs. Arthur B. Shepley, both mothers of debutantes asked to join this year, were patronesses. The former wore gold brocade and carried pink roses and lilies of the valley, while Mrs. Shepley's gown was black and silver and her flowers orchids.

Miss Mary Lionberger, whose name has not been omitted from the receiving line for several years, chose black lace, with touches of green and silver. She carried gardenias.

Mrs. George Fox Steedman, also the mother of a debutante, was in white, and Mrs. J. Lionberger Davis wore deep rose colored velvet, made simply. Her flowers were roses to match combined with lilies of the valley.

White velvet, a favorite material this season, was worn by Mrs. Charles H. Morrill. The gown was draped and trimmed with crystal embroidery. She carried Ophelia roses.

Mrs. Samuel Wesley Fordyce Jr., whose name also appears on the list was prevented from attending because of her absence from the city.

of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Paul Von Gontard of Berlin, Germany, gave crystal service plates with gold bands. Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Faust and their daughter, Miss Audrey, sent silver birds for table ornaments. The gifts included little china. There were silver candelabra, platters, and vases of all descriptions, in addition to odd pieces of furniture, mirrors and books.

Mr. and Mrs. Hager will take a brief honeymoon trip to one of the winter resorts before sailing early in February for a Mediterranean cruise.

Miss Mary Etta Randolph of 7 Kingsbury place has chosen Tuesday, Feb. 4, as the date of her wedding to Garneau Weld of the St. Regis apartments. The origina plans for a later day have been changed because of Lent. The ceremony will take place at 6 o'clock in the evening in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Potter, 7 Kingsbury place, the latter a sister of the bride, with whom she resides. Mrs. Potter will be her matron of honor, and the other members of the bridal party will be announced later.

Miss Mabel Green Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Duck Thompson of 5045 Lindel boulevard, has gone to visit Miss Julia Davis of Kansas City for three weeks.

PARTIES OF THE WEEK, LUNCHEONS AND RECEPTIONS

Mrs. J. F. Murphy of 3 Princeton avenue, University City, will entertain 30 guests at tea this evening in honor of her daughter, Mrs. O. O. Scroggin Jr., of Little Rock, Ark., who is visiting here with her small son, O. O. Scroggin III. Early in February another daughter, Mrs. Russell T. Lafferty also of Little Rock and her two children will come for a visit. Miss Elizabeth Murphy, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Murphy, has been entertaining Misses Marjorie Leigh Wyman and Elizabeth Wyman of Chicago for 10 days, and a number of informal parties were given for them. The visitors departed for their home Thursday.

Oneof the attractive parties of the week was a bridge given yesterday afternoon by Miss Marie Creveling, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. C. Creveling of North Elm avenue, Webster Groves, in honor of Mrs. Robert James Moffatt of Toronto, Canada, formerly Miss Wilma Robinson, and Miss Janet Owings, whose engagement to E. A. Britton Jr. has been announced. There were 14 tables for cards. In the evening Miss Creveling entertained 20 guests at a mixed bridge for the same honorees.

Arrangements are well under way for the annual card party, which has been announced, under the auspices of the Matthew Fontaine Maury Chapter, U. D. C., for the afternoon of Feb. 9, in the ballroom of the Forest Park Hotel.

Mrs. J. P. Higgins is in charge of arrangements, assisted by the following women, who will serve as chairmen of committees: Mrs. J. B. Smythe, tickets; Mrs. A. C. Meyer, prizes; Mrs. George N. Martin, cards and tallies; Mrs. James M. Sloan, reception; Mrs. George F. Powell, invitations; Mrs. John R. Lionberger, tables; Mrs. N. A. Sayre, lists; Mrs. O. S. Wilfley, publicity.

Both bridge and mah jong may be played, provided those wishing to play the latter game furnish their own sets.

Judge Walter H. Sanborn and Mrs. Sanborn of the Buckingham Hotel were hosts at dinner on Tuesday evening. The guests were Judge Shepard Barclay and Mrs. Barclay, Judge Kimbrough Stone of Kansas City, Judge Lewis of Colorado, Misses Georgia Hough and Ada Winston.

Mrs. George G. Johnson of the Cathedral Apartments entertained at a luncheon followed by a bridge Wednesday. Forty guests were invited.

Desidere Joseph Vescel of Budapest, Hungary, was the guest for a few days of Mrs. Reine Fusa de Penaloza of Ferguson and her daughter, Miss Henriette. He met many people prominent in the social and musical sets while here. He will return to St. Louis in April, en route from Santa Barbara, Cal., to New York, whence he will sail for home.

Miss Lynetta Oehler of 3129 Russell avenue, gave the second of a series of bridge luncheons at her home yesterday afternoon. There were nine tables for cards.

Mrs. Festus J. Wade of 4532 Lindell boulevard gave a luncheon at the Log Cabin Country Club, Wednesday complimenting Mrs. Robert Dula of New York, who is at the house of her son-in-law and

PARTIES OF THE WEEK, LUNCHEONS AND RECEPTIONS

Mrs. J. F. Murphy of 3 Princeton avenue, University City, will entertain 30 guests at tea this evening in honor of her daughter, Mrs. O. O. Scroggin Jr., of Little Rock, Ark., who is visiting here with her small son, O. O. Scroggin III. Early in February another daughter, Mrs. Russell T. Lafferty also of Little Rock and her two children, will come for a visit. Miss Elizabeth Murphy, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Murphy, has been entertaining Misses Marjorie Leigh Wyman and Elizabeth Wyman of Chicago for 10 days, and a number of informal parties were given for them. The visitors departed for their home Thursday.

One of the attractive parties of the week was a bridge given yesterday afternoon by Miss Marie Creveling, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. C. Creveling of North Elm avenue, Webster Groves, in honor of Mrs. Robert James Moffatt of Toronto, Canada, formerly Miss Wilma Robinson, and Miss Janet Owings, whose engagement to E. A. Britton Jr. has been announced. There were 14 tables for cards. In the evening Miss Creveling entertained 20 guests at a mixed bridge for the same honorees.

Arrangements are well under way for the annual card party, which has been announced, under the auspices of the Matthew Fontaine Maury Chapter, U. D. C., for the afternoon of Feb. 9, in the ballroom of the Forest Park Hotel. Mrs. J. P. Higgins is in charge of arrangements, assisted by the following women, who will serve as chairmen of committees: Mrs. J. B. Smythe, tickets; Mrs. A. C. Meyer, prizes; Mrs. George N. Martin, cards and tallies; Mrs. James M. Sloan, reception; Mrs. George F. Powell, invitations; Mrs. John R. Lionberger, tables; Mrs. N. A. Sayre, lists; Mrs. O. S. Wilfley, publicity.

Both bridge and mah jong may be played, provided those wishing to play the latter game furnish their own sets.

Judge Walter H. Sanborn and Mrs. Sanborn of the Buckingham Hotel were hosts at dinner on Tuesday evening. The guests were Judge Shepard Barclay and Mrs. Barclay, Judge Kimbrough Stone of Kansas City, Judge Lewis of Colorado, Misses Georgia Hough and Ada Winston.

Mrs. George G. Johnson of the Cathedral Apartments entertained at a luncheon followed by a bridge Wednesday. Forty guests were invited.

Desidere Joseph Vescel of Budapest, Hungary, was the guest for a few days of Mrs. Reine Fusz de Penaloza of Ferguson and her daughter, Miss Henriette. He met many people prominent in the social and musical sets while here. He will return to St. Louis in April, en route from Santa Barbara, Cal., to New York, whence he will sail for home.

Miss Lynetta Oehler of 3139 Russell avenue, gave the second of a series of bridge luncheons at her home yesterday afternoon. There were nine tables for cards.

Mrs. Festus J. Wade of 4532 Lindell boulevard gave a lunceon at the Log Cabin Country Club, Wednesday complimenting Mrs. Robert Dula of New York, who is at the house of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Selwyn C. Edgar of 4905 Argyle place. Mrs. Herbert S. Hadley, wife of Chancellor Hadley of Washington University, shared honors with Mrs. Dula.

Mrs. Walter S. Marx of 16 Washington terrace gave a tea Friday for the Executive Board and staff of the Visiting Nurses Association.

The annual parents' dinner of John Burroughs' School, Price road and Clayton car line, will be given Monday evening, Jan. 28. The pupils of the school, which is a new country day school for girls and boys, will act as hosts for their fathers and mothers. The school will be inspected and class room exercises held.

The students of Loretto College Webster Groves, have sent out invitations for their annual formal dance to be given at the St. Louis Woman's Club the evening of Friday, Feb. 3. Activities at the club this week include the Current Topic meeting Thursday, at which Judge O'Neill Ryan will be the speaker, and the dance of the Fourth Friday Club Friday evening.

Rabbi and Mrs. Samuel Thurman will be at home to their friends, from 3 to 6 o'clock this afternoon in their new residence at 420 Melville avenue, University City.

We know women, young in years and full of the zest of living, who are always depressed and unhappy because of a few gray hairs that Farr's Gray Hair Restorer would so easily and harmlessly bring back to their original natural color.

Farr's is no trouble at all to use—a few minutes in your own room is enough. It leaves the hair glossy, lustrous and soft; it is not sticky and will not rub off or stain the scalp; it is as harmless as so much water, and every bottle is sold with the positive guarantee that it cannot cause the slightest harm or annoyance to the hair or scalp.

Be Careful What You Wash Your Child's Hair With

If you want to keep childern's hair in good condition be careful what you wash it with.

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this cannot possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. Two or three teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Musified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and a few ounces will last for months.

Beauty Unsurpassed

The wonderful, refined, entrancing complexion rendered, brings back the appearance of youth. Results are instant. Highly antiseptic. Exerts a soft and soothing action. 80 years in use. White Flesh-Rachel. 2

OFFICIAL STORY TELLER TO CHILDREN IN GERMANY

Former Teacher Wanders Through Industrial Area to Bring Romance Into Lives of Little Workers.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. [illegible]5.—Fraulein Lisa Tetzner, a former school teacher, is official relater of fairly tales, and as such promises some day to share in Germany the fame of the Brothers Grimm and other noted creators of fantastic stories.

The Government decided recently that there is little romance in the lives of the boys and girls who begin to toil in the mines and mills at an early age, and that much good could be accomplished if their lives were a bit more normal. Accordingly it enlisted the services of Fraulein Tetzner as "official fairy story teller." She wanders from place to place in the industrial areas, entertaining the youngsters with tales of her own making as well as from the treasury of German folk-lore. A majority of the boys in the mines, she says, are partial to "Gulliver's Travels" and "Puss in Boots," while the factory girls prefer "Cinderella" and "Little Red Riding Hood."

Fraulein Tetzner reports that the Rhineland children have the most romantic imaginations of all the youngsters of Germany.

In the industrial districts of Thuringia and the Ruhr, Fraulein Tetzner says, she found many boys and girls who, when she began her work, were little old men and women, scarcely interested in her stories. After a while they began to catch glimpses of her creatures of fancy and finally became her best listeners.

EPISCOPAL CONVENTION

The eighty-fifth annual convention of the Missouri diocese of the Episcopal Church will open Tuesday morning with services at Christ Church Cathedral. Delegates from all churches in the eastern district of Missouri and most of the clergy of the diocese will attend.

There are to be sessions of the convention morning and afternoon Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Bishop and Mrs. Johnson and Dean Scarlett of Christ Church Cathedral, will hold a reception to delegates at the deanery, 64 Vandeventer place.

A mass meeting at Christ Church Cathedral Wednesday evening will be a feature. William C. Sturgis, educational secretary of the Department of Missions of the church, will be the speaker.

LEAGUE CONFERENCE ON TRADE

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Jan. 5. — Unscrupulous business methods and competition will be the subject of an international gathering called by the League of Nations to meet at Geneva, May 5, 1924, when an effort will be made to draft an agreement for the respect of trademarks and patent rights.

The League of Nations has taken the initiative on the question by virtue of the league covenant whereby members mutually undertake to guarantee the maintenance of an equitable treatment of commerce. Invitations have been sent to various governments to send experts to the meeting.

GERMAN RELIEF CAMPAIGN TO BEGIN WITH METING FRIDAY

Fund of $200,000 to Be Sought for Assistance of Undernourished Children.

The campaign to raise $200,000 for the relief of starving children in Germany will begin Friday with a meeting of several hundred men and women workers at Hotel Statler. It is planned to conclude the effort in six days.

The St. Louis campaign is part of a nation-wide effort to raise $10,000,000, following reports of investigators to the State Department that more than 7,000,000 children in Germany are undernourished.

Henry S. Priest, general chairman of the St. Louis committee, said last night that while he felt the effort to raise the St. Louis fund would be hard, he was convinced that the money would be forthcoming, as the appeal was from children facing starvation.

YALE VOTE SHOWS MAJORITY FOR DRY LAW CHANGE

Faculty Gives Plurality of Three for Modification of Eighteenth Amendment.

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 19.—Faculty voting on prohibition based on three questions prepared by the Yale News, and figures of which were not in the tabulation announced yesterday for Yale University, showed a plurality of three for modification of the Eighteenth Amendment. The faculty figures were 75 for modification, 72 for enforcement and 42 for repeal.

These figures added to those previously given out made about five-eighths of the total vote in favor of a change in the law. Every department in the university except the graduate school gave a margin for modification. The final figures were 641 for enforcement, 1042 for modification and 561 for repeal. The News says that the mature sections "Are more nearly satisfied with existing conditions than the younger, less experienced elements."

My Glasses Kept Him on the Payroll

They gave him a thirty-day notice the first of the year that his services would no longer be required. He was an accountant and felt for some time that he had been slipping, as the boss had occasion to jack him up frequently of late because of the unreasonable number of mistakes he was making.

He never dreamed anything was the matter with his eyes until he chanced on an advertisement of mine explaining the close connection between certain forms of headache and defective vision. This set him to thinking, as for the last five or six months he had been a sufferer from severe headaches, but had blamed them entirely on bad digestion.

Dr. F. J. Guilbault

A visit to my office quickly established the fact that imperfect sight was the cause of all his troubles.

A pair of my Glasses properly ground and fitted have freed him from all headaches, nervousness and irritability, and, best of all, the boss has rescinded the discharge order, as his work is now perfectly satisfactory in every respect.

This is only one of hundreds of similar cases. Consult me about your eyes. Twenty years' experience and extremely reasonable charges guarantee your complete satisfaction.

Your clogged nostrils open right up and you can breathe freely. Hawking and snuffling stop. Don't stay stuffed up and miserable.

Says She Looks Twenty Years Younger

Tells How She Did It With a Home-Made Remedy.

Mrs. E. H. Boots, a well-known resident of Buchanan County, Ia., who darkened her gray hair, made the following statement:

"Any lady or gentlemen can darken their gray or faded hair and look twenty years younger with this simple remedy, which they can mix at home. To half a pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, one small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently. It does not color the scalp; is not greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger.

Banish Pimples by Easy Method

Stuart's Calcium Wafers Have Remarkable Action in the Skin to Clear It of Pimples, Blackheads and Other Such Beauty Spoilers.

With all the wonderfully pretty things to wear many a girl is distracted because her complexion is a fright. But here's the way to banish those pimples. Ask any druggist for a 60 cent box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers and follow directions.

Their first action is to remove the sour fermentations that are apt to poison the blood and thus disfigure the skin. The effect is visibly noticeable to those troubled with a pimply skin, or one that is muddy or red or blotchy, scaly and rough and coarse. The Calcium Wafers induce a reaction to healthier tendencies and soon the pinkish complexion begins to assert itself, the blemishes fade away, the dimples seem animated and the entire appearance is one of vivacious beauty instead of unsightliness.

Get a 60 cent box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers at the nearest drug store or write to F. A. Stuart Co., 635 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich., for a free sample package.

In the ADAMS CHAIR BED OR LOUNGE you have, to all outward appearances, a rich, luxurious overstuffed piece of furniture you'll be proud to show. Yet in two seconds a child can change either into a full-length bed with real springs and real mattress, and of regulation height from the floor. That's why we urge you to visit our showroom. It will be well worth your while, and no obligation.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES OF MISSOURI FOLK AT NATIONAL CAPITAL

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The Democratic forces of the National Committee and the Woman's Democratic Committee descended upon Washington this week and stormed the Republican strongholds successfully, from a social point of view, at least, as practically all the entertaining of the week outside of the strictly official functions of the administration centered around the vistors who decided the important question "Where the next convention is to be?"

Many Missourians came on a special train to try to win the prize for St. Louis. One of the most prominent in this group was Col. Bennett Clark, son of the late Speaker and Mrs. Champ Clark, whose arrival was a signal for many informal entertainments. Col. Clark ,who was formerly parliamentarian of the House of Representatives during his father's career as Speaker, was the guest of honor at a luncheon at the Capitol Wednesday, which was attended by most of the members of the Missouri delegation.

Mrs. Selden P. Spencer and Mrs. James A. Reed were among the special committee that escorted Mrs. Coolidge when she attended the Senate ladies' luncheon at the Capitol, Monday, over which she used to preside when her husband was Vice President and she was the head of this group of senatorial women.

The President and Mrs. Coolidge were guests of honor at a dinner Thursday night given by the Secretary of War and Mrs. Weeks. The chief executive and his wife will dine with the entire Cabinet before the season is over.

Two happy boys, Calvin Coolidge Jr. and John Coolidge, departed Friday for their school in Pennsylvania, after a vacation that had been somewhat elongated by the fact that fire had damaged a dormitory at their school. The boys made the best of the extra vacation and have inspected the Mayflower from bow to stern, have a wrestling acquaintance with all the White House aides and have sought vainly for the necessary parental permission to take a ride in one of the big navy airships parked over in Anacostia, where, tradition says, was the former home of the Princess Pocahontas, who saved the life of Capt. John H. Smith.

Mrs. Leigh C. Palmer entertained at luncheon followed by a mah jong party this week and also took a group of the friends of her daugher, Miss Bessie McKeldin, to see Jane Cowl in "Anthony and Cleopatra" on another afternoon. Mrs. Palmer had a party of friends at the opening of the tea house for the benefit of the fatherless children of Greece, which is being operated by a committee of debutantes, of which Miss Janet Moffett is chairman and Miss McKeldin vice chairman.

Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins entertained at luncheon at the American Association of University Women, her guests being a number of the delegates to the National Illiteracy Conference, which has been in session in Washington the last week.

Mrs. Cleveland A. Newton was among those receiving at the Congressional day "at home," at the Congressional Club. Mrs. Newton attended the performance of "Cleopatra and Anthony" and many of the meetings of the National Illiteracy Conference.

Miss Bessie Brueggeman, chairman of the Employes' Compensation Commission, was among the speakers at the meeting of the Women's Cabinet, composed of women in executive positions in the Government service, at the Grace Dodge Hotel, last night. Mrs. Brueggeman also entertained at luncheon at the American Association of University Women, for friends among the delegates to the National Illiteracy Conference.

Every woman's organization meeting in Washington discusses the plans for the meeting, next year, of the International Council of Women, which will be attended so reports say, by no less than 5000 accredited women delegates from all over the world and thousands of other women as alternates and visitors. During this meeting Mrs. Philip North Moore, of St. Louis, as president of the National Council of Women, will be prominent, as she will be the official hostess for the convention. The General Board of the Federation of Clubs sent Mrs. Moore many communications in regard to the meeting and discussed the council meeting for nearly an entire morning.

The universal plague of itching, bleeding and protruding piles can be cared for so quickly, the pain and distress banished so easily, the condition itself rendered as if gone and to the senses so completely eliminated that there is now no reason why anyone should continue to suffer.

PYRAMID

is a composite application for both insertion and as a protective coating. It stops the ache or pain, prevents friction, contains medicaments that are absorbed by the swollen and protruding piles, these subside, their engorgements are broken up, the condition itself disappears and so far as any discomfort or conscious feeling is concerned your piles are gone completely.

More Than First Aid

The effect of this composite Pyramid Pile Treatment is more than just to relieve soreness and palliate pain. It acts as an antiseptic, it quiets the nervous strain, it annuls the pain, reduces inflammation and is a comprehensive home treatment, an inexpensive, thoroughly efficient first aid, and a continuous remedial agency that you may rely upon at all times for piles.

Thousands Report Recovery

The experiences of thousands with this composite Pyramid Pile Treatment show to what extent it has come to the rescue of people suffering a plague that sitting on thorns is none too graphic. And they further prove that they are all sufficient. You need no protracted treatment, no internal medication, nothing else whatsoever. Upwards of fifty thousand free sample packages have been mailed in a year to people who have written for a free trial. And it is from these that the wonderful letters come. The action of these remarkable composite Pyramid Pile Applications, sent free to try, is a revelation to those who have suffered over a long period of years.

Send for Free Trial

Pile sufferers usually have something at hand or some favorite ointment that has served a purpose perhaps for years. To prove how amazingly different and how marvelously more effective is this Pyramid Pile Treatment we urge everyone who suffers with itching, bleeding or protruding piles to send for a free trial. Prove how wonderfully effective they are and why they are now to be had almost anywhere of any druggist on the North American continent. Simply fill out the coupon and mail to Pyramid Drug Co., 659 Pyramid Bldg., Marshall, Mich., for a free trial.

Home-made, but Has No Equal for Coughs

Makes a Family Supply of Really Dependable Cough Medicine. Easily Prepared, and Saves About $2.

If you have a severe cough or chest cold accompanied with soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness, or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up during the night with croup and you want quick help, try this reliable old homemade cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This recipe makes a pint of really remarkable cough remedy. It tastes good, and in spite of its low cost, it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle and soothes and heals the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes with such promptness, ease and certainty that it is really astonishing.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds.

There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Don't let child stay bilious, constipated

Even Cross, Feverish, Sick Children Love its Delicious Taste and it Never Fails to Empty Little Bowels

A teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" now will quickly start liver and bowel action and in a few hours you have a well, playful child again. Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Fig Syrup" because it never fails to work the sour bile and constipation poison right out of the little stomach and bowels without cramping or overacting.

Tell your druggist you want only the genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother, you must say "California." Refuse any imitation.

LAST YEAR FOR SOLDIER CLAIMS

The time limit for filing a claim against the Government by soldiers of the late war is drawing to a close. The War Risk Insurance Act states: "That no compensation shall be payable unless a claim therefor be filed in case of disability within five years after discharge or resignation from the service. The time provided may be extended by the Director not to exceed one year for good cause shown."

As most of the men were discharged in 1919, this year will be the last year most of them can file claim except in extreme cases where the claim is sent to Washington and the Director allows the additional year.

The healthy look that DR. CALDWELL'S SYRUP PEPSIN Gives is Natures Own

Ladies! This Beats Cosmetics

GOOD health cannot be camouflaged by powder and rouge. The eyes will tell. That sparkle and clearness that denote good health will not be there if you are constipated. Mrs. Clara Proctor of Pottersville, Mich., had been told by doctors she had this and that disease, and one advised an operation, but she knew she had been constipated all her life so first tried Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. She avoided the operation and now feels better than she ever did. Likewise Mrs. William Appleton of Eddington, Pa., who was badly constipated and now looks her best again after using Syrup Pepsin.

On Sale for 30 Years

Intelligent women are realizing that health and mere outward complexion are two different things, and more and more are taking Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Over 10 million bottles were bought in drug stores last year, the largest selling liquid laxative in the world! Go to your druggist and buy a bottle. The cost is less than a cent a dose. You will see how much more effective a spoonful of Syrup Pepsin is than tablets, powders or pills, and without shock to the system.

Safe Family Laxative

Use it regularly a day before and a day after the periods. The gentle emptying of the bowels will give you great relief, and lessen headaches and congestion. Take a spoonful at bed-time and see how much better you feel in the morning. It is a vegetable compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with agreeable aromatics, and entirely safe not only for you but for the youngest child. Keep a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin constantly in the home for you or some other member of the family may need it any moment to relieve constipation, to break up fevers and colds, to clear up biliousness, indigestion, a pimple, a fever sore and other disturbances that show constipation.

ZOO SEA LION NEARLY OUTEATS ELEPHANT

Cost of Feeding Lion or Tiger Is Greater Than for a Hippopotamus.

It costs almost as much per day to feed a sea lion in captivity as it does to satisfy the hunger of an elephant. But it isn't at all dear to feed a deer. Furthermore, it costs about $17,000 a year to supply the "restaurant" of that animal hotel de luxe in St. Louis, the Forest Park Zoo, so that thousands of human beings of all ages may derive benefit and pleasure.

These facts and others about the food and feeding of the zoo denizens are related in data prepared for the Post-Dispatch by Supt. Vierheller of the Zoo.

Just as the cry, "Here comes the elephants!" focuses attention of circus parade spectators, so does, "There's the elephant house!" guide Zoo visitors. Peculiar interest always attaches to the pachyderms. You'd think to see "Miss Jim," the big lady elephant, scooping up her daily ration of 50 pounds of hay, 11 pounds of wheat bran and six pounds of carrots, potatoes, apples, cabbage, celery and bread that she must "eat her head off," but it costs only 90 cents a day to feed her. There's a big African specimen in the Bronx Zoo whose daily diet is said to cost nearly $8, but, as Kipling might say, "That's another elephant."

Lions Outeat "Hippo."

Most of the guests at Hotel Zoo eat only one meal a day, since they keep to their "rooms." But the four sea lions, who think every day is a good day to swim about in the open, are fed twice. Each time each of them gets three and a half pounds of good fish, and the daily bill for each is 84 cents.

Our other elephant, "Martha," is more sparing than the sea lions and other zoo mates, but then she is small, eating 44 pounds of the same kind of stuff "Miss Jim" gets daily. Her check is 67 cents.

The lions and the tigers out-eat the hippopotamus. "Steve," the lumbering hippo, perhaps because he's about as tough as the elephants, orders from the same bill-of-fare a total of 41—not calories, as in dairy lunchrooms, but pounds—and his keeper punches his ticket at 66 cents. Each lion and tiger gulps down eight to 12 pounds of meat a day, which costs 85 cents. Their stomachs get a rest on Sunday, though. They aren't choosy so their fare is mostly horse meat, with about four beefsteak dinners monthly and a little snack of horse liver every week.

Chimpanzees' Varied Menu.

The "Mayor" of the zoo, little "Henry Kiel," chimpanzee, has the choicest menu, for he is subject to not only temperament but indigestion. In the morning he gets cocoa and hard biscuit or whole wheat bread for an eye-opener, and in the afternoon he gets cooked carrots in milk, or sliced fruit, cooked rice or custard, though sometimes hard biscuits are substituted to keep his teeth sound. His food costs 13 cents a day. His antics, which amuse children and adults, make his care worth while. When he came to the zoo, a youngster, nearly two years ago, he weighed 16 pounds. Now he weighs 29.

"Sam," the big orang-outang, who weighs as much as a lively boy and is as strong as a couple of men, dines for 20 cents, getting cooked potatoes, carrots, an orange, half an apple, a banana, two slices of white bread, half an onion and a pint of milk. The small and scrappy monkeys get along on a nickel's worth of vegetables a day.

What the Bears Eat.

The Alaskan brown, or Kadiak bears, huge fellows, eat whole-wheat bread, hard biscuits, apples, carrots, head lettuce, celery and fish, at 48 cents a day apiece. Outside of that, they eat anything they can get, therefore keepers give them half rations Saturdays and nothing Sundays; the public does the rest. Officials of other zoos are aghast at this, but Supt. Vierheller feels it is better to check their diet a little more closely and let the visitors have the fun of watching them play as they chase edibles thrown to them. Some visitors have to be cautioned not to overdo the thing. The other bears eat the same sort of stuff in smaller quantities, and some of them hibernate.

Facts as to feed and daily cost for some other specimens are: Leopards and jaguars, five pounds of meat, 40 cents; mountain lions, meat and fish, alternated, 42 cents, wild dogs, pound of steamed meat and quarter pound of hard biscuit, 10 cents; hyena, three pounds of meat, 28 cents; buffaloes, three quarts of crushed grain and 13 pounds of hay, 19 cents, small deer quart of crushed grain and seven pounds of hay, 9 cents.

Birds' Tastes Like Cat Tribe's.

The eagles, hawks and vultures are not original in their tastes, taking meat and fish like other "guests" and getting by for 4 to 8 cents a day, each. The pelican gets a pound and a quarter of fish past his big bill, at a cost of 15 cents. The ostriches, incidentally, have had no occasion to cackle (or whatever ostriches do) about the scarcity of bananas.

The exact cost of zoo food for the last fiscal year was $16,933.40 and the census of specimens at the end of that period, in April, was 852. The keepers passed out in the year 45,600 pounds of horse meat, 30,000 pounds of whole-wheat bread, 30,000 pounds of fish and 7009 pounds of hard biscuits. Orders for corn, oats and bran aggregated more than 52 tons; for hay, more than 79 tons, and corn meal, 8435 pounds. Grass cut from the park lawns is not used because the animals require cured hay. Some other articles of food used are birdseed, eggs, raisins, rice, sugar and rock salt.

A Sure Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you 90 per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.

Complete Early Removal Is Essential, Says Head of College of Surgeons.

Dr. Albert J. Ochsner, president of the American College of Surgeons, who is in St. Louis attending the sessions of the College at Hotel Statler, yesterday authorized a statement that he is "convinced cancer is an infectious disease and that prevention will depend upon the elimination of irritation and contact with filth both externally and internally."

Dr. Ochsner's statement was made at the request of the St. Louis Committee of the American Society for the Control of Cancer, which last week conducted a campaign to acquaint the public with such facts about cancer as are known to the medical profession.

"Cancer always begins at a definite, circumscribed point," said Ochsner. "At first, it advances by simple invasion of the surrounding tissues. Later, the cancer infection is carried to distant points of the body through the lymph channels, which are invaded by the original growth, forming new growths.

"Before the primary cancer infection has been carried abroad by the lymph channels, it positively can be cured by free removal with the knife, or still better, with the cautery.

When There Is Little Hope.

"In case the cancer infection has been carried to a distance from the original growth, because the latter has been permitted to grow too long or because it has been incompletely removed, there is little hope for a permanent cure, although occasionally a case can be saved by the use of the X-ray carefully applied by an expert.

"Realization of the importance of immediate, extremely thorough removal will save thousands of lives which are now lost because of procrastination or incomplete removal. It is for this reason that patients and physicians alike should act at once upon suspecting the presence of cancer and should consult immediately a physician or surgeon of experience.

"The actual cause of cancer has not been definitely proven to the satisfaction of all observers who are entitled to an opinion. Most authorities agree that cancer is most common in persons advanced in years and that occurrence of cancer is practically always preceded by long continued irritation and occasionally by trauma.

Filth Is Factor.

"Heredity seems to have a definite effect upon the occurrence of cancer. Because parents and offspring are exposed to similar conditions, what appears as heredity may be due to exposure to the same sources of irritation and infection.

"Filth has a definite influence upon the occurrence of cancer. Persons who keep their skins scrupulously clean by the use of daily baths, as, for example, the Japanese, are relatively free from skin cancer. Persons suffering from filthy skins are likely to suffer from skin cancer, if the necessary local irritation is present.

"Dr. John Nuzum has demonstrated the presence of a filtrable micrococcus in a large number of specimens of human cancer and the same michococcus in many cancers obtained from animals. Following repeated injections of pure cultures of this micrococcus obtained from human cancers into the breasts of white mice and into the breasts of old dogs, typical cancer developed in several of these animals which died later.

"Taking all of the above facts together, I am convinced that cancer is an infectious disease, and that prevention will depend upon the elimination of irritation and contact with filth, both externally and internally."

TRUST CO. TAKES OVER AFFAIRS OF CHIPPEWA BANK

Court Approves Sale of $1,000,000 Notes, the Building and Equipment of Defunct Institution.

Liquidation of the Closed Chippewa Bank, 3801 South Broadway, was assured yesterday when Circuit Judge Frey approved a contract submitted by State Finance Commissioner Millspaugh enabling sale of the bank building and equipment, and at least $1,000,000 of its notes to a newly organized banking concern, to be known as the Chippewa Trust Co. It will open for business tomorrow in the quarters of the Chippewa Bank.

Depositors of the defunct Chippewa Bank will be advanced 50 per cent of their claims by the Chippewa Trust Co., and other payments will be made as liquidation of the bank by the State Finance Department progresses. The deposits totaled $2,282,819.

As has been told, the bank was closed Dec. 20, last, after Joseph S. Carr, organizer, principal stockholder and for 17 years cashier, admitted manipulation of the bank's accounts. He is under $25,000 bond to answer any charge that may be filed against him.

State bank examiners have not completed their examination of the bank's books. As exclusively related in the Post-Dispatch, Dec. 29, last, the shortage is placed at not less than $644,000.

Stockholders Face Total Loss.

Various proposals for reorganization have been pending since the bank was closed, in some of which officers and directors of the bank were active. Establishment of the new trust company, controlled by bankers connected with the International Bank of St. Louis, and sale of the assets, means the passing of the Chippewa Bank.

Holdings of the stockholders of the defunct bank are wiped out by the shortage and there is slight chance for any recovery by them, it was said yesterday.

In the hearing before Judge Frey yesterday, Commissioner Millspaugh expressed the opinion that the depositors would get "almost the face value of their deposits, if not the full face value." He declared the plan for the sale of the assets an advantageous one for the depositors.

Capital stock, surplus, undivided profits, and other items standing against a loss to the depositors, including Carr's $50,000 bond as cashier, total approximately $400,000, and various assets of Carr have been turned over to apply to the shortage.

Under the contract approved yesterday, the banking house, equipment and other real estate are purchased at their book value, $69,950. It provides that within two weeks the Chippewa Trust Co. will purchase $1,000,000 in notes of the Chippewa Bank at their face value, with adjustments for interest, and less offsets of customers who ask credit of their bank balances against their notes.

Provisions in Contract of Sale.

Loans of the bank totaled $2,134,734 on the day it closed. The remaining $1,134,734 in notes will remain in the hands of the Commissioner at present. However, the contract provides that the Chippewa Trust Co. shall from time to time purchase from these assets such additional notes as may be found to be good banking loans, as fast as the finances of the trust company permit.

The contract provides that the Chippewa Trust Co. shall make additional advances to depositors who assign their claims, as collections made in the liquidation justify them. Under the law governing liquidation of banks, such advances, in addition to the initial one of 50 per cent, probably will not be forthcoming for six months.

Office space will be provided in the trust company for State Examiner Charles N. Gilles and his assistants, in charge of the liquidation. All funds collected in the liquidation will be deposited in the Chippowa Trust Co.

Articles of incorporation for the Chippewa Trust Co. already have been filed. Millspaugh said yesterday a charter would be issued at once by the Finance Department. The capital stock is $200,000, divided in 2000 shares, and the surplus is $50,000. At the hearing yesterday the International Bank presented a certificate that this $250,000 was on deposit there to the credit of the Chippewa Trust Co.

Control of the trust company is in the hands of George A. Meyer, chairman of the board of the International Bank, who will be president, and Edward A. Downing, who will retire as a vice president of the International Bank to become vice president of the Chippewa Trust Co.

The board of directors includes Meyer, 1000 shares; Downing, 500 shares; former Circuit Judge William T. Jones, 350 shares; Theodore C. Meyer, 100 shares; Robt. Wohlwend Sr., merchant; Dr. R. S. Vitt, Charles Mueller, merchant; Edward S. Munsch, assistant treasurer, and Ben E. Bradshaw, merurer, and Ban E. Bradshaw, mer- of the Chippewa Bank.

Fine Galsworthy Play, "Loyalties," Arrives; So Does "Moonlight"

Former at American Tonight, Latter at Jefferson—Ruth St. Denis at Odeon, "Tiger Rose" at Empress, Donald Brian at Orpheum.

ACCLAIMED as "an impeccable play, flawlessly performed," John Galsworthy's "Loyalties" begins a week's engagement tonight at the American with several of the original English cast which carried the drama through its long run at the Gaiety Theater, New York. The Shubert-Jefferson, starting tonight, gives the final touring try-out to a musical comedy called "Moonlight," which is scheduled to go directly to New York and open at the Longacre Theater on Wednesday night of next week.

Ruth St. Denis, Ted Shawn and the Denishawn Dancers appear at the Odeon on Friday and Saturday nights in a series of dramatic dance visualizations, drawn in part from Indian, Spanish, Aztec and Oriental sources. The offering of the Woodward Players, at the Empress, is Willard Mack's melodrama of the Canadian Northwest, "Tiger Rose," in which Lenore Ulric starred for several years under the management of David Belasco. The Orpheum's featured player is Donald Brian, the original Prince Donilo in "The Merry Widow," who will give a series of excerpts from musical plays in which he has caroled and danced.

"Loyalties" was first produced in London during March, 1922, and was presented in New York the next September by the director of the London production, Basil Dean. There are enough "loyalties" in the story to make the title no misnomer.

Esprit de Corps.

THERE is "Loyalty No. 1," esprit de corps, the loyalty of his comrades to a soldier and gentleman. Capt, Ronald Dancy, D. S. O., and Ferdinand de Levis, a Jew, are fellow guests at a country house. De Levis is robbed, and accuses the Captain. Loyalty No. 1 brings the men of his caste to his side. They warn De Levis that, as there is no evidence, he must not make his accusation public, or they will see that he is socially ostracized.

Here they encounter Loyalty No 2, which is the Jew's pride of race and defiant scorn of the anti-Semitism with which "society" oppresses him. He does repeat his charge in public, in a London club. Enter Loyalty No. 3, the club spirit. This decrees that the men must fight out the question in the courts, for either one is a thief or the other a libeler, and the club must know which of them deserves to be expelled.

The affair is taken to court, but while the trial is proceeding evidence of the Captain's certain guilt is placed in the hands of his solicitor. Captain and lawyer are old friends, and Mrs. Dancy, a bride, is a sweet little thing. But the attorney must not betray the honor of his profession (Loyalty No. 4); he must withdraw from the case, although this means the wreck of Dancy.

Too Many Loyalties Fatal.

THE Captain's old school fellow and comrade in the trenches cannot understand this professional loyalty; he thinks that the proper thing (Loyalty No. 6) is to stick to your friend, right or wrong. Anyhow, the Captain is a ruined man, and, when the police knock at the door, puts a bullet through his heart.

The company to be seen here includes James Dale, whose performance as De Levis has been highly praised; Charles Quartermaine, Victor Tandy, Herbert Bunston, Charles Esdale, Wilfrid Seagram,

What They Are Doing In Movie Studios

"Her Man" has been selected as the releasing title for "Cape Cod Folks," Reginald Barker's latest production for Louis B. Mayer, based on the old stage classic of New England seafaring life. Filmed for presentation as a Metro special, "Her Man" pictures fiery, tempestuous romance in the setting of a quaint fishing village with the terrors of the sea and the daring of the courageous young seamen adding color and punch to the story.

Two former ambassadors and a former Secretary of the Treasury were among a party of distinguished guests who recently watched the filming of several scenes for "America," the screen epic of the Revolution which D. W. Griffith is making for the D. A. R. at his Mamaroneck studios.

Fred Stanton and Betty Brown have been added to the cast of the next Preferred picture, "Poisoned Paradise," from the novel by Robert W. Service. Other players in this new production are Kenneth Harlan, Clara Bow, Carmel Myers, Raymond Griffith and Josef Swickard.

Those who have pondered on just what the censors would do if they had a free hand to write the stories they later delete, will receive with interest the announcement that included in the next series of Preferred Pictures to be produced by B. P. Schulberg is "When a Woman Reaches Forty." This is an original screen story written by Royal A. Baker, motion picture censor for the city of Detroit, who in his spare time finds an opportunity to be an author of note.

Carmel Myers, famous for her screen wardrobe, probably has outdone all her previous performances by appearing in the casino scenes of "Poisoned Paradise" in a gown of spun silver thread and brilliants. The combination is such that even Clara Bow, heroine of the story, admitted that Kenneth Harlan might

"The Humming Bird," and "Anna Christie" on Photoplay Bills

"Woman to Woman," "Held to Answer" and "Only a Shopgirl" Also Showing Here—Special Music Features at Several Theaters.

GLORIA SWANSON in "The Humming Bird" is the photoplay feature at the Missouri this week. The story is an adaptation of the stage play by Maude Fulton. Miss Swanson alternates between the characters of "The Humming Bird," leader of a gang of Paris Apaches, and the sweetheart of an American newspaper man. As the latter character her beauty and clothes are the rage of Paris. The locale of the story centers around the Montmarte section of Paris where artists, Apaches and Bohemians mingle in the restaurants and wine shops.

On the stage is featured the Terrace Garden Orchestra of Chicago. This band is composed of 10 artists who play the very latest fox trots. It is under the direction of William J. Johnston. Miss Eldora Stanford, coloratura soprano from New York, sings a cycle of semiclassical songs.

"Anna Christie," Eugene O'Neil's play, which won the Pulitzer prize for the best American drama, comes to the Grand Central and West End Lyric theaters this week. Blanche Sweet, William Russell and George Marion, who created the role of "Chris" in the stage version, are featured.

Lloyd (Ham) Hamilton's new comedy, "My Friend," is on the program at both theaters, together with the usual short film subjects. As a special attraction, Dave Silverman's West End Lyric Orchestra will play a jazz concert on the stage at the Grand Central.

"Anna Christie" is the story of a girl with a past, due for the most part to the neglect of her sailor father. Two remarkable character studies—the girl and the father—make it notable.

"Held to Answer," adapted from the story by Peter Clark MacFarlane, is the week's attraction at the Delmonte and Capitol Theaters. House Peters is starred, with a cast including Evelyn Brent, James Morrison, Lydia Knott and "Bull" Montana.

The Delmonte's stage attraction is the Graves Brothers' Revue, while the Capitol features the Lloyd Hamilton comedy, "My Friend," and Billy Kitts' musical specialties.

"Held to Answer" is the story of a man who is revered by all—an independent church worker who practices his missionary efforts at home and becomes a widely respected celebrity. An actress, whom he formerly loved, comes upon the scene to complicate matters with her jealous temperament, upon learning that the man no longer cares for her.

She plans and hopes to ruin him in the eyes of his followers so that he will become dependent upon her. The opportunity comes through a weak youth who has contracted gambling debts and the minister is accused of robbery. He is convicted by his congregation on circumstantial evidence and his resignation is demanded, but in the end the weakling becomes endowed with strength enough to confess his guilt.

The week's picture feature at the Kings is "Woman to Woman." This was produced in England, but has an American star, Betty Compson. It is the story of a young soldier in the world war who loved a French dancing girl, then lost his memory and married another. Later the dancing girl again appears on the scene with her son. The

Leo Carillo Plays Providence in 'Gypsy Jim'

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—IN THE new comedy of which Leo Carillo is star, "Gyspy Jim," which opened Monday night at the Forty-ninth Street Theater, he has the role of a nomad who happens into a drab home and immediately sets good luck to work. The young boy of the house, who is about to kill himself, accepts a good job instead. The heroine decides not to run away with the villain. The unsuccessful lawyer acquires a practice and his gloomy wife loses her backache and becomes cheerful. The gyspy is of course a highly marriageable millionaire in disguise, and all the seeming strokes of luck are actually arranged by him. In the last act he marries the heroine.

The schemes of the hero work altogether too smoothly to be convincing. His plan for inspiriting the downhearted would be more credible if it were 85 per cent effective instead of a crowded 100. Its perfection prevents one from believing in it.

Carillo is an actor of undoubted promise. He has grace, vitality and humor. His performance is one of the factors which carry the play over some dull stretches. Yet the ability of the man is seriously compromised by one of the most abundant sets of mannerisms in the theater today. The best acting is that of Elizabeth Patterson, who gives a truthful, moving and amusing performance as a nagging old woman. The heroine is played by the most beautiful of current ingenues, Martha Bryan Allen, who besides can act. The play, by Oscar Hammerstein and Milton Herbert Gropper, gives her very slight opportunity.

First of Pirandello Cycle.

THE first of a proposed cycle of plays by Luigi Pirandello will be "The Living Masks" and it will be presented Monday night at the Forty-fourth Street Theater, with a cast starring Arnold Korff, a Viennese actor, and Ernita Lascalles. "Mr. Pitt," dramatized from Zona Gale's novel, "Birth," will have its premiere Tuesday night at the Thirty-ninth Street Theater. Walter Huston, a player recruited from vaudeville, is featured.

"Lollypop," a musical comedy by Zelda Sears and Vincent Youmans, which has been skirmishing for some weeks in the outstkirts of the city, will invade Broadway Monday night at the Knickerbocker. Henry W. Savage is the producer, and Ada May Weeks the star. Another musical comedy, "Sweet Little Devil," featuring Constance Binney, is to begin its career Monday night. "The Gift," a play by Julia Chandler and Alethea Luce, will be offered Tuesday evening at the Greenwich Village Theater. Doris Kenyon and Pedro de Cordoba lead the cast.

Who Is Sutton Vane?

THE author of the much-discussed play, "Outward Bound," is Vane Sutton-Vane, who prefers to be known as Sutton Vane. Until his recent success, he was a rather obscure young actor, who once played in New York in an unheralded music hall sketch. He is 35 years old. His first two plays, a farce and a crook melodrama, were failures. No London manager would so much as touch "Outward Bound," so Vane produced it himself, at the tiny Everyman Theater in Hampstead, at a cost of $600. The idea of the play came to him as he lay shell-shocked in an Eqyptian hospital.

Despite his extraordinary success and his wife and four children, Eddie Cantor rises to remark that he still looks like a boy. While "Kid Boots" was having its try-out in Pittsburg, he relates, one day he noticed that a woman, getting off a street car just ahead of him, had dropped her purse. He picked it up, ran after her, and returned it. She thanked him, and as he turned to go, called him back. "Come here, little boy," she said, and handed him a quarter. Cantor's earnings in Pittsburg that week were something like $3100.

Sir John Martin-Harvey will begin in a week his engagement of a month at the Great Northern Theater, Chicago, in classical repertory. . . . The story is told that one afternoon, at her Chicago hotel, Mme Galli-Curci heard a knock at her door. She opened it; the caller was Duse, who explained that she was lonely. According to a report of the conversation, the Italian tragedienne said: "I gave away all my money during the war and I must act. I have to fight to do it. Each time I go on the stage I say, 'God, help me through this, and I'll never ask anything else.' "

Hackett's First Appearance.

HAVING returned from a three-years' absence in Europe, James K. Hackett will make his first public appearance in New York at the Actors' Fund benefit Friday afternoon at the Jolson Theater. * * * Florenz Ziegfeld announces that he has signed a 10-year contract with Shirley Vernon, Marilyn Miller's successor in "Sally." * * * After a dozen years in the films, Clara Kimball Young will return to the legitimate stage as the star of William Hurlburt's "Trimmed in Scarlet."

When "The Swan" passed its one hundredth performance recently, it was said to have played to $250,000. * * * A new play written for George Arliss is called "The Carrousel," by Dmitri Stephen. * * * With the new scale of prices at the Century, "The Miracle" can play to a maximum of $50,000 a week. It is estimated that the spectacle will have to run three months at capacity to break even. * * * The Gaiety Theater, with the closing of "Aren't We All?" is at last to be taken over by a moving picture. * * * Martin Beck's new West Side Theater, on Forty-fifth street between Eighth and Ninth avenues, is to open with a comedy by Moliere.

Makes Fat People Slim

New York Physician Perfects Harmless Method of Reducing Weight.

The loss of as much as a pound of excess flesh a day with no harmful results is the record made by many patients of Dr. W. Q. Newman, a licensed practicing physician of 286 Fifth Avenue, New York, who announces that he has perfected a treatment which has quickly rid fat people of excess weight. What is more remarkable is the Doctor's statement that he has successfully treated thousands of patients for fat reduction with no change of diet or unnecessary exercise. It is also said that fat people who suffer from chronic rheumatism, gout, asthma and high blood pressure obtain great relief from the reduction of their superfluous flesh. Realizing that this sounds almost too good to be true, the Doctor has offered to send without charge to anyone who will write him, a free trial treatment to prove his claims. If you want to rid yourself of superfluous fat, write him today.

Gasnier has been named by B. P. Schulberg to direct the Preferred picturization of Edwin Balmer's novel, "The Breath of Scandal," which is soon to go into production. The choice of the complete cast is now being made following the announcement that one of the principal roles will be given to Ethel Shannon, who has lately completed the lead in "Maytime."

Waldemar Young of the editorial staff at the Schulberg Studios, is adapting Frederick Orin Bartlett's novel, "The Triflers." This will be one of the productions to be started in the next few weeks by Preferred Pictures.

Thomas Meighan and the company which will support him in "Write Your Own Ticket," are at Palatka, Fla., where the exterior scenes for the picture will be made. Virginia Valli will play the leading feminine role and others in the cast are Laurence Wheat, Charles Dow Clark, David Higgins and James Lepsley.

Located after a countrywide search, during which thousands of photographs were examined, and more than 100 actors, including a number of Broadway stars, were interviewed in person, Arthur Dewey has been selected by D. W. Griffith to portray the role of George Washington in "America," the photodrama of the War of Independence, which he is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Every Gray Hair a Sign Post of Age

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

Girl Essays Work Auer Thought Too Hard

A YOUNG Louisville girl, Miss Ruth Breton, a pupil of Leopold Auer, will make her first St. Louis appearance this afternoon at the Odeon as soloist of the Symphony Orchestra's popular concert. She will play Tschaikowsky's Violin Concerto in D Major, which, strangely enough, Auer himself refused to play when it was first written, on the ground that it was too difficult. That idea has long been abandoned, but the work remains a test of virtuoso playing.

The program, which includes an orchestral version of Schubert's "Ave Maria," will be as follows:

1. "Marcho Tzigane"	Reyer
2. Overture to "Der Freischuetz"	Weber
3. Concerto for Violin in D Major, Op. 35	Tschaikowsky
I. Allegro moderato.
II. Andante: Cazonetta.
III. Finale: Allegro.
4. "Ave Maria"	Schubert
5. Two German Dances	Unger
6. Polonaise from "Eugen Onegin"	Tschaikowsky

Blind Pianist to Play.

THERE will be no regular concerts this week. At next Sunday afternoon's popular concert the orchestra will present two St. Louisans as soloists—Olive Piatt Bischoff, mezzo-soprano, and Horace White, blind pianist, who will play with the orchestra Liszt's Concerto in E flat. The vocal number will be the aria, "O don fatale," from Verdi's "Don Carlos."

For the concert pair of Jan. 31 and Feb. 1 Mr. Ganz announces an all-Russian program, without a soloist, and featuring Rachmaninoff's Second Symphony. Liadoff's "La Enchante" and "Une Tabatiere a Musique" will be played for the first time in this city, and Glazounoff's "Overture Solennelle" will be performed for the first time at the Symphony concerts. It was played here by a small orchestra during the most recent visit of Mme. Pavlowa and her ballet. Another number will be an excerpt from Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Le coq d'or"—"Introduction and Cortege des Noces."

Soloists to Be Heard.

SOLOISTS announced for the remainder of the season are as follows: Feb. 7 and 8, Ignace Friedman, pianist; Feb. 21-22, Ethel Leginska, pianist; Feb. 28-29, Erika Morini, violinist; March 6 and 7, Frieda Hempel, soprano, and March 13 and 14, Joseph Schwartz, baritone.

Friedman will play Chopin's Concerto in E Minor, and Miss Leginska will offer Mozart's Concerto in A and Liszt's "Hungarian Fantasy." Miss Morini's number will be Bruch's G Minor Concerto. Mme. Hempel will sing two arias—"Ombra Leggiera" ("Shadow Song"), from Meyerbeer's "Dinorah," and "Deh vieni, non tarder," from Mozart's "Le Nocce di Figaro." Schwartz will appear twice on the Wagner-Tschaikowsky program with which the regular series will close, and on which the principal offering will be the "Pathetique" Symphony.

FINE GALESWORTHY PLAY, "LOYALTIES," ARRIVES, SO DOES "MOONLIGHT"

Based on "I Love You."

THE musical comedy at the Shubert-Jefferson is taken from William Le Baron's farce of a few years past, "I Love You." The lyrics are by William B. Friedlander and the music by Con Conway. The piece was warmly received in Chicago, on its presentation there two weeks ago.

The story tells how a young millionaire, of sporting tendencies and a rather cynical idea about love, makes a bet that he can produce the tender emotion in any pair of presentable young people. He attempts to stage-manage a romance between a horny-handed young electrician and a high-born maiden of the country-house set, by the aid of cozy corners, dim lights, a harvest moon, a book of poems and the amorous croonings of a violin. The scheme works, but not on the right people. Through this story bubble the customary songs, choruses and dances.

Allyn King, formerly of the "Follies," and Maxine Brown have joined the cast preliminary to the comedy's adventure on Broadway. Miss Brown is Honorary Colonel of the 6th United States Infantry, stationed at Jefferson Barracks. The prima donna is Elsa Ersi, a Hungarian singer, who is making her American debut in this piece. She is said to have played in Europe for the last three years in "The Golden Bird," by Franz Lehar. Ernest Glendinning plays the philandering electrician.

"Helen of Troy, N. Y."

A MUSICAL comedy satirizing the collar trade, "Helen of Troy, New York," is announced for next Sunday night at the American, with a cast including Queenie Smith and Helen Ford. It will be followed in turn by Robert B. Mantell's annual visit in Shakspearean plays, and George White's "Scandals." "Irene" will revisit the Shubert-Jefferson next week, and this playhouse promises Walker Whiteside in two plays, "Mr. Wu" and "The Hindoo," during February.

Friday night's program at the Odeon will consist of the following dance numbers: "The Spirit of the Sea," Miss St. Denis, Ted Shawn and others; "The Feather of the Dawn," a Pueblo pastoral, Ted Shawn, Louise Brooks, Pauline Lawrence and ensemble; "Cuadro Flamenco," a Spanish dance, Miss St. Denis, Shawn and ensemble; "Ishter of the Seven Gates," a dance of the Babylonion Aphrodite, Miss St. Denis, Shawn and ensemble and six divertissements.

"Xochitl," a Toltec Legend.

SATURDAY evening's program includes visualizations of compositions by Beethoven, Chopin, Chaminade, Brahms and Manna Zucca; "A Spanish Suite" of two numbers, "In the Garden" and a Moszkowski waltz; "Xochitl," a dance drama based on an ancient Toltec legend; and a series of scenes from China, Crete, India, Siam, Japan, Java and Egypt.

As many will remember, the story of "Tiger Rose" presents a maiden, Rose Bocion, who is a passionate and impetuous child of nature, and who defies the law itself, in the person of Constable Michael Devlin, of the Royal Northwestern Mounted Police, when that law seeks to lay hands on her lover. The melodrama works to a thrilling climax. Hazel Whitmore will play Rose, and Alexis Luce the Irish Constable, at the Empress.

In addition to Donald Brian's act, the Orpheum announces Theodore and Julie Befeki, Russian dancers, in a comedy spectacle called the "Theater Grotesque," with Sophie Rossove, Marie Cherer, Gregory Dniestroff and Fyodor Ramsh. Other turns listed are those of Raymond Bond and a troupe, in "The Minute Men;" Mlle. Anne Codee, singing comedienne; Willie Schenk, funny equilibrist; Will and Gladys Ahern, who play with ropes; and the [illegible] Four vocal quartet.

Vaudeville and Burlesque.

THE Rialto Theater lists [illegible] Gould, with impersonations of stage players; D. Apollon and a trio of dancers in "Bi, Ba, Bo," a Russian offering; Ernest [illegible], singer and monologist; Rome and Gaut, comics and dancers, the Klown Revue, with the [illegible] Brothers, and Harry Moore, who does queer things with pieces of paper.

The Columbia's bill is led by Stanley, Doyle, Reno and [illegible] Wynn, in an act with special staging called "Harmonious Moments." Others include Billy Walsh, in song, dance and chatter; Ross and Foss, in a musical turn; the Flying Nelsons, aerialists; and Gordon's Comedy Canines, otherwise a dozen fox terriers. The picture is "Only a Shop Girl," after Charles E. Blaney's play, with Estelle Taylor, Mae Bush, Tully Marshall, Wallace Beery, James Harrison, Claire Dubrey and Josephine Adair.

The schedule at the Grand Opera House comprises Steffi [illegible], Reinhardt Roland and a staff of lady pugilists; Skelly and [illegible], singers and mimics; Ralph [illegible] and Jim Reany, comedians; [illegible] Holmes and Iva Holliston, [illegible] O'Hara, and several others. The Gayety's burlesque offering is "The Silk Stocking Revue," with Frank X. Silk and Celeste and Margaret Busch, said to be former St. Louis girls.

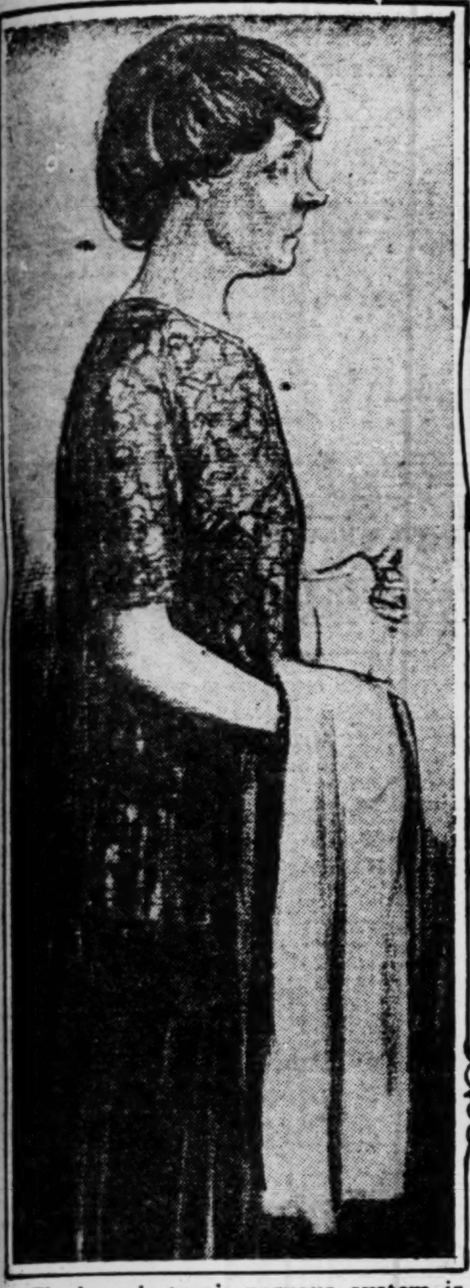
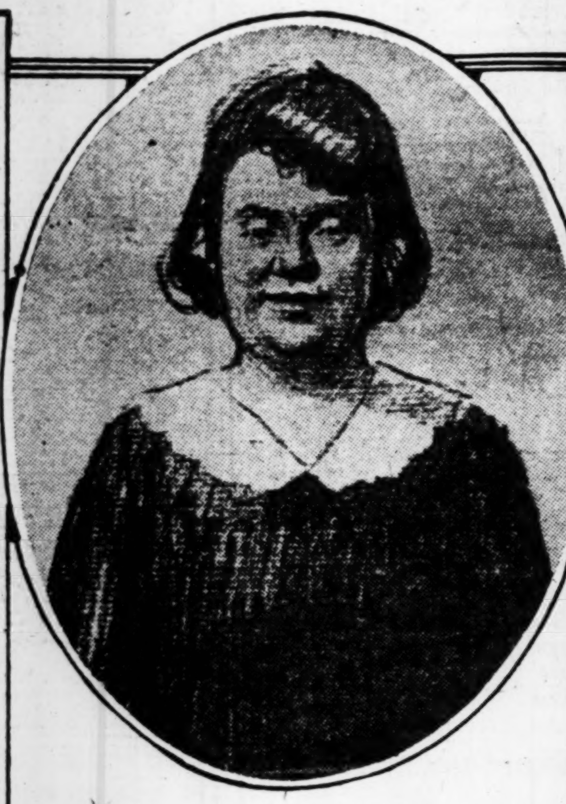
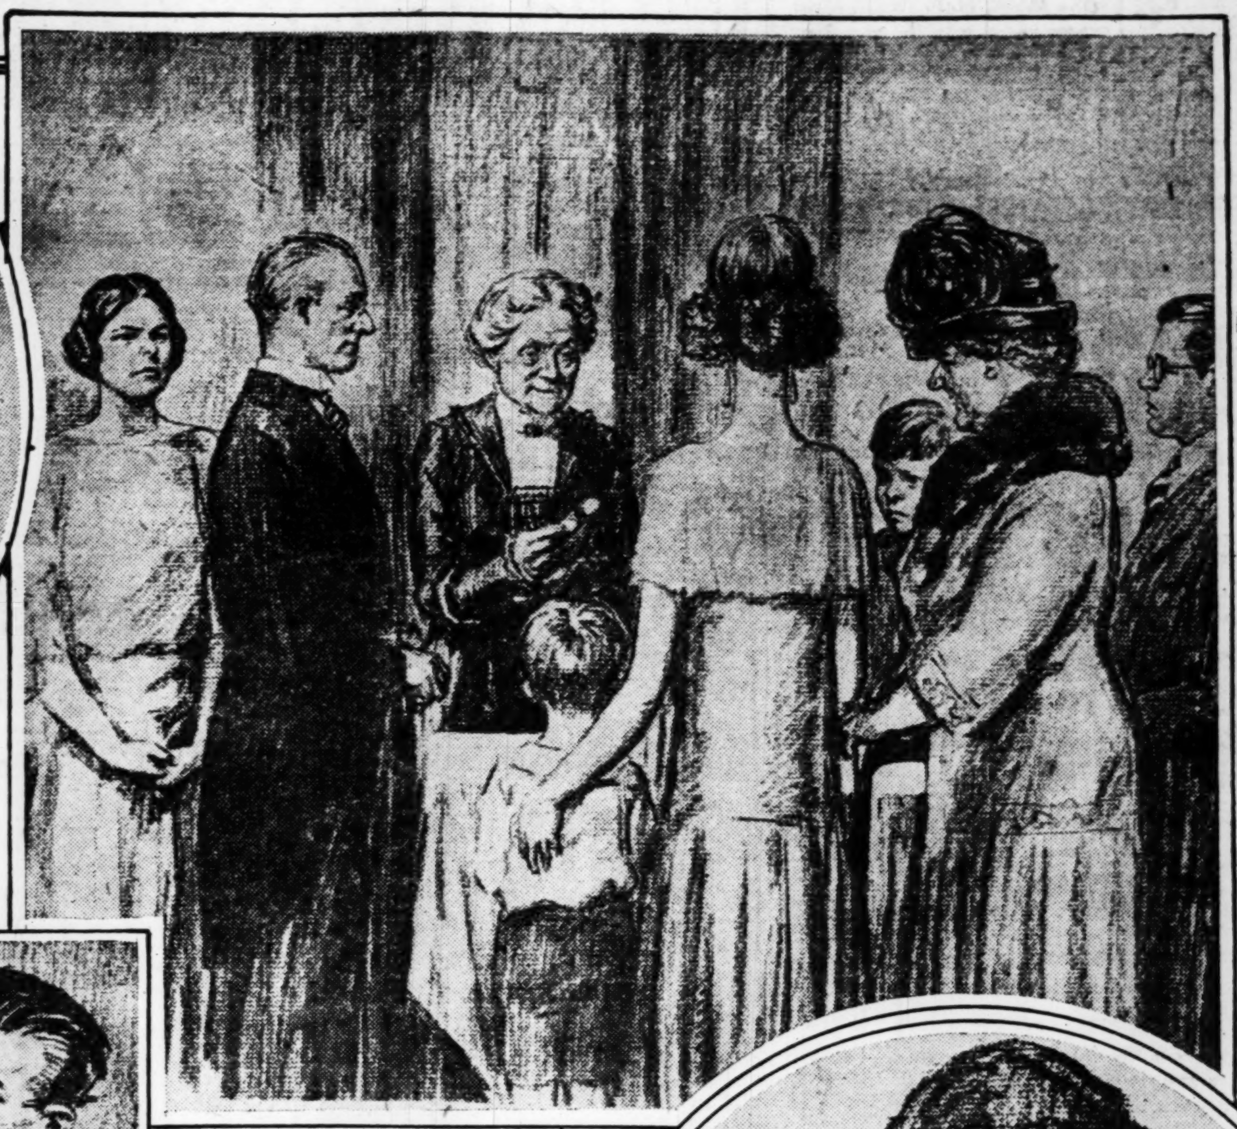
Drawn by W. E. Hill for the Sunday Post-Dispatch



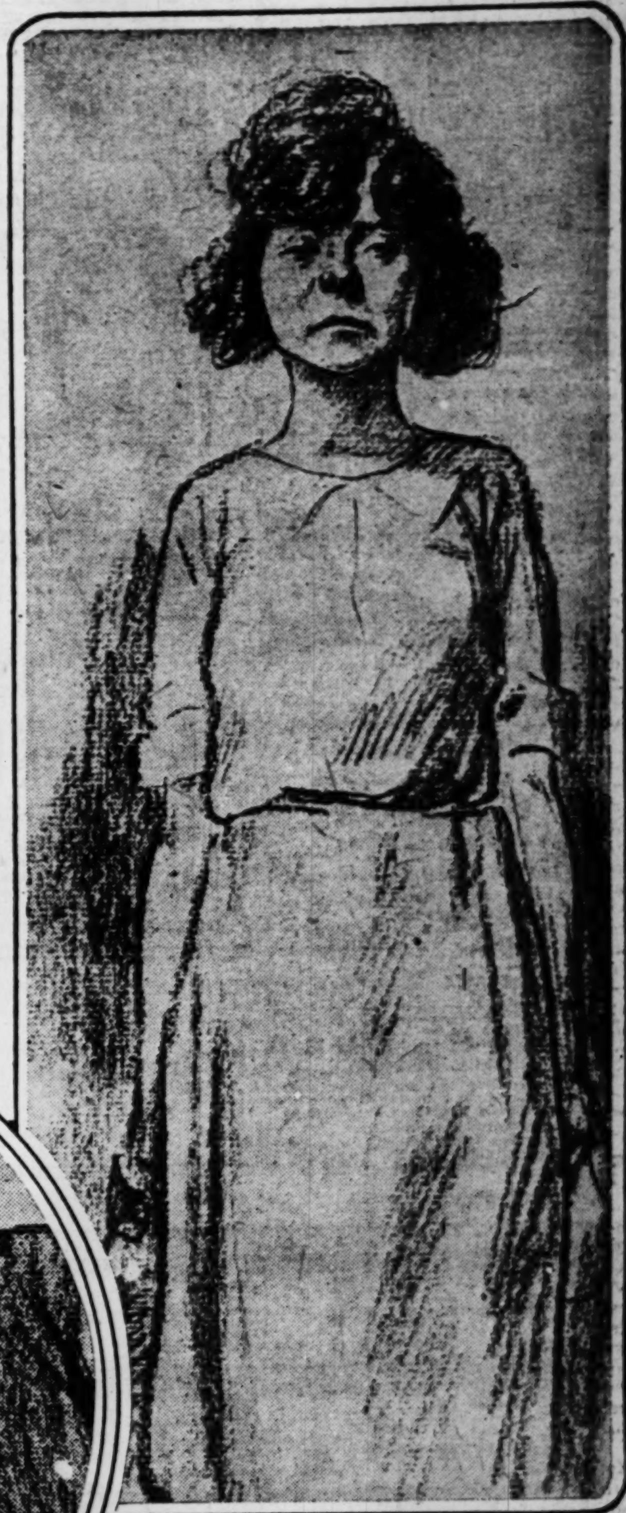
The housekeeper's nervous system is, to use her very own expression, worn to a frazzle, what with Mrs. Kibbe calling up twice in a morning to complain about Mary, the chambermaid, and the hole in Mr. Kibbe's carpet. Someone is always wanting something in this world.



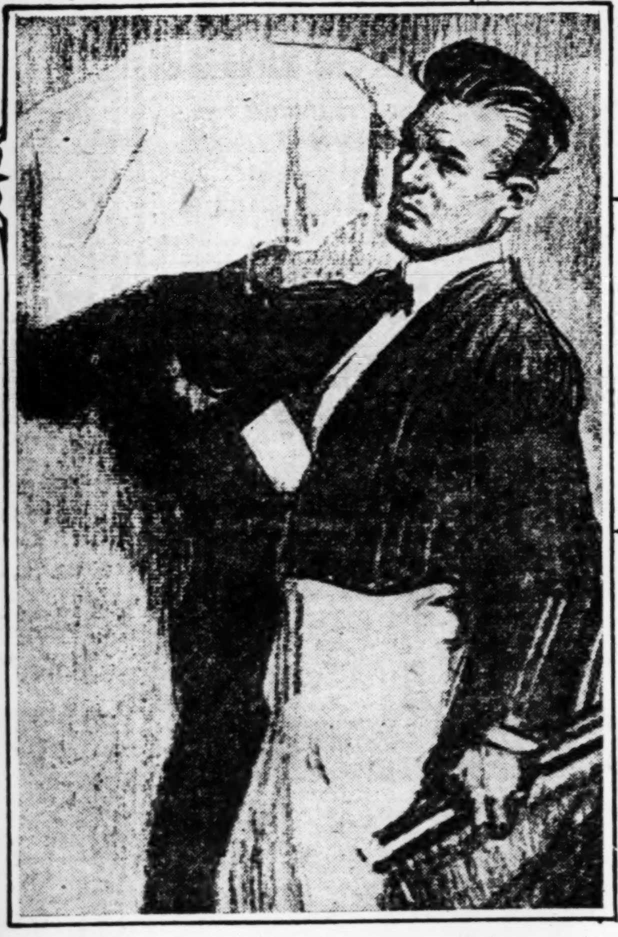
A perfect lady in every respect is the head waitress, Mrs. Mae Healy.



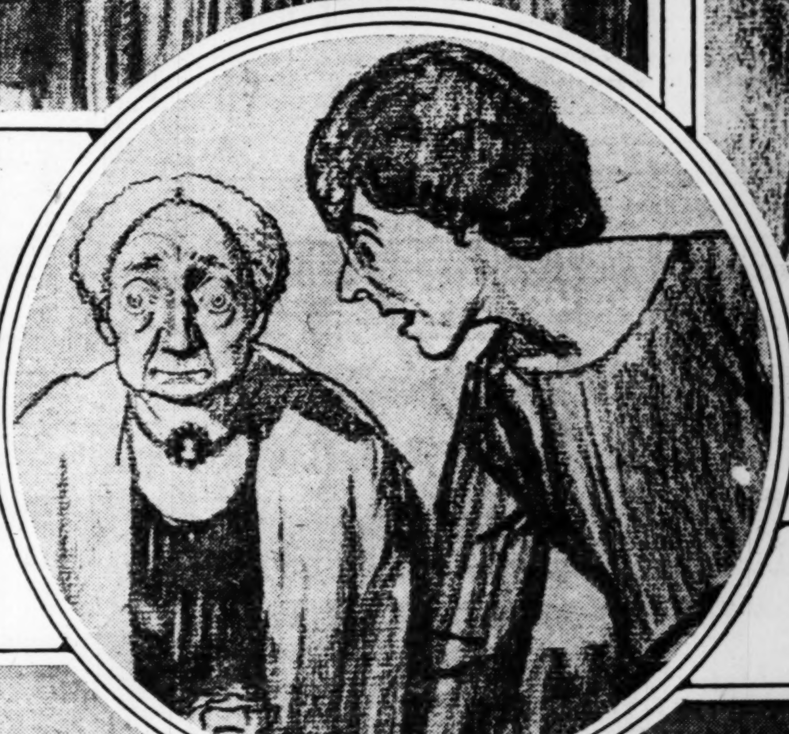
The oldest inhabitant gives a family dinner on Sunday. No sooner are the happy guests seated than Auntie Maud will be reminded of the time Georgie wanted ice cream for every course. And Georgie, who is present, will laugh loudest and longest and enlarge on the story till stopped. Then there will be a pause. Then everyone will start talking at once.



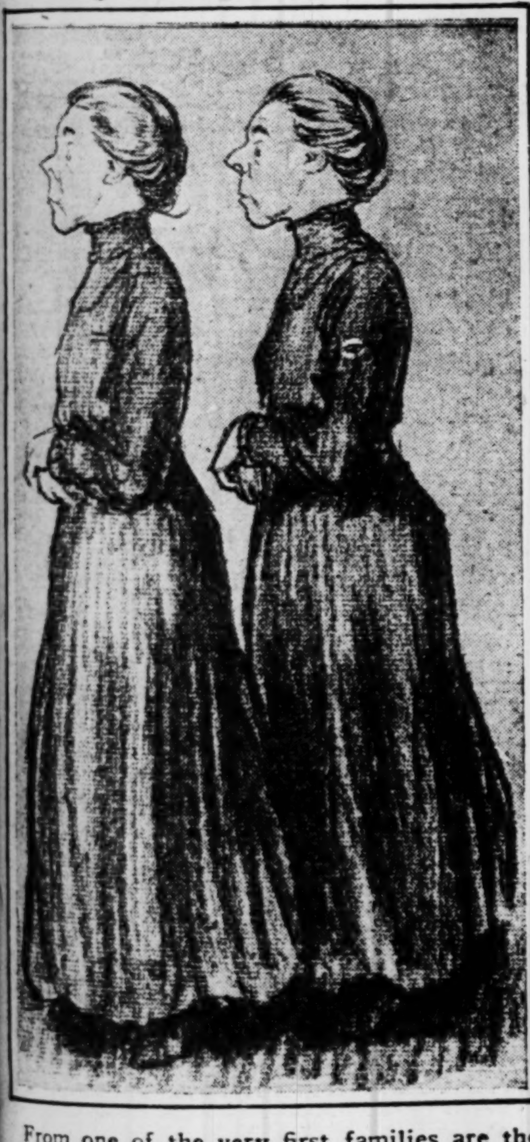
Rosie the bathroom cleaner. Rosie is tired this morning. She was up late at the Garbage Men's ball. Oh, it was grand—they had six fights on the floor!



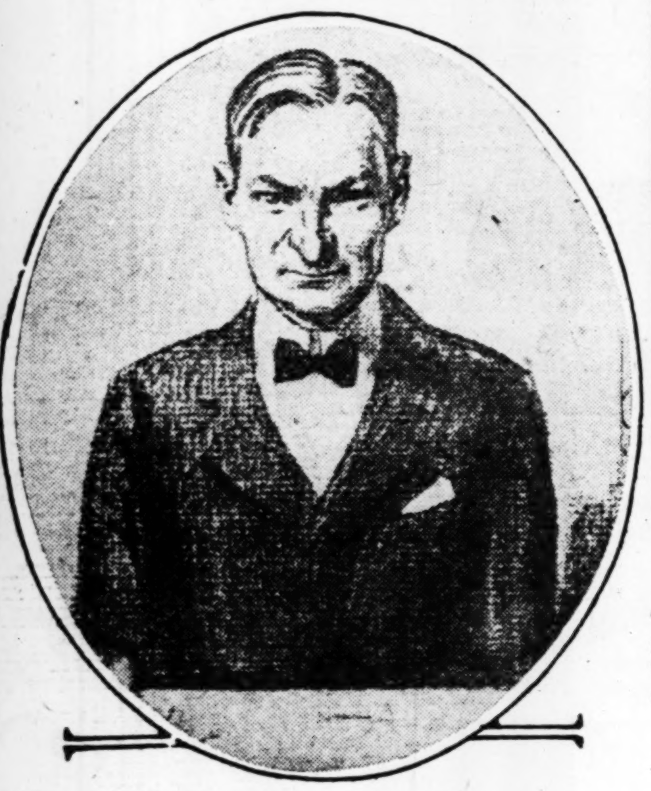
Joe, the room service waiter, reflecting, no doubt, on the smallness of tips.



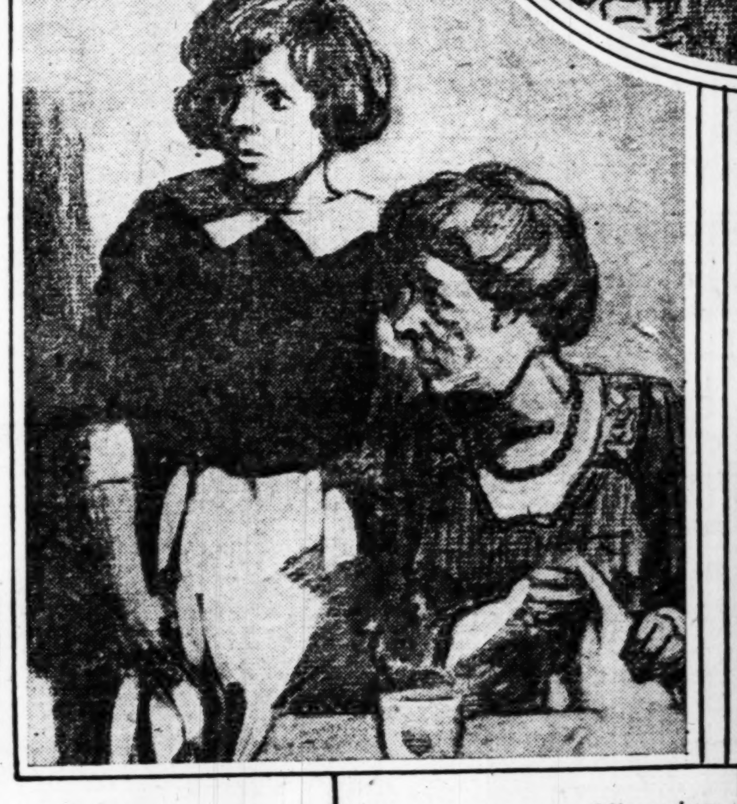
"Not DEAD, mamma! she said HEAD, she said her HEAD had just been SHAMPOO'D!" The deaf old lady and the crushed middle aged daughter are on their way to the elevator.



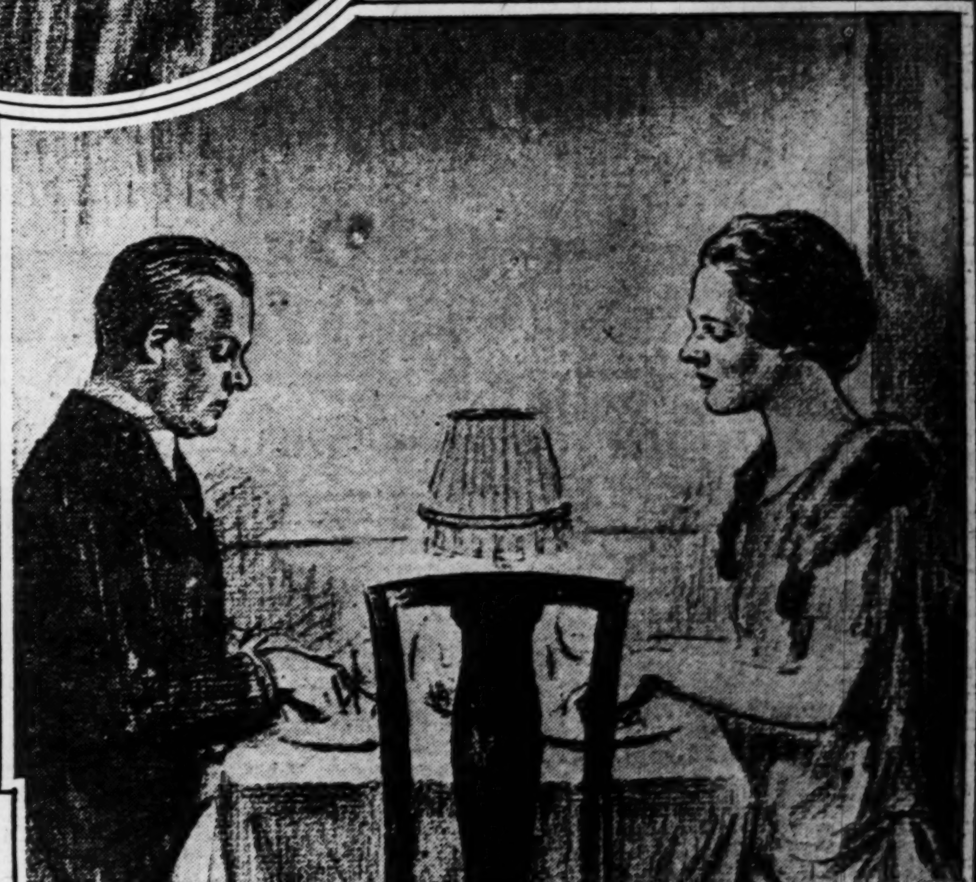
From one of the very first families are the Misses Van Cortlander-Rhinebeck Smithe. Miss Teena is a trifle nearsighted. She lets her sister, Rhoda, precede her into the dining room.



The bachelor who lives in the family hotel. The waitress feels SO sorry for him.



"Has she got a wedding ring on, Katherine?" The elderly Miss Simms, aided by Katherine, the waitress, is not missing much that goes on in the dining room. The newest arrivals are up for scrutiny.



The bride and groom trying, oh, so hard, not to look bride-and-groomy. It is the consensus of opinion among the elderly ladies, whose business it is to know, that the bride and groom are MOST unhappy.

:: In Studio and Gallery ::

A SELECTION of treasures in Ancient Egyptian, Persian and Greek goldsmithing and metal work have returned to the City Art Museum for the consideration of that institution and are displayed in Gallery 32. These will be remembered as having belonged to the collection exhibited here just a year ago. At the time of their first appearance in this city, several of these objects were retained for further consideration, but finally were returned. Now that they are with us again, it is hoped they will remain.

Of extreme importance and rarity is a sixth century, A. D., Byzantine bracelet, exquisitely wrought in gold. No museum in America possesses a similar object comparable to this in beauty and quality, and only one other bracelet of the sort, a companion to this and belonging to the same collector, is anywhere available.

The Etruscan head band and earrings are similar only to each other in magnificence and finesse of workmanship. An extinct process was the means by which the minute golden globules were fastened to certain surfaces in the design to enhance the beauty of the pattern.

TWO Mycenaean rings, three Carnelian gems and two strings of Greek beads, one of large saphires and the other of dead pearls, complete the list of objects now being considered from the same collection.

In addition, several small, but very beautiful, examples on ancient Greek and Egyption pottery and bronze are shown.

A ushabti carved in steatite, or soapstone, is a well-preserved tomb figurine to delight the student of hierology as well as the artist and historian. The small figure, which was placed with many others in the tomb of the dead and supposed to serve as the slave of the departed soul in the afterlife, is about six inches in height and covered in portions with a beautiful patina. The figure is erect, and in two columns down the front of the statue are written the hieroglyphics which were supposed to give the power of living and serving the soul of the departed.

A Hathor head in terra cotto, enameled in green, apparently broken from the complete figure, is anohter of the interesting Egyptian treasures. Hathor, the cow goddess, indicative of the patience and gentleness of woman, is here signified by the horns curling upward from either side of the head. The eyes are accentuated, bringing to mind the soft, velvety beauty of the animal's eyes, and reminding of the fact that the epithet "cow-eyed" was considered the greatest tribute to an Egyptian woman.

EIGHTEEN paintings belonging to the Washington University collection have been placed in a gallery of the City Art Museum until Feb. 1 when the exhibition of examples in painting, sculpture and miniature done by the women painters and sculptors of America is to arrive. Ellen Ravenscroft and Kathryn Cherry are the exhibiting members from St. Louis.

FREDERICK BALLARD WILLIAMS, a contemporary American painter, oftimes called "the modern Monticelli," is exhibiting 20 of his paintings in St. Louis at the Newhouse Gallery.

Although this artist probably is best known for his Watteauesque figure groups, more of his pure landscape work is included in this exhibit. In the eight decorations that fulfill public expectation, anyone seeking original expression will be disappointed. These pictures have no such purpose in view. Distinctly French in tradition and immediately reminiscent of the eighteenth century, they accomplish again the decorative aim of the flamboyant, exuberant art of that period. The whimsical superficiality of all adornment under Louis XIV and XV, as indicated by Watteau, Fragonard, Boucher and others is revived by Williams. Although his actual handling may differ from that of the eighteenth century masters, the fast remains that his productions in this vein are imitative, and unless considered from the decorative standpoint by reason of their color and arrangement, become like shallow echoes.

It is in Williams' landscape work that the artist really exhibits individual power and poetry. It is here that we find the idyllic qualities often attributed to his figure groups less obviously and more artfully portrayed. A sense of seclusion, quiet and rest pervades his landscapes. The beholder is spared all effort and strife. The subtle, musical sway of "La Honda" best illustrates the beauty of the lyric. Softly rolling hill contours, rythmical in arrangement, are painted in full, round, well-developed tones. A sincerity which his figure compositions lack is present in his interpretation of landscape. His color blend and technique both mature and highly polished accomplishments, place the artist among the foremost contemporary painters in America.

AT the close of the display of Oscar Jacobson's paintings in the Art Room of the Public Library, the annual exhibition of printing arranged by the library will be installed. The compilation of the exhibit means work extending throughout each year. At all times good printing, distinctive type and beautiful arrangement are noted by the librarians, and a selection of the year's collection is made to be exhibited. Since the inauguration of this yearly show some years ago, the response from local printers has been gratifying and the benefit has been mutual.

THE February exhibition at the Noonan-Kocian Gallery will consist of a collection of paintings by Charles Galt. Few examples of Galt's recent work have been shown publicly, and it is with interest that his exhibition is awaited.

The almost simultaneous appearance of the two St. Louis art magazines, the second issue of "The Nucleus," published by V. B. Sheremetyeff, and "The Art Spirit," published by the St. Louis Art League, is attracting a great deal of the right sort of publicity for St. Louis art and artists. Through these mediums more phases of the allied arts are reached and broadcast. The makeup of both publications is a result of good printing and typography.

NEXT Wednesday, Jan. 23, has been definitely set as tre date of the annual Art League dinner, which will be held at Hotel Chase. At the beginning of each year, it has been the custom of the league to meet to discuss and outline plans for the following 12 months. This year the main issues will concern civic art in relation to the bond issue, art in industry, and the local application of art to education and religion.

Reservations may be made now for the dinner. About 200 guests are expected.

NEW BOOKS FOR CHILDREN AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

Any of these books will be sent by parcel post to card-holders on receipt of postage in order of application.

JUDY, by T. Bailey.—Wholesome story of a year in the lives of a number of grils and boys in rural New England. The center of interest is the friendship of Judy Jameson, a high-spirited and rather temperamental girl, and Anne Batchelle, who is of sound comon sense and unusual poise. There are delightful picnics in the woods, birthday parties, amateur theatricals, and in the return of Judy's father, reported lost at sea; there is a bit of mystery that will add to the interest.

WIZARD OF THE NORTH, by P. Fillmore.—An account of three Finnish heroes and a magic mill that brought prosperity.

NATURE'S CRAFTSMEN, by I. N. McFee.—Includes chapters on spiders, ants, prairie dogs and fireflies. Good illustrations.

GRITLI'S CHILDREN, by J. Spyri.—Phani and Elsli, Gritli's children, are adopted by a wealthy Mrs. Stanhope, who has lost both of her children, and taken from their Swiss home to her villa on the Rhine. Their adventures, when three of their former playmates come to spend the summer with them, are most amusing.

A CHILD'S STORY OF AMERICAN LITERATURE, by A. Tassin. A brief and very readable history of American literature.

THIS SINGING WORLD: AN ANTHOLOGY OF MODERN POETRY FOR YOUNG PEOPLE, edited by L. Untermeyer.—A collection of about 300 poems representing the best of modern verse for children. The material is grouped under the following headings: Songs of awakening, Breath of the Earth, Surge of the Sea, Open Roads, Common Things, Places, Children, Other People, Birds and Beasts, Faories and Phantoms, Words and Music, etc.

THE BOY'S PLAYBOOK OF CHEMISTRY, by R. F. Yates.—Contains directions for rigging up a chemical laboratory and for many simple chemical experiments. Numerous drawings by the author.

MARKET STREET AT ELEVENTH

Anton Lang and Others to Open Art Work Exhibition at the Coliseum.

The party of 31 villagers of Oberammergau, including 14 of the actors in the world-famous Passion Play, will arrive in St. Louis Wednesday morning, and will open their exhibition in the Coliseum Thursday night. The exhibitions will be given twice daily thereafter, from 1:30 to 4:30 and 7:30 to 10:30 p. m., the admission charge being 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children. The exhibition will end Wedesnday night, Jan. 30.

The exhibition, as has been told, will consist of wood carving, a work in which the Oberammergau folk are masters. These people, it is emphasized, are not untutored peasants, but are artists of great creative sense and technical skill. Their works of sculpture in wood are comparable with high-class work in marble or bronze.

Nature of the Statuary.

In the display of wooden statuary are sacred figures and Alpine peasant types. The pose and draperies of these figures have been highly praised and the grain and coloring of the wood are used to the fullest degree as elements of beauty. The delicacy of touch is shown in the fashioning, from brittle wood, of light vestures and rose petals.

Among the sculptured figures are Christ on the cross, his face marked with sorrow and suffering; the happy Alpine lad marching to the music of his accordion; the tired farmer trudging back from the field with his scythe on his shoulder; the chamois peering from its Alpine heights; horses rearing from fright. There are beautiful chandeliers, lamps, candlesticks, elaborately carved picture frames, bread plates, salad forks, boxes, chessmen, nutcrackers, and countless ornaments. A child's bed is shown, with the four Evangelists, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, keeping guard on its four posts.

An interesting feature of the exhibition is the chance to study the technique of the carvers, creating their works from wooden blocks, without models or patterns.

The purpose of the exhibition, now being given through the United States, is to "save Oberammergau." In the past, the people of Oberammergau have lived from the proceeds of the sale of their work in carving. The war, and the destruction of German currency values, removed this source of livelihood, and the latest Passion Play season, that of 1922, did not bring the relief that had been hoped.

Conditions in the Village.

Tourists have in the past commented upon the moderate charges for admission to the Passion Play, and for board and lodging in the village, and upon the lack of spirit of commercialism. However, there have been profits from the play in former years, and these profits have gone to the improvement of the spectacle itself, and to maintenance of the schools, including the school of wood-carving. But in the last two years, the schools have been maintained only with the greatest difficulty, and the scarcity of food has tended to drive out the youth of the village. Among those who remain, youths and children, as well as adults, have been underfed.

In the hope of getting a response from the American people that would insure the nourishment and education of the rising generation in the village, a group of Americans financed the present tour of the Passion Players. These include Anton Lang, the Christus of the play; Andreas Lang, the Peter, and Guido Mayr, the Judas. Their features are familiar to Americans through photographs—not through moving pictures, for in their determination to avoid commercialism, they refused an offer of a large sum, said to have been $1,000,000, in gold, made for the filming of the 1922 play.

Church to Hold Annual Dinner.

The Third Baptist Church will hold its annual dinner and fellowship meeting at 6:30 p. m. Wednesday. No more tickets will be sold than the seating capacity for the function allows, and as the church is usually overtaxed by the numbers attending, it is suggested those desiring to attend make their arrangements no later than Sunday.

DRINK WATER IF KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Pains or Bladder Is Irritated.

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in the efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

To help neutralize these irritating acids; to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

Performs 45,000 Appendicitis Operations

Berlin Doctor Retires After Operating 32 Years

Dr. Joseph Rotter, a noted German specialist, has retired after having performed 45,000 operations for appendicitis, according to newspaper reports.

A Treacherous Disease.

Appendicitis attacks at any moment even persons seemingly in good health. Usually, however, it is preceded by so-called stomach trouble, constipation or similar disturbances. Often when there is a warning feeling of uneasiness in the abdomen, appendicitis can be guarded against in the same manner in which one guards against the spread of throat infection, because that is just what appendicitis is—an infection in the intestines spreading to the appendix. When one has sore throat, one can often prevent further trouble by using an antiseptic wash or gargle to fight the germs and a laxative to carry off the poisons from the body. The same procedure is necessary to fight the intestinal germs and guard against appendicitis. But instead of an antiseptic wash for the throat, an INTESTINAL antiseptic is necessary.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and nothing else can dislodge. It [illegible] al cases, thus immediately [illegible] pressure on the heart. It is [illegible] the great amount of [illegible] Adlerika draws from the [illegible] canal—matter you never [illegible] in your system. Try it [illegible] natural movement and [illegible] more foul matter it brings [illegible] was poisoning you. In [illegible] such as occasional constipation, stomach, gas on the stomach [illegible] headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A [illegible] ment, however, is necessary in [illegible] obstinate constipation and [illegible] stomach trouble, preferably [illegible] rection of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I found Adlerika the best [illegible] entire 37 years' experience." Dr. G. Eggers.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel [illegible] Some require only one dose." Dr. F. M. P. (Name given on [illegible]

"After taking Adlerika [illegible] than for 20 years. Haven't [illegible] to express the AWFUL [illegible] eliminated from my system." J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise [illegible] ple who have used only ordinary [illegible] and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading [illegible] everywhere.

RAND TAKES CHARGE OF HOSPITAL CAMPAIGN

Heads Organization Seeking Funds for Building for Maternity Institution.

Frank C. Rand, president of the International Shoe Co., today will begin his duties as general chairman of the campaign organization which will seek funds for the erection of a new building for the St. Louis Maternity Hospital. Success will bring to St. Louis a $650,000 gift from the General Education Board to be used for research work. The General Education Rockefeller.

Rand, in assuming the chairmanship, said:

"This present movement to assist in preparing an institution for the reception of mothers and infants should appeal to all persons. Proper attention and accommodations will mean the saving of hundreds of lives in St. Louis annually; lives that are needlessly wasted.

"The recent maternity survey of our city made by Dr. Haven Emerson, Columbia University, New York City, gave me, along with thousands of other St. Louisans, a truer conception of the city's urgent needs in caring for mothers and their infants. It is depressing to know through this report that 96 mothers and 838 infants died, when it was in our power, had we known the true conditions, to reduce by 30 to 50 per cent the number of deaths."

The proposed Maternity Hospital campaign is scheduled to begin Feb. 4 and conclude Feb. 11. The amount to be raised will be in the neighborhood of $500,000, the exact amount depending on building and equipment reports to be made this week.

Campaign headquarters have been established at Hotel Statler where members of the hospital's board of directors and others interested in the establishing of the new hospital are giving their time.

The new building will be erected north of the St. Louis Children's Hospital, 500 South King's highway boulevard and will contain accommodations for at least 150 maternity cases. In its new home, it will be affiliated with and have the cooperation and use of the facilities of Washington University and the Children's Hospital.

HAS PIPES GATHERED FROM ALL PARTS OF WORLD

Henry A. Clover's Collection Obtained During Travels Contains 35 Specimens.

A collection of native and antique pipes, gathered from all parts of the world by Henry A. Clover, a retired attorney, of 4939 West Pine boulevard, has been placed on exhibition in a downtown cigar store.

The collection, which includes 35 pipes, is valued at $5000 and was assembled by Clover during several world tours in the last 10 years. Clover obtained many of the pipes from explorers and traders. Others were presented to him by native owners. Included in the collection is an eight-pound pipe made by an Eskimo on Wrangle Island from driftwood and lead. A second Eskimo pipe was carved from the tusk of a walrus and is ornamented by figures of people and animals. Clover explained that the bowls of these pipes were purposely made small because of the scarcity of tobacco in the Arctic regions.

Other speciments in the collection include stone pipes from India, Africa, and American Indian mounds, and wooden pipes from the Queen Charlotte Islands carved in the form of birds and animals. An opium pipe with an elaborate poreclain bowl and the stem covered with the skin of the stinagree fish was obtained by Clover in China and is said to be 200 years old.

RHEUMATISM LEAVES YOU FOREVER

Every druggist in this county is authorized to say to every rheumatic sufferer that if a full pint bottle of Allenrhu, the sure conqueror of rheumatism, does not show the way to stop the agony, reduce swollen joints and do away with even the slightest twinge of rheumatic pain, he will gladly return your money without comment.

Allenrhu has been tried and tested for years and really marvelous results have been accomplished in the most severe cases where the suffering and agony was intense and piteous and where the patient was helpless.

Mr. James H. Allen, the discoverer of Allenrhu, who for many years suffered the torments of acute rheumatism, desires all sufferers to know that he does not want a cent of anyone's money unless Allenrhu decisively conquers this worst of all diseases, and he has instructed druggists to guarantee it as above in every instance. MARTIN LAMMERT

MARTIN LAMMERT started in this humble little store 63 years ago. Its total floor space did not exceed 2,500 square feet. Here he laid the foundation for the great Institution which still bears his name and which today is a dominant factor in the Furniture Industry.

It is a far cry from this modest store of 1861 to the stately structure which is our present home. But it emphasizes most emphatically how well grounded were the principles, how sound the policies which Martin Lammert inaugurated. By strict adherance to his fundamental creed we have prospered to an unusual degree.

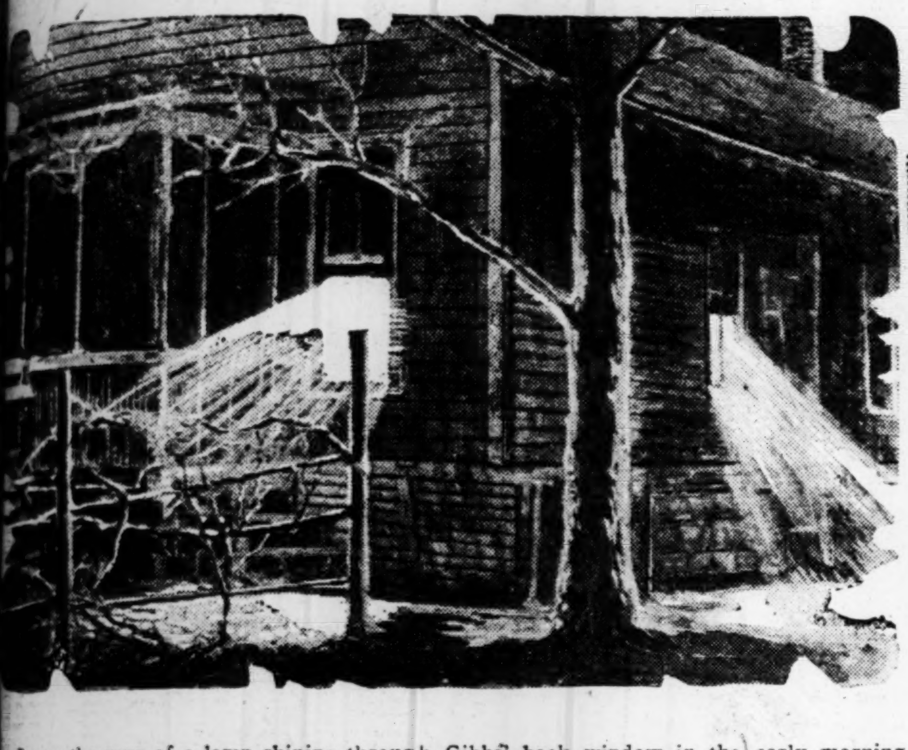
WHO TOOK THE MURDERED MISER'S $102,000 WORTH OF STOCK?

A Question That Agitates All Kansas in Mystery With Eerie Settings and Amazing Angles



It was the rays of a lamp shining through Gibbs' back window in the early morning t first told neighbors something was wrong at the miser's abode, and led to the investtion which revealed his murder.

William E. His beautiful and beloved shares, with ir unfulfilled promise of high dividends, re the death of him. Somebody coveted tain of the stocks he owned. They were len. He clamored queruloulsy for their urn. And then he was killed.

Tell-Tale Record Killer Overlooked

If the little red leather book had been car- ed away, the loss of the securities might not ve become known. But, either because the urderer did not know what it contained or d not tarry to take it after beating the old an to death, it was left lying on the kitchen ble. And on a carefully penned page was nd the record of his purchase of $102,000 rth of the preferred stock of the Uhls nic and Narcotic Sanitarium at Overland rk. And when the tin box was taken from hiding place in the barn no sanitarium ck was found.

Search was made then through his papers d a copy was found of a letter he had sent George E. Davidson of Ottumwa, Ia., ask- g for the return of the stock which he as- med Davidson had carried away by mistake hen he visited Gibbs late in October. Ap- rently no answer came, for he wrote to Dr. Kenneth B. Uhls, head of the sanitarium, and evasive answer from Dr. Uhls was found.

So warrants were issued against Dr. Uhls d Davidson charging them with theft of e stock. Dr. Uhls was arrested and gave nd. Davidson has not been found. No arge of murder has yet been made against ybody.

William E. Gibbs, 77 years old when he s killed, was a Kansas pioneer in his young manhood. He homesteaded a quarter section 8 miles north of here. He and his wife were hard-working and thrifty. They bought while land was still cheap until there were 880 acres of the Gibbs estate. His wife died in 1898. He and his son, Leonard, stayed on the farm, working and stinting, until one day there was an accident and a heifer was killed, and William Gibbs blamed his son for it and there was a violent scene, for Gibbs was a hard man and took greatly to heart the trifling loss.

A Hard Man and a Hard Father

Leonard went away, which William Gibbs felt was the ungrateful act of an unnatural son, and, when he made his will in 1900, he cut the young man off with a dollar.

If ever his son was in want or distress, physically or mentally unable to provide for himself, relief might be extended to him, provided he had no children to look after him. But of his estate he bequeathed a third to a brother, Newton, and a third to his sister, Adela Adams, and the residue to Leonard's children, if children he had, and to Newton's children if Leonard had none.

He was a cautious, suspicious man then, and he stipulated that, following his death, any sums that could not be paid at once to

DR. KENNETH B. UHLS,

Head of the Uhls Clinic and Narcotic Sanitarium at Overland Park, Kan., who is charged with theft of some of the stocks which led to the miser's death. legatees should be invested in first-class bonds and mortgages and if Leonard had children everything that went to them should be invested in such bonds and mortgages.

But by and by his son came back and was forgiven and by a codicil, July 31, 1908, he gave his son $1000 a year and more if necessary and set aside $10,000 to establish him in business. At Leonard's death, if children survived, everything was to go to them. If there were no children distribution would be as originally directed. It was increasing wariness that caused him, Nov. 18, 1911, to make another codicil revoking the $10,000 for establishing Leonard in business and directing that this be invested in bonds and securities.

Prey of Wild-Cat Stock Salesmen

Then, about 10 years ago, he sold most of his land and he and his son, who had not married, moved to a five-room cottage at 18 Tenth avenue east and there they "batched," living on less than the $50 a month pension which the old man drew, his fortune of about $200,000, invested in bonds and other safe securities, giving promise of gradual growth, to the ultimate enrichment of his heirs.

But William E. Gibbs, retired farmer, was now rated as one of Hutchinson's men of wealth and wild-cat stock salesmen counted him fair prey. They came to him singing their siren songs of sure gains. At first he spurned them.

F. L. Martin, his lawyer, told him he had more than he needed and there was no use of taking chances. Gibbs said yes that was so, and he was content to buy bonds and other securities which brought him low returns, but were safe. All the money that came to his hands he carried to his bank, even if it was after banking hours, and bought bonds. He was miserly, but for him there was no joy in the mere handling of money. His satisfaction was in the ownership of safe securities.

But one day a salesman told him of 8 or 9 per cent which he could earn instead of the 3 or 4 per cent that he was getting. This salesman knew how to wheedle and flatter an old man, and awaken his cupidity. So Gibbs turned over $25,000 worth of perfectly good securities for worthless stock and followed it up with $6000 more.

But he became uneasy and told Martin about it and Martin told him his $25,000 was gone, but there was a chance that the $6000 might be saved. It was saved and Martin charged him $600 for saving it and Gibbs felt that it was an awful lot to pay for a few hours' work, remembering the months that he used to toil on the farm to gain $600. He paid it and was $5400 ahead, but it hurt and he registered his sense of injury when he made a re-entry of the recovered securities in his little red book.

"It cost me $600 to get this back," he wrote in the cramped script of the miser who grudged, not only the fee the lawyer had earned in serving him, but the white page and the thin ink that were needed to record it.

The experience taught Gibbs a lesson, but the stock salesmen had found in his vanity a weak spot in his armor and after a time they were again able to pierce it with their blandishments. They wore a path to the door of the Tenth avenue cottage. When neighbors looked out they expected to see a stock salesman with portfolio under his arm arriving or leaving.

When Dr. Kenneth B. Uhls, in August, 1922, came into possession at his father's death of the sanitarium, which the elder Uhls had established and built up at Overland Park, he developed ideas of high finance which he proceeded to put into effect. It had been capitalized originally at $75,000, and increased from time to time. The young doctor, now 31 years old, issued an additional $400,000 of stock. Davidson went out to sell it. He worked Hutchinson. It looked good and Gibbs was not the only one who bought it. His purchase was $102,000. Other buyers here brought the Hutchinson total to about $250,000. Gibbs also bought about $50,000 of other stocks in which Uhls and Davidson are said to have been interested.

The modest home where Gibbs lived and where he was murdered. The cross indicates the room where his body was found.

A year ago Leonard Gibbs who, after his return from the war, had been in charge of the National Guard armory here, sleeping at the armory, was found dead with a bullet through his head. A note was found which intimated that his accounts were confused, but they were found to be all right. It was conjectured that he might have taken his own life while suffering from the after effects of gassing. Now, however, it is recalled that he was shot in the back of the head and it is suggested that he may have been a hindrance to the stock salesmen who were getting his father's wealth.

Lived, Indeed, Like a Miser

After that the old man lived alone. The cottage interior belied its pleasant exterior. The floors were bare. There were a few scraps of furniture. Debris was scattered about. The kitchen stove was the only one in the house. Gibbs lived in the kitchen and an adjoining small room in which was his tattered bed.

He was methodical in everything except his housekeeping. There was some system even about that. He did his washing every Monday. Once a year he washed the windows and did housecleaning. But it was in garden and barn that he appeared to best advantage. The garden was neatly cultivated and the barn was a miracle of orderliness.

His garden he turned to account, peddling vegetables in a basket from door to door, exciting with his broken shoes and patched clothing the commiseration of any who did not know of his wealth.

His miserliness had a curious manifestation in the accumulation in the barn of a vast store of kindling and wood. If a neighbor had a tree that needed to be felled, Gibbs felled it for the wood. This he reduced to stove lengths and sorted by sizes and piled in orderly ricks by graduated sizes in the barn.

There, in a tidy corner, was his smoking room, for it was one of his whims not to smoke in the house. And there he sat, making of his smoking something of a ritual, and gazed with satisfaction upon the piles of wood and kindling, enough to supply his frugal needs for 10 years. If the tobacco he smoked came from the streets, as its appearance suggested, that was his affair.

Food Given to Him at Christmas

Just prior to Oct. 22 Davidson came again to see him. After he had gone Gibbs missed his sanitarium stock. Then followed the correspondence which has been mentioned.

Christmas came and the old man spent the day alone. He lived at peace with his neighbors, but was aloof and they did not feel called upon to make it a merry Christmas for him. Except that Mrs. W. W. Wells, after baking two big mince pies for her family, made a smaller one for the recluse and sent her son, Don, to take it to him. He was grateful for that little attention and for the Christmas dinner that was brought by the Amish tenants of his farm. His only complaint was that they had brought more than he could eat and there was likely to be somewhat of waste, which his soul abhorred.

Neighbors Noted the Lighted Lamp

Saturday afternoon, Dec. 29, old man Gibbs had a fashionable caller. A woman living across the street saw him enter and, after two hours, leave. She took note of the correctness and apparent quality of his attire.

The year was nearing its end and that evening Gibbs sat by his kitchen stove in the easy chair he had fashioned for himself, with cushioned seat and back and spiral springs for the front legs, and pored over the 86 closely-written pages of his stock book. It may be that the man who had been there in the afternoon returned. Or it may have been someone else. But it seems clear that, as darkness came, Gibbs had a visitor, whose presence and whose business necessitated the unusual extravagance of lighting a lamp. Papers were taken from the tray of his trunk. The rubbers he took from them he slipped over his left hand to keep from losing them.

They sat facing each other beside the stove. The lamp on the shelf gave a sickly and uncertain light. Some time that night the visitor straightened up and with clubbed revolver struck Gibbs a crashing blow on the head. He fell over backward, carrying his chair with him. The murderer rained blows with ferocity. Part of the wooden handle of the weapon was splintered off. When the old man lay dead on the floor papers were snatched with bloody fingers, and some were dropped, with their telltale finger prints. The little red leather book was left on the table. The murderer fled, leaving the lamp burning dimly on the shelf.

There was wild weather that night. A blizzard came across the Kansas plain. The wind moaned about the cottage of death. A loose cellar window swayed and slammed.

Mrs. Mary Hartenberger, who lives next door, was awakened at 11 o'clock by a sick child. She saw the light in Gibbs' kitchen window. It was very strange. Gibbs never had a light at night. Maybe he was sick. But it was very cold and she did not go to inquire. She was up before dawn to get breakfast for her son who was going away. The light still burned in Gibbs' kitchen. She went and looked through the window. She saw his overturned chair and his legs, stretched starkly toward the stove.

A Deserted Cottage Now

She ran and told Dr. C. S. Evans, who lives on the other side of her house, and he called Sheriff Jesse Langford. The Sheriff and Deputy Wright and the doctor went to the house and found the front door partly ajar. They entered and found Gibbs in his kitchen, murdered. The place had not been ransacked. His gold watch and the dollar and penny in his pocket had not been taken. Attorney

Frank Norfleet Completes His Score Against Joe Fury's Crowd by Bringing the Last One at Large Back From Canada to Undergo Lone Star Justice—Incidentally He Turned 32 Members of the Notorious "Denver Gang" of Swindlers Over to the Federal Government.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Jan. 19.

IN one of the New York shows of the season, a dying confidence man, played by W. C. Fields, left to his daughter as a legacy this golden maxim: "Never give a sucker an even break!" The duty of a sucker, in the view of such practitioners, is to swallow bait, hook and sinker, permit himself to be drawn upon land without a protesting gasp, and not even to flop while being stripped to the last scale.

But occasionally a swindler draws a queer and annoying fish from the troubled waters of crooked finance. Instead of a sucker, it is a marine animal with teeth and claws, which promptly leaps upon the fisherman and rends him to bits. Such a disastrous catch was J. Frank Norfleet, a Texas rancher. He was robbed of $85,000 by a gang headed by Joe Fury, who was called the "king of confidence men." According to all the ethics, Norfleet should have accepted his loss with Christian submission and with gratitude for the lesson inculcated.

Instead, with the relentlessness and patience of an Indian, he set out single-handed to wreak vengeance upon the swindlers. The man-hunt occupied four years and cost a lot of money. The trail led him after clews to all parts of the country and to Canada, Mexico and Europe. But when the job was at last finished, recently, the entire gang had been disposed of. One had killed himself, one died in jail, and four were serving prison sentences. Incidentally, Norfleet, on one of his trips to Denver, obtained evidence which enabled the authorities to send 32 other swindlers to prison for various terms. Norfleet had a dislike for the entire breed.

Went to Dallas on Land Deal

On Nov. 11, 1919, the rancher, who lived at Hale Center, Tex., went to Dallas to put through a deal with a group of bankers. For this purpose he wished to dispose of a ranch which he owned in West Texas.

While at a Dallas hotel, he made the "chance" acquaintance of Reno Hamlin, alias "Speck," who gave the name of "R. Miller" and who said that he was a horse and mule buyer from Johnson County, Tex. Norfleet told Hamlin about his business and his desire to sell his ranch. Hamlin said he knew a man by the name of Spencer who was the purchasing agent for the Green Immigration Co. of Minneapolis, and that Spencer had been negotiating for some land near Austin. However, according to Hamlin, the deal had never been consummated. Hamlin said he was sure Spencer would be interested in Norfleet's ranch, and in the due course of time Norfleet was introduced to the alleged land agent.

Spencer told the rancher his company had never bought any land as far west as the place Norfleet wanted to sell, and that before any deal could be made he would have to consult with Garrett Thompson, secretary of the Green Immigration Co. Spencer returned a few hours later and said that he had wired the home office and that Thompson, who was in Oklahoma City, was on his way to El Paso and would stop off at Dallas to investigate the proposition.

Bill Book Was the First Bait

In the meantime, Norfleet moved into a room with Spencer at the Jefferson Hotel in Dallas. The records afterward disclosed the fact that he and Spencer had been rooming together. After waiting long enough for the train to come from Oklahoma City, Spencer suggested to Norfleet that they walk over to another hotel and meet Thompson when he arrived in the city. However, the land immigration secretary was not there.

While the two men were waiting for Thompson, Norfleet sat in a chair in the hotel lobby. On leaning back, he felt some object against his back. He discovered that it was a purse. In it were papers purporting to show that one J. B. Stetson was a Mason; $240 in money; a bond payable to McLean & Co. of Boston for the sum of $100,000, which guaranteed the faithful performance of certain things by Stetson; a cipher code letter and a card showing that J. B. Stetson was a member of the United Brokers, an alleged association of bankers and brokers in the United States.

Spencer suggested that they should take the bill book to the owner and perhaps be able to collect a reward. Spencer went to the hotel desk and came back with the information that the man was in a certain room in the hotel. Norfleet and Spencer went to the room and knocked. When the man came to the door they asked him if he had lost anything. He said, "No," and the two men started away. However, before Norfleet and Spencer could get out of his sight the man said that he had lost his pocketbook and on being asked to describe it, gave a complete inventory of the bill book and its contents. Spencer and Norfleet gave the book to the man in the room and he offered them a $100 reward, which Norfleet refused, but which Spencer accepted. The man in the room was Joe Fury, a noted bunco man, using the alias of "J. B. Stetson."

"Stetson" talked with Spencer and Norfleet in his room and then asked them to excuse him as he was a broker representing his company on the Dallas Stock Exchange and that he had to attend to his company's business. He returned to the room within a short time and asserted that he had taken $20,000 off the exchange for his company. The next day he told Norfleet that if he and Spencer would let "Stetson" use their names he could make them some money; that all of the trading he did on the exchange had to be done in the name of his company but that the bids could be made in the name of Spencer and Norfleet, on tips that "Stetson" would receive from his company. The agreement was made between the men and "Stetson" then took Norfleet and Spencer over to the Dallas Exchange Building and told them that was where he operated. Almost as soon as they arrived at the place, a man, who afterwards became known as E. J. Ward, walked up to Norfleet and demanded to know if he was a member of the exchange and on being informed that he was not, Ward ordered Norfleet out of the exchange and told him that only members of the exchange were allowed to enter the building.

Gave Rancher $800 as Earnings

When Norfleet refused to accept the $100 reward which "Stetson" offered him for finding his billbook, the confidence man asked Norfleet's permission to margin it on the exchange with the understanding that Norfleet should have all the earnings. That night "Stetson" gave Norfleet $800, which he claimed was the proceeds of the $100 investment. After Norfleet was ordered from the exchange building, "Stetson" made an alleged investment in a stock called Crucible Steel, and one night Ward went to the hotel where "Stetson," Norfleet and Spencer were talking together and told the three men that from the investment made by "Stetson" for the "partners" the sum of $60,000 had been made. However, Ward declared that as the three men were not members of the stock exchange they would have to confirm their bid by showing Ward that they had $60,000 in their possession and could have taken care of the bid if the market had gone the other way.

The three men did not have the money to show Ward, so the alleged stock exchange man told Norfleet, "Stetson" and Spencer he would lock the money in the stock exchange vault and give the three men a few days in which to raise the money. Norfleet then left Dallas and went to his home in Hale Center and borrowed $60,000 from his bank. With him went Spencer, presumably for the purpose of looking at Norfleet's ranch as a prospective purchaser. Spencer examined Norfleet's place and inspected it carefully, obtained some soil and claimed that he shipped it to his home office to have an analysis taken of the dirt. The two men returned to Dallas and upon their arrival "Stetson" told them his company had ordered him to make his headquarters in Fort Worth. After the party had reached Fort Worth "Stetson" took Norfleet to the Cotton Exchange and told the rancher that was the place where he would carry on his financial operations in the future. "Stetson" also said that the deal which he and Norfleet had agreed to carry out in Dallas had been transferred to Fort Worth.

Norfleet suggested to "Stetson" that as they had $60,000 it would be best for them to show the money to Ward, the alleged Dallas exchange manager, so that he would turn over to the partners the $60,000 which had been earned by the advance in Crucible Steel. However, "Stetson" asserted that his company had tipped him off that Mexican Petroleum stock was due to take a drop and if the partners would margin their $60,000 on the stock they would all be rich. After the clean-up was made on Mexican Petroleum, "Stetson" suggested, the partners could show the $60,000 to Ward and get their money lying in the Dallas exchange safe.

Norfleet gave his consent to the deal. Spencer was given the money and told to go to the Fort Worth exchange and sell Mexican Petroleum. In a short time Spencer returned and exhibited a receipt showing that instead of selling Mexican Petroleum he had bought. "Stetson" went into a "rage" and told Spencer to return to the exchange and change his order before it was too late. However, when Spencer returned he said that the stock had gone down and the margin of the partners had been wiped out, but that he had made an arrangement with the stock exchange officials whereby if the partners would deposit $25,000 more as margin the stock would not be closed out.

Was to Send Them $10,000 More

Norfleet obtained the necessary $25,000 from his brother and after he did so it developed that it was necessary to place a $35,000 margin with the stock exchange, according to Spencer's story. Norfleet before he would give the $25,000 to the partners became suspicious and wanted to be sure that he was getting a square deal. Norfleet and "Stetson" had a heated argument and to assure Norfleet of his honesty "Stetson" gave him the sign of a Master Mason. Spencer swore with his hands on the Bible and in the name of his dead mother that the deal was on the square. Norfleet was thus assured that the proposition was straight, so he gave the partners the $25,000. However, it was necessary to raise $10,000 more. Norfleet said he had some Liberty Bonds in Austin, Tex., and that he would go there and raise the $10,000 on the bonds.

By the agreement "Stetson" and the other partners were to stay in Fort Worth and wait for Norfleet to send them the $10,000. After obtaining the money the rancher attempted to get in communication with "Stetson," who henceforth shall be known by his real name, Fury, and discovered that the "partners" had left Fort Worth for parts unknown. Norfleet, becoming suspicious, notified the police, and then the long man-hunt was on.

Fury and the members of his gang went to El Paso and from there to San Bernardino, Cal. At that place the confidence men attempted to "pull" the same kind of a deal on another man. However, the intended victim had read of the Norfleet case and refused to "fall" for the pocket book "gag" which was used on Norfleet in Dallas. The man notified the police and as a result Gerber and Ward were arrested, but Fury and Spencer escaped.

Gerber and Ward were returned to Fort Worth where they were both brought to trial on two charges of swindling. At the conclusion of the trials the men were sentenced to serve 10 years in the Texas penitentiary. However, another indictment was pending against Ward in Washington, D. C., and he was sent there to stand trial. While lodged in the Washington jail, Ward killed himself. Gerber, after the Court of Criminal Appeals had affirmed his sentence, was taken to the Texas penitentiary where he is now serving his sentence.

After Ward and Gerber had been disposed of Norfleet started his hunt for Fury and Spencer. As Fury was the leader of the gang the Texas rancher picked him out as the man to get first. For 14 months Norfleet chased "his man" through 18 states, Canada, Mexico, England, France and Italy. On one occasion the man-hunter had Fury arrested in California. The swindler bribed two Deputy Sheriffs to release him and again escaped. The two officers were later convicted for their release of Fury and are now serving sentences in the California penitentiary.

He Joined the "Confidence Ring"

During Norfleet's hunt for Fury the trail led to Denver, Colo. The man hunter was informed that Fury had at one time been the associate of a band of confidence men in Denver. Norfleet decided to become acqua with the gang with the hope that he mi discover where he could find Fury. The m hunter was successful in becoming a memb of the Denver "confidence ring" and a though he did not find any trace of Fury h gained enough information to enable the Di trict Attorney of Denver to convict swindlers and send them to the penitentia in Colorado.

Fury was finally located in Fl through the efforts of District Att Brown of Fort Worth and District Att Woolwine of California. Norfleet found hi man in Jacksonville, Fla., and placed him un der arrest. The notorious crook endeavor to escape on the way back to Texas b jumping out of a train window. However, due to the fact that he broke his leg, making the jump, he was easily captured.

After serving approximately one year of his sentence Fury died in prison. His body was shipped to California to be buried and so skeptical were the officers that Fury had not "pulled" a hoax on them and had not died his grave was opened by the California authorities and finger prints taken to be sure that Fury was actually dead. Admitted to be one of the cleverest criminals in the world the guardians of the law were taking no chances that Fury might gain his freedom by means of a faked death. However, after the finger prints of the dead man had been obtained they were satisfied the body was Fury's.

When Fury was safely lodged in the [illegible] penitentiary Norfleet took up his hunt for Spencer. On one occasion the [illegible] of Fury was discovered by the man hunter in Montreal, Canada, and placed under arrest. However, by a successful ruse in [illegible] the Canadian officers that he was not the man Norfleet wanted, Spencer was released.

Norfleet's last man was at liberty for [illegible] a year after his confederates had been apprehended. However, Spencer was a dope [illegible] and at various times in his life had been a known narcotic "peddler." He went to Colorado after his escape from Norfleet in Canada and started to again sell narcotics. He was arrested by Federal officers in [illegible] 1923, and with his arrest ended Norfleet's four-year man hunt. Spencer is now in the Federal penitentiary serving his sentence and when he is released he will be brought to Texas to stand trial for his participation in the swindling of Norfleet.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.

FOR a novelist to enmesh fictitious characters in a love tangle and then work them out of it with reasonable regard for logic and plausibility is one thing. For a novelist to fall into the same tangle in real life and then emerge from it with satisfaction to all parties concerned is quite a different one, and it is in just such a predicament that the popular authoress, Nina Wilcox Putnam, in private life Mrs. Robert J. Sanderson, finds herself as she faces the prospect of an alienation suit by Mrs. Gertrude Petri Bassett of Madison, Conn., wife of her business manager and "personal representative," Ellsworth Bassett.

With her new divorce decree from Sanderson vacated and the accusing finger of notoriety pointing at her from every quarter of the country while she attempts to deny and explain away the indignant wife's charges, the writer is discovering considerably more bitterness in her position than she ever allowed her characters to suffer when they were working out their matrimonial destinies on paper and the "amicable solution," which is customarily reached in her novels seems as far off as it did at the outset. If Mrs. Bassett presses her charges, as she has indicated she will do, it will probably take more than a fiction writer's versatile imagination to straighten out the difficulty.

About all Miss Putnam seems able to do is to make a sweeping denial of all the accusations advanced. She is doing that with vigor. Convalescing from the collapse she suffered upon suddenly becoming the central figure in a domestic scandal, she flouts the allegation that she asked Mrs. Bassett to divorce her clam digger husband so that she might marry him or that she ever considered marrying him at all.

Willing to Fire Bassett

"The charges are absolutely false," she insists. "I'll discharge Mr. Bassett this very minute if his wife says so. I'm not the kind of a woman to rob another of her husband. The statement that I asked her to give him up is malicious calumny."

And Bassett, who has hurried home to Madison from Florida upon his employer's instructions to "go and see what is troubling your wife," supports Miss Putnam's denial. "The stories are untrue," he repeats. "They are the most ridiculous fiction. I never heard of an estrangement between my wife and myself until a week or so ago.

But against both denials is the equally firm declaration of Mrs. Bassett that the novelist virtually kidnaped the stalwart 6-foot-4 clam digger from his home, made him first her chauffeur and then her literary agent and finally took him on trips with her to Canada and Florida after "making it plain to me that I should divorce him so that she could marry him."

On top of that comes an explanation from Miss Putnam of how the association came about that is arousing as much curiosity as Mrs. Bassett's charges. She told a correspondent recently that she first hired the handsome clam digger, who is eight years younger than herself, to be her nurse upon a doctor's suggestion and after consultation with her women friends, and that after his ministering had cured her of a serious illness he remained a problem that could only be solved by making him her business manager, a position in which, she says, he has shown remarkable ability as he did in the role of a nurse.

The public is fairly familiar with Miss Putnam's "advanced" views concerning love and marriage. Frequently during the 12 years she has enjoyed eminence as a writer she has had occasion to express through her fiction bits of her philosophy about things domestic, and her expressions now take on added interest as her erstwhile readers watch for new chapters in her real life story.

"Freedom of love is the only conceivable ideal arrangement," she often declared. "Love should be a free gift. * * * Clean romance hasn't a chance in the world because women have been making capital of their only profession. They have commercialized love. * * * It is freedom to obtain divorce which will directly and radically decrease the desire to have divorce." Thus she wrote, deprecating divorce as a measure to be resorted to "only as operations are resorted to," and pointing out ways to marital happiness. As a demonstration of her views she cited the "ideal arrangement" providing for separate roofs which she and her second husband entered into after their marriage in 1919.

"Ideal Arrangement" Didn't Last

But it seems that even such an "ideal arrangement" as separate homes failed to function in practice as it did in theory and there came a time when she felt that divorce from Sanderson was a "necessary evil." Accordingly she sued for it in the courts of Providence, R. I., and won it. Then before she had time to indicate what further moves she considered "necessary evils" the storm over Bassett broke and found her unprepared. Her divorce was promptly set aside on the ground that she had not complied with the State's residence requirements before filing suit and at the same time Mrs. Bassett came forward in the role of the outraged wife, branding her as a love pirate and denouncing the novelist's "radical philosophy" as the cause of the trouble.

So now with charges and denials still flying back and forth, the case hangs in midair with everybody waiting eagerly to see what the next move will be and who will make it. Obviously Bassett can't make it. He made one frantic effort to stop the racket when he called off his orange picking duties on Miss Putnam's Florida ranch and hurried home to effect a reconciliation. But he failed utterly. His wife refused even to see him and still refuses to do so. Miss Putnam, waiting for the grand jury's proposed investigation of her divorce, can do nothing either way until Mrs. Bassett takes another step and Mrs. Bassett herself hasn't definitely decided whether she will sue for alienation or separate maintenance or both. She is fairly sure she won't seek a divorce, at least not yet, lest it "give the others too much satisfaction."

Mrs. Bassett, holding the strategic position as she does, is in no great hurry to decide. Decisions upon such drastic measures as divorces and alienation suits usually require a great deal of consideration in a conservative community such as Madison, where, as she puts it, "married people usually stay married," and she hasn't the time to spare all at once. She is busy caring for a 4-year-old son and working at two jobs to support him. Each morning she is the town librarian. Each afternoon and into the evening she is assistant to the postmaster and at night she attends a business college. Between jobs and home and school she recently found time to tell a correspondent of her troubles and expound her homely "Main street" philosophy of marriage.

Sitting with her boy on her knee, the 25-year-old mother spoke dispassionately of the affair. There was no trace of martyrdom in her daintily defiant manner and she appeared to hide unshed tears behind a set smile as she explained that "when you live in a small town where everybody knows your business you have to hold your head up." Occasionally she laughed, but the laugh somehow was painful to hear.

"We Usually Stay Married"

"We don't understand these new philosophies here," she said. "Here when we are married we generally stay married. At least there is never any suggestion of taking away another woman's husband like this. But perhaps I'm not worldly enough.

"Mrs. Putnam was very friendly with my husband here last spring, but I had no suspicion that anything was wrong until after I had had it plainly put up to me that I should divorce him and refused. That was in June. During that month Mrs. Putnam had hired my husband to work for her at her house. She said that he was to paint her little studio, but the studio was never painted and my husband was quite frank in letting me know what was going on. He then went to live at her house and said he was going to be her chauffeur although he had never worked as a chauffeur before. Shortly after that she sent her car for me and I spent six and a half hours talking matters over with her. My husband was present at the interview.

"I will not say that she pleaded with me in so many words to divorce him, but she made the suggestions all right. She talked a lot about how wrong it was for people to live together just because they were married when they were no longer in love. I promised nothing and made no agreement. I was offered no money and wouldn't have accepted it anyway. My husband was not for sale.

"Well, a little while after that—about the first of July it was—they went away together. Ellsworth said he was going to drive her to Cape Cod. I found out later that they didn't go to Cape Cod at all but went to Canada instead and it was two weeks before they returned. When they did come back he was passing as her business manager and personal representative and he never did come back home after that except to see the boy. He continued to send home $15 a week though to help support Adrian."

Was Mr. Bassett fitted by education or experience to be a novelist's business manager? the correspondent wanted to know.

Didn't Talk Like a Manager

"You wouldn't think so if you heard him talk," was the response. "And that is another thing I want Mrs. Putnam to explain. How was a young man of 28, comparatively uneducated, able to make himself so valuable to a worldly wise novelist of 36 that he could become her business manager in a few weeks? It doesn't seem reasonable to me. She has been selling stories for 15 years or more. Why should she hire a clam digger to do it for her?"

Clearly the sympathy in the little town of 1200 is all with sprightly Mrs. Bassett. She is admired by the townspeople for her declared intention of "holding her head up" and is popular in the community in which she has lived all her life. She is a trim figure of a healthy normal young wife. She was married five years ago to Bassett who had been one of the village youths and her playmate since childhood.

It was an entirely different story, in tone, that reporters got from Mrs. Putnam Sanderson, or Miss Putnam, as she prefers to be called.

"I befriended Gertrude Petri because I pitied her," she began. "We are rather nice people in Madison. We all pitied Gertrude and we all helped. And we were glad for her when she married Ellsworth Bassett, one of the nicest of the town boys, whom we had all seen clam digging and lobster trapping along the water front with the rest of the town boys.

"Several months ago I had a serious illness for which my doctor prescribed a certain treatment. I consulted with my women friends and I also consulted with Gertrude Petri. She immediately suggested her husband. She was eager about it. I suppose the new family needed money. Anyway I employed him and he proved remarkably adaptable. My doctor dubbed him a find.

Male Nurse Remained a Problem

"My illness passed after a time, but Bassett remained a problem and a fixture. He pleaded that he was cut out for better things than clam digging and wouldn't I give him a chance. I did and I can prove by my bank account that I have never had reason to regret it. He graduated from one service into another until I finally let him try marketing my literary wares. He has been a marvel. My relations with him have been only in a business way and I thought until these charges were made that his wife was one of my best friends."

But to get back to Miss Putnam's "ideal matrimonial arrangement" which caused so much comment in 1919 and was later almost duplicated in Fannie Hurst's well known "two-breakfasts-a-week-together" marriage. Miss Putnam explained that in an interview over four years ago, shortly after her wedding.

"We live in separate houses, in separate towns," she said on that occasion, "and see each other only on week-ends at our joint apartment in New York. We keep our dress clothes there and play around there with our friends, but everything is on a strictly 50-50 basis financially. When a woman is leading a professional life she and her husband should live that way. I didn't marry Jack Sanderson for a home. I married him because I loved him. We are great pals. He gives me a lot of ideas and I find in him an intellectual tonic. Sometimes I visit him at his bachelor apartment. That is a great lark. It has the charm of unconventionality, but our love affair would be all off if we lived together all the time and got in each other's way when we should be at work."

Mrs. Putnam Sanderson was first married in 1907 at the age of 18 to Robert F. Putnam, a member of the publishing firm of that name. He died in 1918. She has a 6-year-old son, John Francis Putnam, who lives with her. The daughter of a family in moderate, if not poor circumstances, she started out in life as a milliner's apprentice, but began writing at the age of 11. Her genius and wit soon became evident to publishers and by the time she was 18 she was well known as a leading humorist and in comfortable circumstances financially. Among her works which have been published are such novels as "In Search of Arcady," "The Impossible Boy," "The Little Missioner," "Orthodoxy," "Twinkle Twinkle and Lollypops," "Sunny Bunny," "Believe You Me," "It Pays to Smile" and "West Broadway." Besides she has been a prolific contributor to magazines.

RAPID DECLINE IN LICENSES ISSUED

Thirty - Four Stations Ceased Operation During Month of December.

A recapitulation of radio broadcasters on January 11, shows that there were 534 stations listed by the Department of Commerce, 15 less than on December 1. Only twelve new stations went on the air during the past month, whereas 34 passed out of existence in December. The loss is not regarded as serious to the popular industry, however, although many fans hated to see some of their old friends depart. The remaining stations are reaching a higher place of efficiency and rendering better programs with necessarily less interference. Some of the matter broadcast by defunct stations will be handled, perhaps more effectively, by other stations. This is true in the cases of some of the churches and newspapers included in the list of deletions.

Of the existing stations, 230 are of Class A, 46 in Class B, and 2 in Class D, experimental, while only 196 of the 360-meter stations remain in Class C. In the past two months, 67 stations ceased broadcasting and 24 opened, showing that the decrease in numbers is gradual but steady. The prophecy that soon there will be fewer but better stations is being fulfilled.

ITALIAN RADIO REGULATIONS

Receiving Stations Required to Pay Annual Tax.

From Rome comes word that the Minister of Posts and Telegraph will delegate the right to license relative receiving stations to transmission concessionaires. Private receiving stations will pay an annual tax of 50 lire (approximately $10), but a surtax is imposed on stations receiving stock exchange and market news. It is also possible to raise the tax on foreign-built receiving apparatus to 300 lire per annum.

By a decree issued last June, those who intercept and divulge official messages are liable to imprisonment up to five years and subject to fines ranging from 1000 lire to 5000 lire.

How Different Types of Battery Chargers Operate

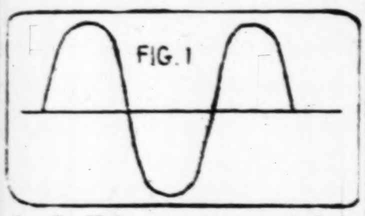
Principles Employed in Gas-Filled and Vibrating Contact Types of Rectifiers Explained.

Wherever storage batteries are employed for the operation of a radio receiver the problem of charging, or furnishing the run-down battery with direct current at a certain rate, is encountered. If a direct current supply is available it becomes a simple matter to insert sufficient resistance in series with the battery to cut the current down to the charging rate designated by the makers of the battery.

When only alternating current is employed for lighting the filaments some means must be provided for rectification, so that only a direct current will be supplied to the battery.

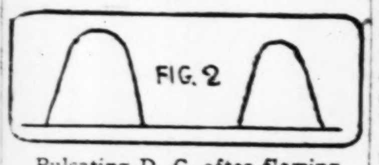
The following explanation by Jesse Marsten appeared in a recent issue of Radio, and may be of interest to all concerned with the operation of radio receivers which include a storage battery to supply the current.

There are two types of rectifiers—tube rectifiers and vibrating contact rectifiers. "Each of these types is easy to handle, since the only operations involved are to connect the storage battery to marked posts on the rectifier, and to attach a plug from the rectifier to the electric light socket.



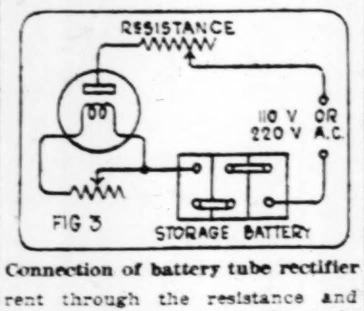
A. C. Voltage wave applied to input of rectifier.

"The theory of the tube rectifier is somewhat similar to that of the vacuum tube. Suppose we have a gas-filled tube containing two electrodes, one a heated filament and the other a cold plate. The filament is heated by some external means. If an alternating voltage is applied to the plate and the filament, and a resistance or a storage battery be connected in series, a direct pulsating current will flow through the resistance. For only the positive half-cycle of the a. c. wave of figure 1 is effective in causing current to flow between the plate and filament of the tube.



Pulsating D. C. after flowing through rectifier.

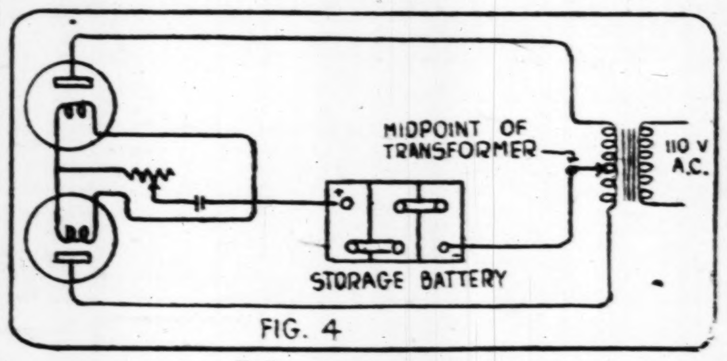
When the positive half-cycle is applied to the plate, electrons from the heated filament are attracted to it, thus causing a current to flow, but when the negative half-cycle is applied to the plate, the electrons are repelled and no current flows. The form of the current through the resistance and battery is therefore as shown in figure 2. The fact that the current through it is pulsating makes no difference, for the current is always in the same direction through the storage battery and hence the chemical reaction takes place in one direction, resulting in charging the battery.



Connection of battery tube rectifier

"It will be evident from the above that only one-half the a. c. energy is used in charging the battery, the negative half of the voltage wave not being utilized. This does not necessarily mean that the efficiency of this method is low, because during the negative half of the wave no plate current flows and hence no energy is used other than the filament power, and this latter is made very low in commercial devices. Thus, even with only one-half wave operation the efficiency may be high. However, it is possible to utilize both halves of the a. c. voltage wave for charging by the expedient of using two tubes in the manner shown in Fig. 4. During one-half of the wave the plate of one tube is positive and charging current flows through the battery, while during the other half of the wave the other tube is active, causing charging current to flow in the same direction as before through the battery. Thus both halves of the a. c. wave are utilized in charging the battery. This method is necessarily more expensive than half wave operation and is really unnecessary for battery charging purposes."

Some means must be provided for lighting the filament of the tube and for this purpose an auto-transformer is employed.



Full wave tube rectifier.

Tubes used for rectification differ somewhat from radio detector tubes in that only two elements are required. They are filled with argon gas, and the filament is spiral shaped. The anode or "plate" is of graphite. The dark gray-black deposit on the inside of the tubes is due to some preparation which is used for purifying the argon gas.

"These chargers come in various sizes designated by the charging current it will deliver, thus we have the 2-ampere size, 5-ampere size and so on. Obviously the type to use depends upon the size of the battery. Thus for a 20-ampere hour battery the 2-ampere size would be suitable, whereas an 80-ampere battery could take the 5-ampere size. The lower the rating of the charger, the longer it will take to charge a given battery. The choice of a suitable charger therefore depends upon the size of the battery to be charged, how much it is used, and how fast it is run

Pointers on Battery Operation.

"One point should be borne in mind, namely, by charging your battery a couple of hours each day, irrespective of whether it is run down or not. It is not the best policy to wait until the battery is completely run down before charging. Another point to bear in mind is that it is not wise to ex-down, and how quickly it is desired to charge the battery. ceed the maximum charging current for which the charger is rated, for it is harmful to the bulb. On the other hand, using too low a charging current results in unstable operation. When charging the battery it is always advisable to disconnect the receiving set from the battery when it is on charge, and to disconnect the charger from battery and the line when the battery is in use. Never use the receiver or other part of the radio set when the battery is on charge. The reason for this is that some point of the radio receiver is always grounded, and generally one side of the a. c. power line also is grounded. It is possible that the polarity of the line ground may not jibe up with the radio ground, in which case harm is likely to come to the tube and possibly some part of the radio set.

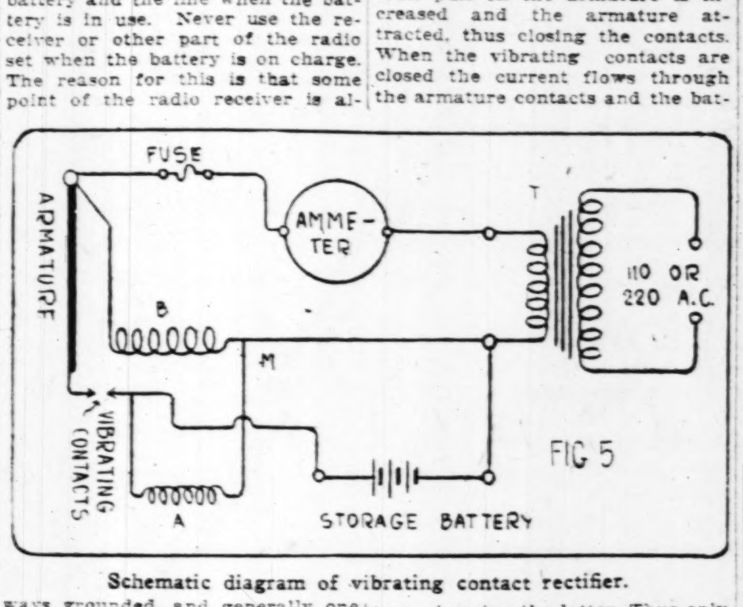
Vibrating Contact Rectifiers.

"In the vibrating contact rectifier the charging current is supplied to the storage battery through two contacts. On the "make" the current flows through the battery and charges, and when the polarity of the charging current changes the contacts open and thus prevent current from flowing through the battery. The schematic connection diagram of this charger is shown in figure 5. The complete charging outfit consistst essentially of the following parts:

"A step-down transformer 'T' for reducing the line voltage from 110 or 220 volts a. c. to the voltage necessary for charging the battery. An electro-magnet "M" has two windings, a d. c. winding 'A' and an a. c. winding 'B.' The vibrating armature, which makes and breaks two contacts, is shown at the left, while the ammeter, which registers the charging current, is connected between the fuse and secondary of the transformer.

"The operation of this charger is as follows, referring to the diagram: The normal position of the armature when the charger is not operating is such that the contacts are open. The d. c. magnet coil 'A' is energized by the storage battery to be charged, and when the a. c. power is not supplied to the charger this magnetizing force is insufficient to attract the armature, hence the contacts remain open. When the a. c. power is supplied to the charger the a. c. maget coil 'B' is excited from the transformer 'T.'

During one-half the a. c. cycle the coil "B" is magnetized in the same direction as the coil, during the other half in the opposite direction. When it is magnetized in the opposite direction the pull on the armature is less than with d. c. alone, hence the armature is not attracted and the contacts do not close. Thus charging the battery on the negative half wave is avoided. However, when the a. c. magnet is excited in the same direction as the d. c. magnet the total pull on the armature is increased and the armature attracted, thus closing the contacts. When the vibrating contacts are closed the current flows through the armature contacts and the battery, charging the latter. Thus only once during each cycle does the magnetizing force become great enough to attract the armature and close the contacts. The armature is designed so that its natural period of vibration is approximately the same as the frequency of the a. c. Thus 60-cycle battery chargers have armatures which have natural periods of about 60-cycles per second. The tension of the armature may be adjusted by means of a thumb screw, in this way bringing the natural period of vibration of the armature exactly in tune with that of the a. c. supply, thus assuring that the armature vibrates in synchronism with the a. c. and operates the contacts but once each cycle.



Schematic diagram of vibrating contact rectifier.

"If the battery terminals are reversed, the charging current will still be in the right direction. For with reversal of battery terminals the d. c. magnet coil "A" will be energized in the opposite direction. In order for the armature to operate and close the contacts the a. c. coil will have to be energized in the opposite direction to assist the d. c. magnetization. When this occurs the charging current flows through the battery likewise, in the opposite direction—which is the proper direction—since the battery terminals were reversed. Thus, irrespective of how the battery terminals are connected to the charger, the battery is charged in the right direction.

"Like all gas-filled rectifiers, this charger requires only two connections to be made. A screw plug fits into a lamp socket for obtaining a. c. charging current, and connections must be made to the battery terminals. The actual charging of batteries is therefore reduced to a very simple operation."

You certainly have the greatest crystal I have ever used--and I have used them all. Your STEINITE is the greatest for volume and distance I have ever tried.

Just for example let me tell you what I did with STEINITE last night. I picked up the St. Louis Post Dispatch. Also heard Omaha and Davenport. Now that's remarkable.

When W D A F, The Kansas City Star is in the air, I attach a small tin horn to one receiver, shunt the other and throw the entertainment out into two large rooms. STEINITE is a REAL crystal. You can refer any doubters to me.

-:- RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT -:-

NEW ARRIVALS ON THE RADIO MART

The two new types of Amrad receivers are now offered at a local dealer's. Model "35" consists of a detector and two-stage amplifier, combining both radio and audio frequency amplification. The tuning element is of the two-circuit type which the manufacturers (of this receiver) claim insures minimum interference from conflicting stations. Only two tuning controls are used, thereby making the operation very simple. The de luxe Amrad Console Grand was developed to meet the demands of the fan who desires an Amrad receiver, battery and charger, including loud-speaker incorporated into a beautiful mahogany cabinet which is an "elegant piece of furniture for the finest home."

Another receiver of especial interest to the radio public is the Pocket Radio, manufactured by the Auto Indicator Co. It consists of a vacuum tube, "A" and "B" batteries, tuning unit and variable condenser contained in a polished bakelite case, with rounded corners and especially designed control knobs. The cover serves as the operating panel, and need never be removed except for the replacement of the tube or batteries. The chief features of this receiver, according to the producers, are that under favorable conditions, no aerial or ground is needed within five miles of a broadcasting station, while attaching to an aerial and ground immediately converts it into a long-distance receiver, with a range of 750 miles or more. The outside dimensions of the set are: 1" wide, 12" long, 2" deep, and it weighs but four pounds. The tuning element, controlled by two switch arms, covers a wave-length range of 200-650 meters. A specially designed rheostat helps greatly to obtain clear, loud and pure toned signals. The variable condenser is of the 15-plate rotating-plate type with vernier. Two sets of head phones may successfully be used with the set.

A new type of aerial wire is being offered the radio public. It is about an inch wide and is made of a copper alloy. Some experimenters assert that the ribbon type of aerial is more efficient than the solid or stranded wire and that the aerial may be 20 per cent shorter if the ribbon is used. The ribbon variety should find favor among the owners of portable sets, particularly during the summer, when camping is in vogue, since it can be reeled up again in small compact form after use.

Univernier dials which combine an instrument dial and vernier control are now made in a mottled red rubber color and are provided with a rich, golden colored cabbrated scale. The construction is the same as the original type, which is still obtainable in black composition with silver dial.

The Ferbend Electric Co. is manufacturing a wave trap which is "guaranteed to tune out local stations." It is sold either mounted or unmounted. The mounting consists of a mahogany finished cabinet, 6" by 6" by 6", a formica panel and control dial.

Burgess 4½-volt dry cells for use either as "C" batteries for amplifiers, or "A" batteries for filament lighting have recently made their appearance on the market.

Talk on "Modern Street Improvements" to Be Broadcast.

The official station of the Associated Engineering Societies will broadcast its fortnightly program at 9 p. m. Thursday, Jan. 24. Wesley W. Horner, Chief Engineer, Sewers and Pavings, City of St. Louis, will deliver a talk on "Modern Street Pavements."

KFEZ is located at McPherson and De Baliviere avenues. The wavelength used is 360 meters.

RADIOTRONS CUT IN PRICE

Now Listed at $5—Cut to Become Effective Immediately.

The Radio Corporation of America announces the reduction in price of all four models of radiotrons. The WD-11, WD-12, UV-199 and UV-201-A detector and amplifier tubes, which heretofore have been listed at $6.50, are now quoted at $5. The change in price is to become effective immediately.

Precautions for the New Set.

In a new set, never connect the B batteries until the A battery has first been connected and the tube has been tried out to see how it lights. This will lessen the danger of burning out tubes.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

All Queries Must Be Accompanied by the Name and Address of the Writer

Q. (1) Is a long lead-in better than a short one? My aerial is 100 feet long. (2) Is a water pipe the best "ground"? J. H.

A. (1) As a rule the lead-in should be as short as possible. Fifteen or twenty feet should be the maximum lead-in length for an aerial 100 feet long. (2 Yes, considering the labor necessary to make the connection as compared with burying copper plates (or copper screening) at a dept hof six or eight feet in the ground.

Q. Would the addition of a variable condenser to my crystal set eliminate code signals? My aerial is 100 feet long. J. D.

A. A 43-plate variable condenser would no doubt make it somewhat more selective, but it is not likely to eliminate all the interference from code messages.

Q. (1) What is the best hook-up for one stage of audio frequency amplification? (2) Is there a broadcasting station at Coldwater, Miss.? I heard them announce the call 5RK, and would like to know something about the station. C. M. H.

A. (1) Transformer coupled audio frequency amplification has been found the most satisfactory and is most generally used. (2) 5RK is an amateur call assigned to H. B. Wooten, Coldwater, Miss. To our knowledge, it is not a broadcasting station.

Q. I heard a station last night which signed CKCK. If you know who this station was, would you plase let me know. I am of the opinion it was some station in England. Wm. F.

A. CKCK is a Canadian station operated by the Leader Publishing Co. of Regina, Saskatchewan.

Q. Will a two-circuit tuner, variable condenser and two stages of radio frequency cover a greater distance than a single-circuit regenerative receiver? L. F. M.

A. Yes.

Q. (1) During the recent cold spell the cold water pipe to which my "ground" is attached, became frozen, and since then K S D's signals are considerably weaker. Is it on account of the ice in the pipe? (2) Does WEB still broadcast? R. B.

A. (1) There is little likelihood that the ice in the pipe had anything to do with the decrease in signal strength. (2) No.

Q. What is the best kind of wire to use for the cat whisker of a crystal detector? Will soldering it to the mounting make signals come in any stronger? L. J. D.

A. One enthusiast who has had years of experience says "any kind.' There is practically no difference, except that the wire should be suited to the type of mineral used. Galena and many forms of synthetic crystals work best if a light contact is employed. No. 28 or 30 copper wire, tapered to a sharp point, is probably as good as any. The signals may be louder if the cat whisker is soldered to the supporting arm, because of the better contact made.

Q. Please give me the complete address of the Sleeper Radio Corporation, manufacturers of radio receivers using the Grimes Inverse Duplex circuit. N. H. McK.

A. Sleeper Radio Corporation, 88 Park place, New York City.

Q. Is there a free night school where I could go to qualify for a Government position as radio operator? C. G. H.

A. The second term of the radio class at Soldan High School has just begun. The class meets on Monday and Wednesday evening of each week, lasting from 7:30 to 9:30.

Q. Will the "Autoplex" circuit operate a loud speaker on distant stations? What is its range? H. M.

A. This depends entirely upon the care used in construction and assembly, and its final efficiency. However, the one-tube set which will satisfactorily operate a loud-speaker on distant stations is quite unusual. One or two stages of amplification are required in most cases.

Q. (1) Can radio frequency be added to a crystal detector set? (2) What type of vacuum tube consumes the least current? (3) How many hours do dry cells generally last when connected to a one-tube receiver? J. B. H.

A. (1) Yes. (2) The UV-199 tube. (3) According to the manufacturers, three cells of the ordinary general purpose type will operate one UV-199 tube two hours a day for 387 hours or 193 days. This particular type of tube requires 3. volts, thus necessitating three dry cells.

RETAILERS' ASSOCIATION TO MEET HERE FEB. 11-13

The second Move-More-Merchandise Conference of the Advertising Club of St. Louis at Hotel Statler, Feb. 11-13, will be held in connection with the first convention of the American Retailers' Association, which was organized last August and now has about 2500 members in 45 states. Last year, more than 1000 retail merchants attended the conference.

The list of speakers includes nationally known merchandising and advertising men, who will discuss such subjects as turn-over, store arrangement, show card writing, newspaper and direct mail advertising. The program has been planned especially to solve the problems of the retail merchants in the smaller towns.

There will be an exhibition of retail advertising campaigns in newspapers, letters and circulars.

Visiting Nurse Association.

The annual meeting and luncheon of the Visiting Nurse Association of St. Louis will be held Jan. 28 at Hotel Statler. Miss Sophie Nelson, recently placed in charge of nursing activities of the association, will speak on "Public Health Experience Abroad."

WHO TOOK THE MURDERED MISER'S $102,000 SECURITIES

Martin was appointed administrator and he and the Sheriff and County Attorney Brown, examining the little red book and the papers, discovered that the sanitarium stock was missing.

Dr. Uhls was questioned. Yes, he had the stock. It was brought to him Dec. 19 by a man who said he was Charles E. Westerhaven, to whom it purported to have been assigned by Gibbs. He retained it and issued new stock to Westerhaven, who gave his address as the Statler Hotel, St. Louis, but who is not known there and has not been found.

Dr. Uhls was found in financial straits and exercising strange control over the addicts at his sanitarium. There was a dairyman, Louis Breyfogle, whose bills for milk furnished to the sanitarium had been unpaid until they aggregated $500. Dr. Uhls gave him a $500 Liberty bond in payment. As he was driving away he was overtaken by men in an automobile, who took the bond from him. He watched them and says they drove back to the sanitarium.

He returned and complained to Dr Uhls. The doctor called in all the patients and told them he would leave his office for an hour, and when he returned he expected to find the bond on his desk. At the end of the hour the bond was there. Charges, however, were made against Dr. Uhls and three of his patients.

After an investigation warrants were issued against Uhls and Davidson, charging them with the theft of the Gibbs stock. Davidson disappeared and has not been caught. Uhls was arrested and brought here. He gave bond and returned to Overland Park.

County Attorney Brown and Sheriff Langford are working hard on the mystery and issuance of murder warrants is expected.

The administrator thinks that after the worthless stocks have been eliminated there will remain of Gibbs' fortune perhaps $25,000, consisting of his farm, his town property and a few good stocks. What remains will go to distant relatives.

The Tenth avenue cottage is a shunned place now. The old man's chair lies where it fell, tipping backward when the blows of the murderer descended. The clock which ticked through the night that the miser lay stark on the kitchen floor has run down. The lamp that held night-long vigil is dark.

New German Oil Formula Rubs Out Rheumatic Pains

Remarkable discovery promises quick, soothing relief for rheumatism, gout, neuralgia and neuritis sufferers.

German Chemistry that has given to the world the boon of Aspirin for the relief of headache pain, and Novocain for painless dentistry, has now come forward with another scientific discovery that promises to make nerve, joint and muscular pains a thing of the past for thousands who have suffered terrible tortures.

A new combination of certain oils has been discovered which produces a clear amber liquid that affords immediate relief from pain in many instances. It is so penetrating that it disappears within a few seconds, so that it must be entirely absorbed by the body tissue. Even in the most advanced and stubborn cases the use of this remarkable oil has shown astonishing improvement at once in many cases. Tired muscles regain life, creaking joints with the pain all gone become supple, the nerves are quickly soothed and the annoying twinges cease.

Rheumatism, gout, neuralgia and neuritis are due to internal infections which throw off poisons. These poisons are carried by the blood to the nerve tissue where they inflame and irritate the nerve sheath. The New German Oil is designed to neutralise these pain-causing poisons, bringing almost instant soothing relief.

So astonishing have been the results from the use of this oil that the American distributors have authorized local druggists to dispense it to rheumatic, gout, neuralgia and neuritis sufferers in this city with a positive written guarantee, signed by themselves, to return the full purchase price of the first bottle if the pains are not wonderfully relieved. All sufferers should take advantage of this liberal offer. Unless you get relief from the very first bottle, your druggist will return your money. It is called Buhler Oil, and can be had at most good druggists, such as Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Stores, Keiffer Drug Co. (2 stores) Enderle Drug Co. (6 stores), Johnson Bros. Drug Co.

SHANTZ CASE DROPPED AFTER 5 CONTINUANCES

Counsel for Interested Company Acted as Special Prosecutor for State.

Dismissal of larceny charges against Miss Nora B. Shantz last Monday ended a case that attracted considerable attention a year ago. The case was disposed of by nolle pros, after five continuances had kept it on the docket for 13 months, the two principal witnesses for the State having failed to appear in court.

A warrant for Miss Shantz's arrest was obtained Nov. 16, 1922, by A. M. Frumberg, counsel for the Knickerbocker Clothing Co., manufacturers of men's and boys' clothing at 1310 Washington avenue, where she had been employed as cashier and bookkeeper. Albert F. Epstein, treasurer of the company, asserted her books indicated a shortage of a large sum.

Frumberg as Prosecutor.

Frumberg, at his own request and that of Epstein, was permitted by the Circuit Attorney to act as special prosecutor and, acting as such, he later submitted evidence for the grand jury on which two indictments charging theft of $500 and $550 were returned against Miss Shantz Dec. 1, 1922.

After the case had been continued twice, once at the request of the State and once for the defense, and three more times by consent of Frumberg and Miss Shantz's lawyer, Edward W. Foristel, Frumberg last Monday asked for a further delay. Judge Falkenhainer refused to grant it, and Frumberg entered a nolle pros, with the explanation that his client and Miss Shantz had reached an agreement.

Following her arrest on the warrant obtained by Frumberg, Miss Shantz told newspaper reporters that she had not taken a cent of the firm's money and added that the apparent discrepancies in her accounts was due to the fact that the company had kept a double set books. As a result of her statement Federal agents examined the company's records to see if proper tax returns had been made to the Internal Revenue Department, and later the company was informed that $11,122 additional assessments had been made for the years 1918, 1919 and 1920, and that over assessments for 1917 and 1921, totaling $4353.60 would be credited to the company.

Other Cases Cited.

The Circuit Attorney said there was nothing unusual in the appointment of the company's attorney as a special prosecutor. He said it was a courtesy and that the custom had been followed for years. He pointed out that all arson cases are prosecuted by associates of John S. Leahy, counsel for a group of fire insurance companies; that former Circuit Attorney McDaniel recently prosecuted a murder case and now is acting as special prosecutor in a case growing out of the Commonwealth Steel Co. strike, and that Sigmund Bass prosecuted a murder case last October, in which the defendant was sentenced to be hanged.

Frumberg said he had to drop the Shantz case because his clients, Epstein and Max Linsky, another partner in the clothing company, were ill over their troubles and unable to appear in court. Epstein recently returned from a sanitarium in Battle Creek, Mich., he said, and Linsky is in California for his health.

'HORACE MANN HOUSE' WAS INTELLECTUAL LANDMARK

Building at Antioch College Destroyed by Fire to Be Replaced by Memorial.

By the Associated Press.

YELLOW SPRINGS, O., Jan. 19. —An intellectual landmark of the Middle West was lost on New Year's night when "Horace Mann House," one of the buildings of Antioch College, was destroyed by fire.

The structure was the home of Dr. Mann, the pioneer educator, when he was president of Antioch 70 years ago, and thus became the Western rendezvous for a number of New England intellectuals and other notable figures in the national life of that period. Among those entertained by President Mann were Ralph Waldo Emerson, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Edward Everett Hale, Daniel Webster and Henry Clay. Hawthorne found among the girls of Antioch College the Hilda of his "Marble Faun."

The college was reorganized three years ago under the presidency of Arthur E. Morgan. The loss of the house is a handicap to Antioch, but steps were at once taken to replace it with a modern structure. The new building is to be called the Horace Mann Memorial, and alumni of the college are subscribing to its erection.

ZIONIST CHIEF COMING JAN. 28

Dr. Chaim Weizmann of London, president of the World Zionist Organization, will speak here Tuesday, Jan. 29, at a banquet at the Gatesworth Hotel at the official start of the drive to raise $100,000 from Jews of the St. Louis district for the Palestine Foundation Fund.

The Jews of the world are attempting to raise $7,000,000 to settle those of their people made homeless by the war in the Holy Land under a protectorate of the League of Nations.

Dr. Weizmann will spend two days in St. Louis and will appear at a reception to be given by the local committee, Wednesday, Jan. 30.

DEMAND FOR DOWNTOWN PROPERTIES IS DOMINANT NOTE OF REALTY MARKET

Several Offers Refused for Northeast Corner of Tenth and Chestnut Streets—Some Sales of Importance Made.

By Berry Moore.

While the week in realty was not marked by any notable announcement of developments, the volume of transactions, as a whole, was of encouraging proportions. The demand for expensive properties, especially in down-town St. Louis, however, continues to be the dominant note, but owners are reluctant to sell with the stage set for construction on a broad scale in this area.

During the last week several offers were refused for the northeast corner of Tenth and Chestnut streets, one for $150,000 and another for $200,000, both submitted by the Albert Wenzlick Realty Co. on behalf of a client. This is at the rate of more than $3000 a foot for the Chestnut street frontage of the site.

The property is owned by the Southern Realty and Financial Co. It has a frontage of 60 feet on Chestnut street by a depth of 119 feet on Tenth street.

The corner, which is the key to this quarter of the block, the supposition is, was wanted, together with adjoining ground on Chestnut street, as the site for an extensive building project.

This block is just east of that acquired by the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. as a site for a group of 14-story buildings for quarters for a central telephone exchange and auxiliary departments.

An offer of $90,000, according to reports, was also made for 813-15 Chestnut street, 42½x82½ feet, improved with a modern two-story building, owned by the W. A. Giraldin & Bro. Real Estate Co.

Other Recent Deals.

The southeast corner of Eleventh and Chestnut streets was recently purchased by the Albert Wenzlick Realty Co., whose office it adjoins on Chestnut street, the northeast corner of Eleventh and Chestnut streets by Frank Dubinsky, and [illegible]05 Chestnut street by the Bush-[illegible]rns Realty Co., which occupies the first floor of the premises. The southeast corner of Tenth and Market streets, also a key holding, was acquired recently by Sam Lie[illegible].

Frank L. Dittmeier a few weeks ago purchased the three-story building with a frontage of 21 feet at 715 Chestnut street from Sophia Lerner, the reported consideration being $2000 a front foot, while the Franciscus Realty Co., of which James L. Franciscus is president, previously purchased the building occupied by this concern at 804 Chestnut street.

The selection of the block bounded by Chestnut, Market, Eleventh and Twelfth streets as the site for the proposed $4,000,000 court house, together with the extensive building program in this section of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., has precipitated the movement in this district.

The sale of the northwest corner of Washington avenue and Twenty-[illegible]t street to Jeremiah A. Dwyer, was announced yesterday by Jerry [illegible]ly, president of the Henry [illegible]emenz Realty Co., representing a client. The price was not announced.

The site has 77 feet on Washington avenue by a depth of 135 feet on Lucas avenue, on which it also has a frontage of 77 feet, and is occupied by old two-story buildings. The other three corners of this intersection are occupied by buildings of the McElroy-Sloan Shoe Co.

Purpose Is Investment.

The purchase was made by Dwyer as an investment, with no plans for the immediate upbuilding of the corner, which is available as a site for a large building.

The Ben Altheimer & Bro. Realty Co. announces the sale of 621-[illegible]3-25 Morgan street to George Graff, the fourth sale in the business district north of Washington avenue, recently brought about by this concern. The lot is 50x150 and is improved with two-story brick buildings. The consideration was not mentioned.

The sale of 718-20 North Fif[illegible]th street, a two-story building, occupying 50x125 feet, is also noteworthy as showing the scope of the movement in this district. The sale, negotiated by the Ben Altheimer & Bro. Realty Co., was made for Beatrice Warner, a client of A. R. Schollmeyer, to J. L. Weinstock.

Another notable sale was that of a comparatively new, modern two-story building at 4524 Delmar boulevard, to George and Augusta Graff, through the Ben Altheimer & Bro. Realty Co. The basis of the transaction was not made public. The building, having a site 50x150 feet, is under lease to the Jewett agency.

Sales made by Jones Bros. Realty Co., including a business block in Wellston to T. L. Remley, and the northwest corner of Enright and Heman avenues, are given elsewhere.

Majestic Sells Three Homes.

Majestic Investment Co., at 4935 Delmar boulevard, reports the sale of three homes on Chamberlain avenue, the past week, and that many persons visited the furnished house at [illegible]702 Chamberlain avenue.

WELLPOTT-WHITE COMPANY ACQUIRES NEW LEASE

The Wellpott-White Co. has acquired a lease through Martin and Breitt of the fourth floor of the building at 709-11 Washington avenue. This company, now located at 505 North Seventh street, handles a full line of notions and kindred merchandise. The space leased will give it approximately double the floor area it now has. It will take possession of the new quarters on or about Feb. 15. The lease was made for the account of the Shoe Mart Co.

APARTMENT HOUSE FOR NEWSTEAD AND OLIVE

Eight-Story Building, to Contain 100 Efficiency Suites, Planned.

Construction of an eight-story apartment building, containing 100 efficiency apartments, at the southwest corner of Newstead avenue and Olive street, is proposed by Chicago and Detroit interests, it was learned yesterday, when the Mercantile Trust Co., as agent, closed the sale of the lot. Estimated cost of the building is $750,000.

One of the purposes of the building, it was said, is to fulfill a demand for reasonably priced apartments. To reduce building costs the architects adopted an architectural style in which local materials can be used effectively. Building stone, tiles and marble are to be supplied by the Missouri Marble Quarries, a corporation recently formed here by George J. Breaker to develop marble deposits at Rush Tower, Mo., near St. Louis.

The architectural style adopted is based on a study of old buildings in various parts of St. Louis, it was said. The building will be in the form of an "H," the six upper stories to be finished in brick manufactured locally, laid in white mortar, and walls of the two lower stories will be faced with stone. This wall of irregularly laid blocks will be relieved with green blinds and high mullioned windows of the main lobby, which will open on a low terrace. The lobby will be paved with blocks of marble.

One of the courts of the building will enclose a garden and private playground for children. It is planned to complete the building early next fall.

CHAS. H. ANDERSON RETIRES AS HEAD OF REALTY FIRM

Charles H. Anderson has retired from active business and has disposed of his interest in the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Realty Co., of which he was president, to the other members of the firm.

Christian Stocke has been elected president, Rudolph A. Buermann, vice president and treasurer, and T. Manson Pegram, secretary of the corporation, which will continue to operate as the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Realty Co. The concern, which is one of the largest and best known in local realty circles, and which has large resources, has been the source of much capital for building purposes in both the West End and on the South Side, notably in Shaw's Lafayette Addition. It recently purchased three blocks in Shaw's Botanical Addition just laid out, and adjoining Shaw's Garden on the west, with a large building program.

The concern has enlarged its organization with a large force of experienced salesmen, which will be divided into groups to give exclusive attention to the various branches of the real estate and building business. The concern has erected apartment buildings in the Delmar Garden tract, involving in cost approximately $1,500,000.

Horace R. Culling has purchased the recently constructed residence, 7048 Westmoreland drive, in Maryland terrace, as a wedding present to his daughter, Mrs. Frank Stafford Hager, formerly Miss Georgine Culling. The sale was made by the Giraldin Bros. Real Estate Co. representing a client.

SMALL farms in winterless California. You can work a small farm with less capital investment; and in California you can work outdoors all the year. The State Land Board of California is offering choice 20-acre farms at Ballico, Mercer County, small down payment, 36 years time on balance. Ample water for irrigation; a small one-family farm, cutting out high labor costs, insures success. Equally good opportunities in other sections of the San Joaquin Valley, as well as Southern California, for the man of moderate means who wishes to get a home of his own. California is the richest State per capita in United States of America. Most of this wealth comes from the soil. No winter handicaps. Illustrated folders descriptive of California mailed on request. C. L. Seagraves, General Colonization Agent, Santa Fe Ry., 946 Railway Exchange, Chicago, Ill. (c99)

Florida

FARM—20 acres, at Vero, price $2900. A. F. Dohr, Kirkwood, Mo. (c99)

FARM—Develop your own Florida orange grove in Lake County's highland lake section; orange groves are paying 20 to 40 per cent on money invested. The Lake County Land Owners' Association, 62 Orchard av., Fruitland Park, Fla., an association of resident orange growers, not land agents, have worked out a plan by which you can secure land and orange trees to plant for what trees alone would cost you elsewhere, just to encourage development. Ten acres planted to grove will cost you $1400. Free book of actual photographs and facts only to those ready to buy. Others please don't write. This is your opportunity if you mean business. No time for curiosity seekers, children or purely tourists.

ST. LOUISANS TO AID MISSOURI U. DRIVE

Nearly 500 Graduates Attend Meeting Preparatory to Campaign for $800,000.

Determination to play a big part in the $800,000 campaign to erect a Memorial Union building and an athletic stadium at the University of Missouri was expressed last night by St. Louis alumni and former students of the school, who attended a dinner and "mass meeting" at Hotel Statler preparatory to launching the local campaign this week.

Nearly 500 "Missouri" men and women were present, nearly half of whom are members of the 22 teams which will do the active campaign work.

Although solicitation will not begin until tomorrow, three contributions of $1000 each were announced at the meeting. The donors were Ernst E. Thiemeyer, David A. Blanton and Frank R. Tate. Tate and his wife last year gave $75,000 to the university to be used in the erection of a new law building as a memorial to their son, Lee Tate, who was killed in an automobile accident. Several St. Louisans contributed $1000 each two years ago when the union building plan was first announced, among them William T. Nardin, who presided at last night's meeting.

Dr. Sratton D. Brooks, president of the University, explained the threefold purpose of the campaign—to raise a memorial to the 103 students of the school who lost their lives in the World War, to provide a union building for student activities and the accommodation of returning alumni, and to erect a stadium intended eventually to seat 65,000 spectators at athletic events at Columbia.

Dr. J. C. Jones, president emeritus of the university, who retired after 41 years of service, only to return to take active charge of the general campaign, told how the students themselves in 1921 pledged $200,000 for the union building. Subscriptions from alumni later brought the figure to $340,000. The present campaign is to raise the remaining funds needed to complete the union building, already started, and to erect the first unit of the stadium in time for the Kansas-Missouri football game next Thanksgiving day.

An Alumni Enterprise.

"This is now an alumni enterprise—the first enterprise in which the alumni has had ever had an opportunity to do something big for the university in its entire history of nearly 100 years," said Dr. Jones. "It is a campaign of opportunity, not of importunity. You will not be begged to contribute, but, conscious of the debt your success in life owes to your alma mater, I think you will contribute."

Cites Larger Crowds.

Forty-one colleges and universities have completed or are now engaged in putting up union buildings or stadiums, Chester L. Brewer, director of athletics, declared. This shows, he said, the importance which the heads of such instietuteions attach to the beneficial results of student activities and physical training. He cited the tripling of the crowds of "old grads" brought to school events by the erection of large stadiums. The union building, as a center of activities, has the greatest influence of any building on a college campus, he declared.

Other speakers included Forrest Donnell, John C. Hall, Earl Nelson and Mrs. Louise D. Stark, president of the Women's Association.

The addresses were broadcast through K S D, the Post-Dispatch radio station, and a telegram was received from "Daddy" De Foe, dean of the School of Engineering, saying that the speeches, songs and college yells were being heard clearly at Columbia.

Campaigns are also being carried on this week at Kansas City and St. Joseph, while other campaigns will be held over the State later.

Among the 103 names to be carved in the hallway of the memorial building as former students who gave their lives in the war are those of six St. Louisans. These are William Erving Boone, Winston Horton, Frank Park Matthews, Thomas Adam Roth, Guy Wentworth Selden, Henry Murray Williams and James Colwell Harris.

George C. Willson is chairman of the St. Louis campaign.

This Time, Steamfitters Talk of Walkout Because Union Firemen Do Certain Work.

Sixteen steamfitters, members of Local Union No. 562, employed installing pipes in an oil burning system to heat service buildings and dormitories at the new St. Louis Training School for the Feeble-minded, Bellefontaine and Hall roads, St. Louis County, have threatened to strike tomorrow, unless three firemen, who stoke a boiler there, are discharged. The steamfitters say the work the firemen are doing should be done by steamfitters' helpers. But the firemen, who are union men, claim the work as belonging to their craft. Efforts to adjust the dispute are being made.

It will be remembered that work on these buildings was delayed six months by a jurisdictional dispute between union carpenters and sheet-metal workers over the installation of metal trim. This difference was finally composed and the work completed.

SCULPTURE OF LEE ON MOUNTAIN UNVEILED

Southern Governors Attend Ceremonies at Atlanta—Head Chiseled From Granite.

By the Associated Press.

STONE MOUNTAIN, Ga., Jan. 19.—The sculptured head of Lee, glistening on the granite side of Stone Mountain, was unveiled here today, the 117th anniversary of his birth.

Standing at the foot of the mountain, Mrs. Helen Plane of Atlanta, 94 years old, pressed with trembling fingers a button that sent an electric signal to men on a scaffold 300 feet up the side of the mountain. Hands that had toiled for weeks in the carving drew aside two Confederate flags and revealed the portrait of Lee. There could be seen around it, the first cutlines of the huge bas relief that in years to come will portray also Jackson and Davis, and the men who followed them. To come later, too, are the full figure of Lee and his loyal charger, the chieftain in the saddle looking out over the infinite expanse of green that is the vista from this point.

Visiting Governors.

Visiting Governors gathered for the ceremony were: Austin W. Peay of Tennessee; E. Lee Trinkle of Virginia; Cameron Morrison of North Carolina; Thomas G. McLeod of South Carolina, and Pat Neff of Texas. Major-General David C. Shanks represented the army and Rear-Admiral James G. Williams the navy. Former Governor D. R. Francis represented Missouri.

Hollins H. Randolph of Atlanta, president of the Stone Mountain Confederate Monument Association, introduced Dr. Plato Durham of Emory University, the orator of the day.

Then Mrs. Plane arose unsteadily from her chair on the platform and walked slowly to the electric button. For Mrs. Plane, a charter member in the Daughters of the Confederacy, it was the realization of a dream. The shrine that is yet in the making is an elaboration of her plan for only the head of Lee in the side of the mountain.

It was the work of Gutzon Borglum. For several months he has worked with scores of drillers and helpers, suspended about half way down the precipice, the full drop of which is about 800 feet. On the other side, the tremendous stone slants gradually and affords an ascent on winding trails, the length of a mile. But on the steep side, it is virtually a perpendicular drop, with only a small patch of shrubbery here and there to break the smooth surface of rock

The figure unveiled this afternoon covers an area of about 22 square feet in the rock. The head is 18 feet high. The completel frieze will depict about 700 figures and cover a space approximately 1300 by 140 feet.

The visiting Governors were entertained this morning at an informal breakfast at the Piedmont Driving Club. The Stone Mountain Memorial Association entertained the visitors tonight at a dinner at the Piedmont Driving Club.

CAUGHT FLEEING FROM STOLEN AUTO THAT HIT STREET CAR

Youth Who Ran After Collision, Taken Into Custody Before Theft of Machine Is Reported.

Traffic Patrolman Joseph Deters, was walking to his post at Twelfth boulevard and Olive street, yesterday afternoon when he saw a westbound Ford coupe collide head-on into a Hodiamont car on Locust street east of Twelfth. He started to investigate and saw a young man jump from the coupe and run. Deters ran too and pursued the man south into an alley. As he turned into an eastbound alley at the back of the Post-Dispatch building, Deters fired two shots, and the fugitive pitched headlong over a pile of gravel. He had stumbled and was captured unhurt.

At City Hospital, where he was pronounced intoxicated, the prisoner said he was John Conley, 19, 1805 North Prairie avenue. At Central District headquarters while Deters was making a report, an hour after the accident, another patrolman appeared and reported the theft of an automobile parked at Sixth and Locust street by Ira Cramer of Granite City. It proved to be the car which Conley abandoned.

Warrants charging automobile theft, feloniously leaving the scene of an accident, and violating the State dry law will be applied for Monday. Conley had in his pocket a bottle containing a whisky-colored fluid which will be analyzed, and three new silk shirts.

AS FARIS FIGURES IT 'CREDITOR' IS A DEBTOR

Holds H. Clay Pierce Owes Bank $87,525 Instead of Institution Owing Him $3918.

Federal Judge Faris yesterday decided that H. Clay Pierce owed the National Bank of Commerce $87,525.43, instead of the bank owing Pierce $3918.31, as Joseph W. Jamison, special master, decided in a report submitted recently on a suit which has been in the courts, State and Federal, for eight years.

The Judge's decision was rendered after both sides in the litigation had filed exceptions to the special master's report. Judge Faris remarked that the exceptions took so wide a range that, "in effect, all the findings of the master are disagreed with." Each side excepted to all rulings adverse to it.

The Judge, on the other hand, found only one thing in the special master's report to find fault with. That was the amount allowed. The court did not agree that Pierce should have certain credits which the special master allowed him, and when the Judge had figured the matter out his way, the judgment stood in favor of the bank in the amount stated.

Pierce's litigation with the bank grew out of loans made by the bank to Pierce and others for financing the Tennessee Central Railroad, in which a St. Louis syndicate is said to have lost about $8,000,000. The loan of $700,000 was made in 1902, and bonds given to the bank by Pierce in payment figured in the reckoning. Two presidents of the bank, the late William H. Thompson and the late J. C. Van Blarcom, were interested in the deal.

The special master found that the bank had obtained $227,962 from its sale of bonds, had obtained $467,141 from Pierce under a judgment in the State courts, and had received $75,341.79 principal and interest from the J. C. Van Blarcom estate, hence that Pierce had overpaid the bank and was entitled to a rebate.

Judge Faris, on the other hand, holds that Pierce was not entitled to credit for the payment made by the Van Blarcom estate, therefore that he still owes the bank.

The case has thus far passed through the local Circuit Court and the Missouri Supreme Court, the Federal District Court and Circuit Court of Appeals, to which last named court it will go again if an appeal is taken from Judge Faris' latest ruling. After the filing of the special master's report, with its small allowance in Pierce's favor, Attorney Henry S. Priest made an argument before Judge Faris, declaring that the bank's officials had set out to persecute Pierce and ruin him, and make him the "goat" in the Tennessee Central transaction. Priest contended that the suit to recover losses to the bank through the failure of the Tennessee Central project should have included all those concerned with Pierce in the promotion. Pierce sued the Thompson estate for an accounting as a result of their association in the promotion, but this suit was dismissed in the Circuit Court last summer.

IBONEZ HINTS AT AID FOR PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE PLEA

MANILA, Jan. 19.—Following the 36-hour reception for Belasco Ibanez, Filipino newspapers vie with each other in idolizing the Castilian novelist in articles in Spanish.

After being wined and dined Ibanez, in a speech in the Senate hall, said:

"I am not a powerful man nor a powerful government with soldiers to command nor one who can make political pacts and alliances. I am only a humble writer, but more than being a mere Spanish novelist I am a novelist in English, French, North American and Italian. I am a novelist of all countries, and my works are translated for many peoples. If you shall ever have need for me, call and I shall respond quickly and write in your behalf—I need not tell you what." This intimation ended the speech in a salvos of applause.

Theodore Kilaw, executive secretary of the propaganda committee, had addressed an appeal to Ibanez to raise his voice in behalf of the Philippine people. Kilaw said:

"We beg you to raise your voice for the Filipino people to the utmost ends of the earth. Be another tribune of our grand cause. Your majestic pen that painted the grandeur of the Argentine now has the opportunity to wage warfare for the beautiful ideal of justice. Yesterday the Filipino accepted America's assistance to free him from Spain's domination and today he depends upon sympathy of Spain to obtain pacifically separation from the United States. Filipinos and Spaniards view the past as a fountain of supreme love and alliance."

GUIDE TO SUE MRS. STILLMAN

By the Associated Press.

MONTREAL, Jan. 19.—Fred Beauvais, Indian guide, his attorney announced today, will file suit for $7621 against Mrs. Anne Urquhart Stillman for compensation for the time he alleges he lost in aiding her and her attorneys in fighting the divorce suit brought by her husband, James A. Stillman, former banker, in which Beauvais was named as co-respondent.

LEVEE BOARD HEAD BARS INVESTIGATOR

Says Proposed Inquiry Is Political Move on Part of Mayor Stephens.

Although the act which created the East Side Levee and Sanitary District provides that the Levee Board's records be open to the inspection of taxpayers or interested persons, President Martin D. Baker of the Board of Trustees of the Sanitary District has refused to allow Mayor M. M. Stephens of East St. Louis to place an investigator in his office to examine the conduct of the board's business.

Baker contends that the investigation is a political move on the part of Mayor Stephens.

"I don't want them mauling over the books from morning to night," he said last night. "If the city wishes to investigate any particular thing they are welcome to our books."

Plans Court Action.

Mayor Stephens announced last night that he would institute mandamus proceedings this week to force Baker to open the books to his investigator.

"The investigation, Mayor Stephens said, is planned to determine the general uses to which the taxpayers' money is put and to ascertain what work has been done and what the board's future plans are. He characterized Baker's refusal as a "high handed affair."

Stephens has employed H. F. Frey of Chicago, an expert municipal investigator, to make the investigation, the first proposed since the sanitary district was created by a special act of the Illinois Legislature in 1907 to prevent a repetition of the disastrous floods of 1903. More than $6,000,000 has been spent so far in drainage work.

Mayor's Statement.

"Citizens of East St. Louis pay 60 per cent of the total tax of the sanitary district and are entitled to know how their money is spent," Mayor Stephens said. "The drainage, sewerage and street problems of the city are in many instances directly connected with the plans of the Levee Board and to conduct the city's business properly the City Council should be familiar with the plans and finances of the Levee Board."

Two members of the Levee Board—Albert Meintz and William Rothe—said yesterday they welcomed Mayor Stephens' investigation and expressed disapproval of Baker's attitude. Meintz and Rothe have been consistently in the minority on all major questions before the Levee Board, particularly in their opposition to Project 12 which provided $8,000,000 for a drainage canal, since dubbed the "Baby Panama."

Circuit Judge Crow yesterday took under advisement mandamus proceedings by the Levee Board to force an extended tax rate in St. Clair and Madison counties to raise $856,730 this year for work on Project 12.

M'ADOO MEN TO ENTER OWN TICKET IN ILLINOIS

Repudiate State Democratic Advisory Convention and Its Selection.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—William L. O'Connell, Illinois manager of the McAdoo presidential campaign, today repudiated the State Democratic advisory convention and its ticket approved yesterday at Springfield.

O'Connell announced that the McAdoo forces would have a distinct and complete ticket of their own to submit to the Democrats of Illinois at the spring primaries.

The advisory convention, which the McAdoo forces now repudiate, chose George E. Brennan, Illinois Democratic organization leader, and Mayor Dever of Chicago, as two of its candidates for delegates to the National convention, and approved Col. Albert A. Sprague of Chicago, an advocate of modification of the Volstead Act and Mayor Dever's commissioner of public works, and Judge Norman L. Jones of Carrollton, said to have been Brennan's personal choice, for United States Senate and Governorship respectively.

Took No Part in Meeting.

O'Connell and other McAdoo leaders, such as former Senator James Hamilton Lewis, did not take part in the meeting.

The delegates at large to the national convention indorsed by the advisory convention were uninstructed.

Calling attention to the fact that the convention failed to advise the voters on the most important office to be voted upon in the April primaries, O'Connell declared that "evidently it was decided by Mr. Brennan, who controlled the advisory conference, that this was too big a question for the voters to be trusted with, therefore he would have to decide it for them."

Former Senator Lewis, an avowed McAdoo supporter and choice of many down-state groups in yesterday's convention for the senatorial indorsement, lost the place to Col. Sprague when the Cook County delegation, comprising about half the convention, decided to discard Lewis. The move brought out strong opposition from important down-state groups and for a time threatened to result in a floor contest of worthy proportions. The determination of the organization leaders to stick to Sprague, however, was backed by such formidable voting strength that the Lewis men refrained from forcing the issue in the convention.

O'Connell's Statement.

"The McAdoo organization in Illinois disagrees with the convention view, and proposes to reverse the situation and ask the voters of Illinois for their advice on this most important question," O'Connell continued in reference to the selection of the delegates and the presidential indorsement. "We propose to submit directly to the men and women voters of the State the names of candidates for delegates and alternates to the Democratic national convention expressly pledged to vote for Mr. McAdoo's nomination for President.

"This decision is in keeping with the provision of our law enabling a direct expression of sentiment by the party voters for all offices. It is also an indorsement of the policy of party nominations by direct vote of the people as fundamentally sound and in the best interest of good government.

BEVERIDGE TO SPEAK AT LINCOLN BANQUET IN ST. LOUIS

Gov. Hyde Cancels His Engagement to Address Young Republicans Here That Day.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 19.—Gov. Hyde today canceled his engagement to speak at the Lincoln Day banquet of the Association of Young Republicans of Missouri in St. Louis, Feb. 12.

The Governor took the action because he has not gained his full strength following the recent severe illness of tonsilitis and indigestion. The Governor also cancelled several other speaking engagements. He said he would not take an extended trip for a vacation on the advice of his physician. He had planned to go to Point Isabel, Tex.

Sam A. Baker, president of the Association of Young Republicans of Missouri, announced the speakers at the Lincoln Day banquet would be former Senator Beveridge of Indiana, Attorney-General Barrett and Merrill E. Otis, chairman of the Missouri Public Service Commission.

TORPEDO HITS U. S. SHIP

But It Had Cap On and Was Fired by French Submarine at Practice.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Co., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

CHERBOURG, Jan. 19. — The United States super-battleship Colorado, steaming out of Cherbourg en route for Nice today, was torpedoed by the French steamer Amphitrite, which was engaged in target practice in the outer harbor. The torpedo struck the Colorado on the bow, but failed to explode. It had a cap on.

Commander Belknap of the Colorado investigated to find out who was knocking on his bow. Then he brought the big ship to, and summoned the commanding officer of the submarine. The French officer came abroad. Commander Belknap shook hands with him, with a smile, and the two officers bade each other farewell all over again.

NEW VOCATIONAL COURSE EXPLAINED

Correspondence and School-Room Work Combined at Benton, Harbor, Mich.

A public high school department where vocational students are studying correspondence courses with a view of obtaining two diplomas, one from the high school and one from an approved correspondence school, has been introduced in the public school system of Benton Harbor, Mich.

The scheme has successfully answered the problem of supplying competent teachers in every line of vocational endeavor and provided a means whereby a student can study for any trade or profession he desires, according to S. C. Mitchell, Superintendent of Schools at Benton Harbor, who outlined the "Benton Harbor Plan of Vocational Training" at the closing session of the convention of the Vocational Education Association of the Middle West at Hotel Chase yesterday.

Benton Harbor provides a classroom and an instructor who coordinates the correspondence work with the high school curriculum, and supervises the daily work of each student. The courses are purchased by the school for the student and the instructor submits the completed lessons to the school.

"The co-ordination of public schools and correspondence schools has tremendous possibilities," Mitchell declared. "Our students are not limited by a pre-arranged curricula. Having chosen his vocation the student's curriculum is planned to fit him in every way. In a correspondence study department there may be 200 students, no two of them doing the same work, with their study guided so that each will receive a high school diploma upon graduation as well as a corespondence school certificate."

Other speakers on yesterday's program included Lewis Gustafson, superintendent of David Ranken School of Mechanical Trades; Lewis W. Smith, superintendent of schools, Joliet, Ill.; Raymond G. Ensign, Dean of Art Institute, Chicago; and Charles A. Prosser, director of Dunwoody Institute, Minneapolis.

About 500 vocational teachers attended the convention which commenced Thursday.

IRON STARVATION
Of the blood, perhaps, and your worn-out, exhausted nerves need to be revitalized.
For this purpose there is nothing better than Organic Iron; not metallic iron which people usually take, but pure Organic Iron—Nuxated Iron—which is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. One dose of Nuxated Iron is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating one quart green vegetables or half a dozen apples. It is like taking extract of beef instead of eating pounds of beef.
Over four million people annually are using Nuxated Iron. It will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. A few doses will often commence to enrich the blood.
Nature Put Iron for Your Blood
In the husks of grains and the peels and skins of fruits and vegetables.
But modern methods of cookery throw all these things away—hence the alarming increase in anemia—iron starvation of the blood, with its never-ending trend of symptoms of nervous irritability, general weakness, fatigue, disturbed digestion, headaches, pains across the back, etc.
Either go back to nature or take Organic Iron—Nuxated Iron—to help enrich your blood and revitalize your worn-out, exhausted nerves.

MARGARET.—Write to the Bureau of Standards, Commerce Department, Washington, D. C., for the information regarding the silk.

FAN.—Lawrence Hanley played leading parts with several road companies but was best known as a stock company actor. (2) We have no definite figures on actors' salaries.

READER.—Baked Finnan Haddie is as follows: Put fish in a dripping-pan, surround with milk and water in equal proportions; place on the back of range, where it will heat slowly. Let stand 25 minutes; pour off liquid, spread with butter and bake 25 minutes.

L. E. K.—A story in which Mrs. Albert Y. Gowen tells of the 42,000-mile honeymoon cruise in a 98-foot gasoline yacht to the world's unfrequented places of romance was printed in the Sunday Post-Dispatch of Dec. 24, 1922. You perhaps can get a copy of this edition by applying to the circulation department.

D. R.—For the afternoon musical we would advise you to wear a little frock of canton crepe, crepe meteor or other silks, either in light or dark shades, according to taste. For the girl of 16 we think something practical, such as a navy blue, with lace trimmings. However, any of the lighter colors can be used and dyed later. The simpler the garment the better for the girl.

PEACE.—Referendum means a law by which all legislation may be referred to the people either for its ratification or rejection. The Initiative is a process by which any law may be enacted, if requested by a special number of citizens. The Initiative and Referendum are becoming common, and their advocates believe that they are the solution of many of our political problems.

SADIE.—A divide is a ridge or area of higher land which separates one natural drainage basin from another; a watershed; hence, figuratively, something that acts as a division line or line of demarcation. (2) A climatic divide is a topographic barrier through the effect of which two adjacent regions have different climates, especially a mountain range lying athwart the direction of the prevailing winds.

GLADYS. — Nitroglycerine is made of common glycerine mixed with strong nitric and sulphuric acids, and is extremely explosive and dangerous. It has to be exploded by concussion or shock, and not by fire. It is used for blasting and other purposes, and occasionally is taken in very small doses as medicine, but never should be used medicinally except by the advice of a physican who should be present when it is taken.

C. F. K.—Dr. R. E. House of Ferris, Tex., discovered Scopolamin which is a drug but harmless. "Twilight Sleep," as it is called, is believed to make people tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, in responding to specific questions. It is used instead of "third degree" to get truth from prisoners. "Truth serum" is the nickname applied by the laity to the drug administered by the doctor for the above purpose.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

A READER.—If you are a resident of Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis County, you do not need a city license on your machine.

CHAS. — The wife retains her American citizenship and need not take out naturalization papers. The 1922 law made no change in her status.

X. Y. Z.—We suggest that you obtain a divorce from her and obtain custody of the child, if that is in accordance with your desires. You probably could not have her prosecuted for bigamy.

EDUCATIONAL. — The courses can be resold by the original purchasers, even though they are copyrighted, unless there is something in their contracts prohibiting that. Reselling the courses does not conflict with any law.

L. D.—The decree for weekly alimony is continuing and need not be renewed. You can garnish all his wages for the back alimony, and you can also reach the property which he has placed in his mother's name. You should consult a lawyer.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

X. Y. Z.—A continuous disturbance indicates some abnormal condition in the intestinal tract, not necessarily cancer. It might be possible to check it temporarily by astringent drugs but the proper procedure is to ascertain the cause and correct it, if possible.

BOYD.—(1) What you heard is a false conclusion. (2) The use of tobacco is, we think, to a certain extent, a preventative, not so much in the chewing as in the smoking of it, but it can not be considered a dependable preventative of tuberculosis.

ANXIOUS.—If in your previous confinements you had enough and nourishing milk, it seems you should have again, if you are in good health. Correct any deviation from health, eat plain nourishing food and drink milk. Exercise daily in the open air. Walking is excellent.

VIOLETTE—If you have already experienced a severe illness you can not expect to regain your former health at once. We suggest such food as milk and eggs, chocolate, if it agrees, and any plain, nourishing food. Rest is important, plenty of sleep and moderate exercise in the open air.

STURGEON.—Nephritis is an inflammation of the kidney. Neuritis is inflammation of a nerve. Either one has a good many causes. We would be glad if, without knowing anything about an individual, we could suggest a specific remedy for either or both. Unfortunately the matter is not nearly so simple. In either case a study of the individual is necessary to ascertain the cause before a proper remedy can be suggested.

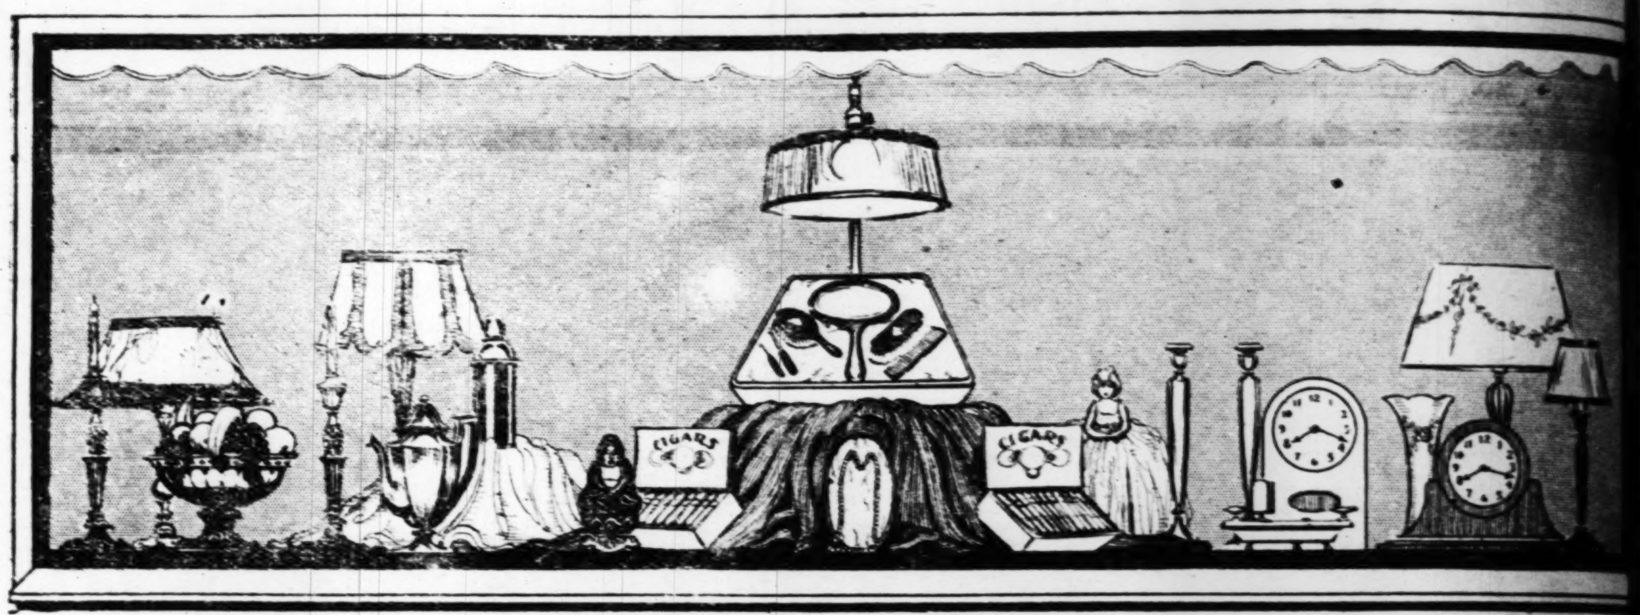
Just Test Your Powers of Observatio



The ability to see a great deal in a short time is not a special gift. It is a power latent in everybody, but usually undeveloped. Glance at a shop as you pass, make a list of the articles you remember, and then return to the window and check up the list. Constant practice in observation will give anyone the faculty of seeing all there is to see.

Many people don't see everything there is to see, but an expert who is lecturing at school for detectives says anybody can cultivate the faculty—Does a horse pull a wagon or push it, and on the old-style nickel, which way is the goddess of liberty facing?—Only accuracy and preciseness make observation of value, and they can be acquired by constant practice :: :: ::

ARE you an observing person? It is quite probable that you think so. Very well, answer this simple question: "On which side do you wear out your shoes first?"

Not more than 40 per cent of a given number of people can answer this question offhand, according to Cornelius D. Fleming, expert on observation, who has recently returned from Europe to lecture on the subject to the newly formed Police Department School for Detectives, at New York City.

Mr. Fleming has a neat way of puncturing the belief in one's powers of observation. He takes a coin from his pocket, glances at it, and says: "This is a 25-cent piece dated 1923. Now tell me: on which side is the date, on which side the value? Aside from these things, what words are on the 'tails' side? On the 'heads' side? If there is an eagle on the coin, is his head higher than, lower than or even with the tips of his wings? How many stars are there on the coin?"

After one has failed hopelessly on this, Mr. Fleming asks which way the Goddess of Liberty on the old-style nickel is facing, and whether she looks in the same direction as the lady on the old-style quarter. At that moment one usually admits lack of observation and begs for mercy.

There are two factors which make observation of value, says Mr. Fleming. These are accuracy and preciseness. The distinction which he draws between accuracy and preciseness can be best expressed as follows: Accuracy consists of noting carefully everything that you see: preciseness consists in not letting yourself be led into observing things that you don't see. Many people, says this expert, allow their hopes or fears to lead them astray when they witness an event, with the result that their subsequent report is inaccurate.

To illustrate preciseness, Mr. Fleming tells the old story about the Senator whose attention was called to a flock of recently sheared sheep grazing on a hillside, their heads all pointing the same direction.

"Those sheep are sheared pretty close," remarked the man who had first noticed them.

"Yes—on this side," replied the cautious law maker.

Overprecise, if you like, yet illustrative of one of the commonest faults of observers—jumping to unwarranted conclusions.

Lieut. Reynolds, in charge of the School for Detectives, recalled another simple question which showed how little the average person observes. In 1895 Mr. Fleming taught at a school on 125th street, and Lieut. Reynolds was one of his pupils. The Lieutenant remembered the teacher's asking the class how many steps there were in the front stoop of each one's home—and not one was able to tell.

The faculty of observation, according to Mr. Fleming, is shamefully neglected. We go about literally "having eyes and seeing not." There is no way of cultivating this marvelous faculty except by individual exercise—and we steadfastly refuse to exercise. Mr. Fleming, speaking in no spirit of criticism, would like to see regular courses in observation in the schools. Children should be trained in accurate and precise observation from their youngest days. If you wish to develop the art of observation you can easily train yourself. Robert Houdin, the great magician, used to teach his son, who acted as his assistant, to observe in the following manner: As the two walked along a street, Houdin would say to his son, "What is in that shop window?" indicating one they were passing. The boy would give the window a rapid glance, and as the walk continued he would tell his father what he had seen.

When the list was complete as far as the youth could make it, they would return and check up his report. By such constant practice young Houdin became so expert that he could name every article, together with its position, in the most crowded display window after a mere sweeping glance that apparently saw nothing.

This ability to see a great deal in a short time is not a special gift. It is a power we all have latent in us; the pity is that it is undeveloped. Constant practice in observation will give anyone the faculty of seeing everything there is to see. You can do it as easily as the son of Robert Houdin.

In your office or store it is likely that you saw your employer at some time during the day. —What color was his necktie?

Train your faculties to take note of about you. One good method is when riding street car to take a comprehensive glance at the vertisements across the aisle from you and many you can name to yourself. Or do as did: glance at a shop window and see things you can name.

Constant practice in noticing details will a clear grasp of the whole.

Here are a few questions which, if you observant, you should have no trouble in See how many of them you can reply to with assurance.

Consider a clock face having Roman indicate the hours. How is the figure 4

In the same clock face, are the figures 4, 6 which naturally occur at the bottom of the dial, side up or upside down?

In what quarter of the heavens do you first new moon?

To what point of the compass are the horns of new moon—that is, the points of the pointing?

You rode downtown in a street car Did the conductor on your car have a or was he clean-shaven?

In your office or store it is likely that your employer at some time during the day. color was his necktie?

We have already asked you what is on a What is on a half-dollar, new style? Old style? nickel, old style? A dime, old style? A penny?

What sort of collar did the conductor on the going street car or bus wear?

Try this one on your friends. If your a second hand, show them the face for seconds and then ask them to write down the erals in order as they saw them. This given to a class of 104 men, and only 12 rect in their answer. Simple? all. There is no figure 6 on a with the second hand in the tion. THE CHARM OF WOMAN VS. THE WEIGHT OF EVIDENCE

In fourteen years forty-three women have been tried for murder and 36 have gone free—Only one sentenced to death but commutation in her case is predicted—How sympathy works to keep Justice blind—Murderers of husbands easily pass through the "not guilty" mill—Leniency of jurors is in proportion to the beauty of the defendant in many instances :: ::

SEVENTEEN years ago Webster Guerin, brilliant young Chicago man, was shot and killed. Mrs. Dora McDonald, wife of "Mike" McDonald, gambler de luxe, who had been infatuated with Guerin and apparently repulsed by him, was tried on the charge of murder and acquitted. And the jurors wept.

Mrs. McDonald was beautiful. Guerin was dead. The homicide took place Feb. 21, 1907. Since then 43 women have been indicted and brought to trial on the charge of murder in Chicago, and only seven have been found guilty of anything.

The remaining 36 have gone absolutely scot free, the most recent having been discharged last December. Fifteen other women have been exonerated by Coroner's juries, and in strict justice it must be said that in many cases the verdict was justified by the facts.

But in almost every one of these cases where the preliminary evidence was sufficient to justify indictment, and where acquittal later resulted, it is a matter of fact and record that the jurors wept.

Not one of the women convicted was young or even passably good looking. In only one case was a plea of guilty entered, and it is believed that the poverty of the accused had much to do with it. She had a better defense than many of the others, but it appears that she did not have the money to pay a lawyer who would tap the lachrymal glands of the jurors.

Thus it will be seen that in a trifle less than 17 years 51 women, young and old, have been charged with homicide in Chicago—an average of three a year—and escaped punishment.

Only seven have paid any penalty whatsoever besides the temporary incarceration prior to trial.

It must further be mentioned that in only one of the seven cases did the jury recommend, or the Court impose, the death penalty. The woman thus convicted, Mrs. Sabella Nitti Crudelle, is now in the Cook County Jail awaiting the time when the sob squad will obtain a commutation.

Aside from the fact that the murder of her first husband, Nitti, was committed with cold deliberation there is another fact that may or may not have had its influence with the jurors. Mrs. Nitti-Crudelle, especially when angry, has the sort of face that one does not care to meet on a dark night.

Chicago, therefore, would seem to be an interesting case for the alienist. Crimes, capital crimes otherwise hideous, do not seem to be crimes in Chicago, when the accused is a young or a beautiful woman. Whether or not many of the jurors are properly candidates for the psycopathic ward, is the problem to be solved by the alienist.

The 43 homicides where trials resulted, range all the way from drunken fights through rage, jealousy, betrayal and unrequited love; through premeditated desire for freedom, to the coldly planned, ghastly murder of husbands, lovers and children, for insurance money.

Caesare Lombroso, author of the "Female Offender," was merely one of the world's great alienists who have long maintained that the female criminal is more dangerous, more subtle, than the male. In the abstract they were away ahead of Kipling.

Granted that the bounden duty of the male is to be chivalrous to the female, Chicago has many times witnessed the confusion of snivelry with chivalry. The jurors wept.

Once, where it is believed that a conviction would have resulted, the Grim Reaper took a hand, aided by the accused. She was Mrs. Louis Vermilya, who was specifically accused of the murder of Arthur Bisonette and R. G. Smith, by poison, and was believed to have killed others.

Both Bissonette and Smith were among her rather numerous lovers, though a glance at Mrs. Virmilya did not justify their infatuation. She was big and gross, with scarcely a trace of facial beauty.

Immediately after Bissonette's death an investigation was begun. All of her alleged victims are declared to have frequently eaten breakfast at her home. When a post mortem showed much arsenic in Bissonette's intestines and stomach, the police got on the job in earnest.

She was perfectly calm until it was found that one of the pepper boxes was very heavily impregnated with arsenic. It was also found that she frequently gave her guests eggs for breakfast, requiring the use of pepper and salt.

Brought to trial there was a disagreement and the jury was discharged. There seemed a peculiar disinclination to hurry her to a second trial, and one day Mrs. Vermilya was found to be seriously ill. Partial paralysis preceded her death from poison. She had lost her nerve.

There was the case of Ruby Dean, cabaret singer, in love with Dr. Leon Quitman.

She was young and beautiful. Dr. Quitman, who was married, was shot to death in his apartment on Surf street. "They struggled over the possession of a revolver and it was accidentally discharged." The jury wept and freed her.

Pauline Plotka called at the office of Dr. Anton Jindra, who, she later declared, had "sought to throw her over." The jurors wept and discharged her.

Margaret Seithhamier called at the office of Attorney Benjamin Burr. "There was a struggle for the possession of a revolver, and Burr was killed. She was sent to the Home of Good Shepherd, Chicago, until she became of age, a period of three years.

Mrs. Cora Orthwein lived in a luxurious apartment on Surf street. A close friend was Herbert P. Ziegler, automobile dealer. One night they visited a big cabaret, drank heavily, and quarreled. She left the place and went to her apartment. He followed. She refused to let him in. He kicked at the door. Sundry shots were fired as the door burst. Ziegler departed this life. She was indicted and tried on the charge of murder, and the jurors wept and discharged her. Mrs. Orthwein was a beautiful woman.

Then, on the other side of the fence is the case of Mrs. Vera Trepagnier, a frightened old woman. Born and reared in luxury, misfortune had brought her to poverty in New Orleans, where she had been a belle and heiress. She possessed a splendid miniature of George Washington. Coming to Chicago she entered into an agreement with Paul Volland, to make and sell reproductions of that art treasure. Subsequent to the homicide Mrs. Trepagnier declared that Volland failed to sell more than a handful of the reproductions, or said he failed, and refused to give back to her the treasured miniature. Disheartened, broke, desperate with poverty and rags, she made another call, with a revolver.

Mrs. Trepagner was not young. Mrs. Trepagnier was not beautiful. Mrs. Trepagnier's woman lawyer did not tap the lachrymal glands of the jurors. Those stern, unbending men said, in effect:

"How dare you come in here, old and unbeautiful. Go to Joliet for 14 years and let this be a lesson to you." She died in Joliet.

Then there was the case of Mrs. Louise Lindloff. Only she and the Almighty knew just how many people she murdered by poison for their insurance. Husbands, lovers, her own children—all looked alike to her. Once she had an insurance policy in her favor on the life of a person, that person was a candidate for the grave. She was big and bestial, a cold-blooded, deliberate killer. Her lawyer, nevertheless, caused some of the jurors to weep, and she got 14 years at Joliet Penitentiary—a second-degree verdict—and there she died.

Those who would like something that would make Captain Kidd look like a sophomore might consider the case of Mrs. Victoria Turek. Less than two years ago her husband, an invalid, was found hanging in the cellar of their home.

Suicide! Ah, yes, until someone examined his head and found that he had been struck a terrific blow, sufficient to knock him senseless, on a spot where it could not have been self-inflicted.

The police declare that Mrs. Turek confessed to them that she and her paramour, an old friend of the family in Poland, had conspired to remove Turek; that her lover concealed himself in the cellar, and that she asked Turek to go into the cellar to get something for her; that her lover smashed him over the head, and together they hanged him to a rafter.

"I waited until I was sure he was dead, and then went upstairs," is part of the story the police declare she told them. Brought to trial, the State's most important witness refused to testify, and she was acquitted for the lack of evidence. That jury didn't weep. It shuddered.

Just a brief glimpse at the case of Mrs. Emma Simpson, beautiful and the niece of a wealthy, powerful Chicago man. She had brought suit for separate maintenance against her husband, Elmer Simpson. The case was being heard before Judge Brothers.

Came a sharp verbal exchange, and Mrs. Simpson rose in court and fired four shots into her husband, killing him. She was brought to trial. Her counsel is an expert at turning on the pathetic valve. The jury brought in a verdict declaring that she had committed the act charged in the indictment, but that she was insane when she did it, and was still insane. So she was sent to the Chester Asylum for the Criminal Insane, and in two months was sane and free. The jurors wept!

Only about a month ago, on Dec. 19, 1923, Mrs. Lucille Kavanagh was acquitted of the charge of

How knights of the variable condenser jousted right merrily until one was routed from the air—Jazz and the classics catapulted across an apartment house areaway and what came of it — Starting out with ear pads and winding up in a padded cell—What the judge said when the case got into court—A radio story with amplification :-: :-:

IN THE apartment house at 22 Overpeck avenue, in Ridgefield Park, which is in New Jersey, lived not long ago one Louis Vanderpuyl. He and his wife found life running smoothly enough for all practical purposes. Mr. Vanderpuyl was 50 years of age—a contemplative age, a peaceful age. Life's storms might beat around the walls of 22 Overpeck avenue, but only the faihtest rumblings reached the Vanderpuyl ears.

Today, alas, things are different. It was this way:

Rather more than six months ago the Vanderpuyls were sitting peacefully by the evening lamp. The cares of the day were past. Bedtime waited pleasantly. Suddenly Mr. Vanderpuyl sat up.

"What's that?" he inquired of his wife.

"What's what?" replied Mrs. Vanderpuyl.

"That—listen!"

Together the Vanderpuyls listened.

"This is station Blaa Wurf. The selection you just heard was Miss Katie Cadenza singing 'No, We Have Some Bananas.' Miss Cadenza's next number will be"——

Mr. Vanderpuyl waited not to hear what Miss Cadenza's next number would be. He strode to the window and flung it up. Across the court he saw the windows of another apartment open. In front of one was a large black horn. From the horn issued noises referring to Miss Cadenza's next offering, and even as Mr. Vanderpuyl leaned out there burst on the listening ear of night a more or less soprano voice telling the world that Barney Google had Goo-goo-googly eyes. Mr. Vanderpuyl leaned out farther.

"Hey!" shouted Mr. Vanderpuyl. "Shut that thing off!"

The owner of the big black horn appeared at the window.

"Darned if I do," said this person.

"Spark Plug ran the other way," chanted Miss Cadenza, who was in an informative mood and not a bit backward about sharing her knowledge.

"Shut it off!" insisted Mr. Vanderpuyl.

"Won't," was the reply.

"We hope you are enjoying our concert," interposed the polite announcer at Station Blaa Wurf.

"Bang!" went the Vanderpuyl window.

But the glass was never rolled that would stop a healthy loud speaker when it really got warmed up. Till the last least station signed off the Vanderpuyls' ears were assaulted. There were intervals of raised windows and hoarse vituperation, alternating with periods of tense waiting and hoping that this number would be the last, the very last, that that infernal loud speaker would utter. Somehow it never was. The night passed somehow. The next night arrived. Let us draw a veil.

The human frame can endure so much and no more. Just about the time the neighbors got really interested in the cross court battle Mr. Vanderpuyl broke the rules. He went to the Recorder's Court in Ridgefield Park. He said:

"Whereas, one not named herein does inhabit, live in, take residence at and generally infest the flat, apartment and domicile across the court from my dwelling place, and whereas the said insect over the area does with malice aforethought own, operate, indulge and take particular delight in working a set of radio apparatus as hereinafter described to-wit: one loud speaker, with conjunctive tubes, wires and other junk, and I wish the man who invented it could be hanged; and whereas this human wen keeps his windows open; and whereas I haven't had a peaceful evening since he started his doggone apparatus, now, therefore, I do beseech, beg and importune the court that it grant me relief. Failing an order of instant electrocution, a small injunction will do. And we will ever pray."

The learned Court said in part: "We have listened to the statement of the complainant with a great deal of interest, and do thereto and therefore ascribe, adjudicate and render verdict as follows, to-wit: (Cassidy, take your foot in your hand and find out what hook-up this bird across the way uses. I'd like to try it out some time—can't get Chicago clear at all.) It is not within the province of this court to effect any stay in the case now before it, things being as they are, and the hereinbefore described apparatus not falling within the classification of cruel and unusual punishments, making an amendment to the Constitution necessary, which is un-American and not to be thought of, sine qua non e pluribus unum caveat emptor."

"Meaning nothing doing?" said Mr. Vandepuyl, with admirable insight.

"Meaning that," replied the Court. "Next!"

Mr. Vanderpuyl gat him thence.

"Odsbodikins!" he remarked. "An I find small solace at law it shall go hard but I'll twist yon varlet's ear by other means, consarn him!"

Then sought he the lair of a magician, and proper oblation, largely consisting of very fine engravings issued by the Government and b numbers thereon. And things began to arriv Mr. Vanderpuyl's apartment. And presently one in overalls, carrying a bundle of very bright of curious design, and made incantation with and batteries and the cold-water pipe. "Now," the one in overalls, "if you follow carefully th rections, remembering always to use the small as indicated, your success is assured. For," he, "this set'll bring in K S D any old time or I'll my shirt. Thanks." And he in overalls went way. And Mr. Vanderpuyl waited for the nigh

That evening the man across the court opened windows as usual and let fly with a selection tit'ed "A Talk by Paul E. Anna, the Happy Ho Hoboken." But instead of the usual protests came a surprise. Mr. Vandepuyl's window op indeed; but it opened to admit the insertion larger and blacker horn than his own, and a co blast consisting of "A classical selection en 'O, Quiet Night,' by the Marine Band." Mr. V derpuyl was fighting with his enemy's weapons

All that evening the battle raged, with no ad tage on either side. The apartment house r to the racket. The halls were resonant with tures of jazz bands and lectures on the care cultivation of the human ear. Such of the ne bors as did not decide to move made book on contest. But the strain told. Mr. Vanderpuyl began mutter and act strangely. His wife watched anxiously. One day she heard him murmur, be selections, that his wife would soon be moth orphans. She became alarmed.

A Peep at Pirate Morgan's Treasure Cave

almost two and one-half centuries, the entrance has sunk until now it is 75 feet below water's surface—But B. J. Keegan, diver on U. S. tug, braves sharks and devilfish to investigate tradition of Old Providence Island — He makes way upward into cavern where there are ancient Spanish cannon and cannon balls, and rusty old gates of steel protecting iron vault—There, he believes, will be found plunder of Sir Henry Morgan

TO EXPLORE an old cavern of the Spanish Main which contains ancient Spanish cannon and which may have been the hiding place of Sir Henry Morgan's pirate treasure—such was the recent exploit of Bernard Joachim Keegan, expert diver on the United States wrecking tug Favorite of the Panama Canal Zone.

Not only were there antique cannon and cannon balls in the cavern, proving that it had been used by armed forces in the days of the buccaneers, but massive and fast-locked steel doors still guard—what? Doubloons and pieces of eight, bullion, jewels—all the loot which sea robbers of 250 and 300 years ago plundered from merchant vessels and coast towns, in the belief of Keegan.

Only a deep-sea diver could have done what Keegan did, for the shore of Old Providence Island has been slowly sinking, in that locality, and the entrance to the cavern now is 75 feet below the water's surface. Then a long passageway leads upward to the dry interior of the chamber.

It was not a pleasant undertaking, even for an experienced and well-equipped diver, since sharks and devilfish attacked the intruder and once forced him to retreat. But Keegan is Irish, and what were a few murdering monsters of the deep to him? He reached the cavern, explored it as thoroughly as he could, tried to force open those tantalizing, rusty doors and failed, then retraced his steps.

For generations local tradition on the island has pointed to that spot as the place where Morgan, perhaps the world's most famous pirate and certainly one of the wickedest and bloodiest men who ever lived, hid his ill-gotten riches. None of the natives would go near the place, for might they not see the ghost of the terrible man who robbed and burned and slaughtered, who finally cheated his own men and fled, who was arrested and sent to England and who, incredible as it may seem, returned to the New World as the Lieutenant-Governor of Jamaica?

And since the time of Morgan, who died in 1688, the entrance to the cavern has been sinking lower and lower beneath the water, until today only a diver with the best apparatus can win his way through to the cavern. If Morgan's treasure be there, it has reposed undisturbed through the years which saw piracy eliminated and saw the passing of the Spanish power from the New World. Then, enter Mr. Keegan! And here is the tale of his strange adventure, and his hopes, in the words of Keegan himself.

According to this Irish soldier of fortune, who served on a submarine during the World War, and who has braved too many dangers in an adventurous life to be afraid of "the devil or the deep blue sea," the entrance to the cave is in the midst of a wonderfully beautiful forest of coral trees, varying from 20 to 30 feet in height. He said:

"In all my years of submarine explorations these coral trees were the most beautiful creation of nature it has been my fortune to behold. The waters of the tropic sea were exceptionally clear and I could see 60 feet all about me. Everywhere the forest of coral trees stood up majestically. The branch leaves were as fine as a piece of lace work that would adorn a lady's gown, pure white in color, and the trunk branches were of purple.

"When I arrived at the entrance of the cave, which is almost on a level with the ocean's bottom at this place, I did not see either the ghost of old Morgan or the devil standing there on guard, as I had expected to from the tales that the natives of Old Providence told me.

"But there were several sharks and devilfish on duty. The sharks are not so dangerous in deep water, but the devilfish are well named, for they are the fiercest and most dangerous of all the creatures of the deep which a diver ever encounters. Perhaps they were substituting for their namesake that day.

"They were exceptionally large, with gigantic 'wings' and long tails. These fish wrap their wings and tails, which have sharp, jagged spines on them, around a diver, pierce him to the heart, and then devour a part of him. I had no wish for such a fate, and consequently I put up a great fight in self-protection. But the fish so greatly outnumbered me and were so unusually vicious, one of them trying to seize me around the neck and only being prevented by quick work, that I gave the signal and was pulled up to the surface again.

"There I got an electric rod, which the electrician of the Favorite had previously made for me, and descended once more. This time I gave the bullies of the deep more juice than they cared to stomach, and cleared my way into the treasure cave.

"The road heading in from the entrance has a slight upgrade and runs in, as near as I could gauge, about 1000 feet. At the end is a large compartment, partly under water, that had every evidence of having once served as a powder magazine and a treasure room.

"This room was one of the headquarters of Morgan, as nearly as I could figure out. There were a number of old Spanish cannon, mounted and apparently ready for service, pointing outward, evidently to keep anyone from entering the cave who was not authorized. Nearby were piles of round cannon balls for the guns.

"Directly above was a steel door, rusted with age and very heavy. It probably never has been opened since Morgan died, more than 200 years ago. I could see that the door entered into a heavy iron vault, and from an inspection of Morgan's old fort above the cave I believe that some passageway once led from this vault into the fort. But that passageway has evidently been closed for years by the sinking of the cave and it could only be found by digging through many feet of rock.

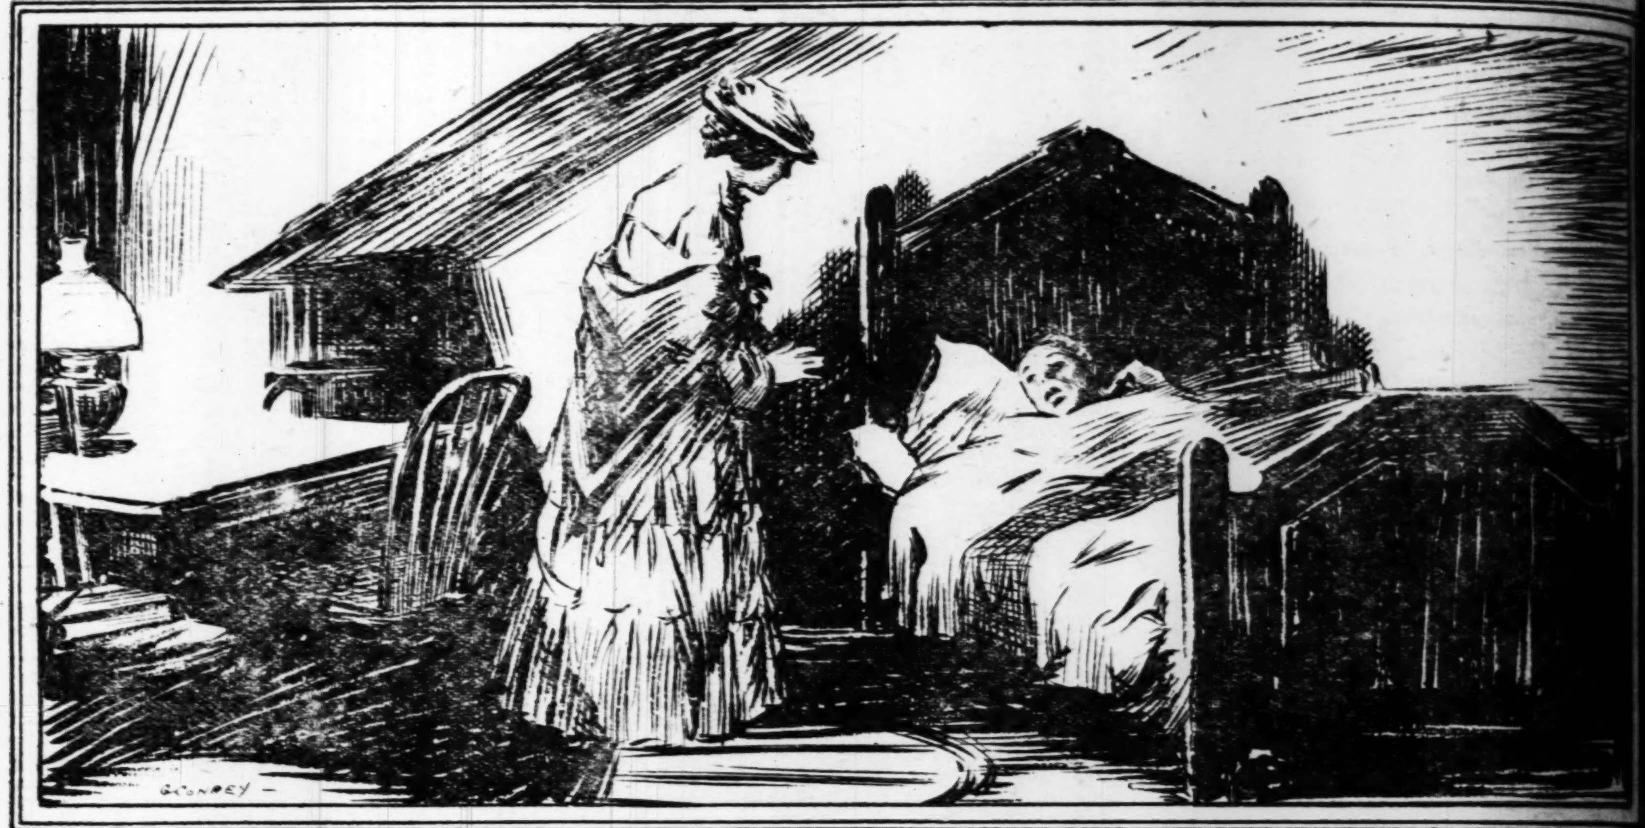
The devilfish were exceptionally large, with gigantic "wings" and long tails. They so far outnumbered Keegan and were so unusually vicious, one of them trying to seize him around the neck and only being prevented by quick work, that he gave the signal and was pulled up to the surface.

Humor and Tragedy of Famous Folk Flash in This Wom



"The last time I ever saw Oscar Wilde was in Paris, living in a wretched room in the attic of a squalid little hotel.

Miss Elisabeth Marbury, dramatic authors' agent, writes of contacts with celebrities and nonentities—She sold Oscar Wilde's "Ballad of Reading Gaol" for him, to the New York World when he was in prison—She found Richard Mansfield a most delightful man to owe one money—Millionaires, she insinuates, are a stingy lot—A spinster at 67, always in love, this candid woman explains why she never has married :: :: ::

IN AN English prison was a convict who picked oakum during the tedious work hours. At night in his cell, before the lights were turned out, he sat at a tiny table writing. The prisoner was writing a poem. It was a great poem, too. Not every person in compulsory confinement can write a great poem, but this man did, being different from the ordinary run of men. After he finished this work he wrote a letter to a young woman in New York, inclosing his new poem. She was Elisabeth Marbury, a dramatic agent. This imprisoned poet was a playwright also, and Miss Marbury had "placed" his plays in America before he was incarcerated.

The poet was Oscar Wilde. "The Ballad of Reading Gaol" was the title of the poem he sent to Miss Marbury. He needed a few things for his personal comfort in prison, he wrote, and would she—or could she?—sell his new poem in New York and send him a little cash for it? Just a few pounds, he suggested. The poet was in deep disgrace and his world had turned away from him. For years it had fawned upon him, applauded him, acclaimed him as the wittiest, most sparkling, the least banal writing man of his day. Then, in his extreme ignominy, his own England would have none of him.

Miss Marbury, now acknowledging to 67 years, includes the Wilde incident in her big book of personal memories, "My Crystal Ball," just published in New York by Boni & Liveright. As to the ballad of Reading Gaol sent her in manuscript she writes:

"As I read it, it seemed like a voice from the dead. I remember that the tears rolled down my cheek. Then I realized that to sell it, after all, might be difficult. My fears were justified, for after peddling it about unsuccessfully, for no editor was willing to revive Wilde's memory in his magazine, I sold it to the New York World, which paid me $250 for it. This money I sent to Wilde, together with the manuscript, which he wished returned. I have often wondered whether this original is still in existence.

"Then came the moment of his liberation. The story has been too often told. Shortly afterward he sought me out in Paris, unkempt, forlorn and penniless. He told me that he had just staged a miracle play in the Latin Quarter. I knew that Charles Frohman stood ready to commission a comedy from him, and had even authorized me to prepare the contract and to advance Wilde $500 on account, which I did. But when I presented the agreements to him for signature, his hand trembled and he wrote 'Sebastian Melmoth,' a fanciful name he had chosen to conceal his identity. I looked at him fixedly and said: 'This contract is being made with Oscar Wilde, who alone has the talent to fulfill it. I will accept no understudy, my friend. This is to be your recall to honor and to fame.'

"His tears blotted the page. The first name was erased, and with firmness his own was affixed to that contract, which, alas! was never productive, as he died shortly after its execution.

"The last time I ever saw him was in Paris, living in a wretched room in the attic of a squalid little hotel, and the last letter I ever received from him was written to warn me against a youthful adventurer who was then exploiting stray Americans.

"The bed on which his bulky body was stretched was covered with a hideous brown blanket. The furniture was of the ugliest and plainest description. Not a creature comfort of any sort was visible. I recalled the house in Tite street (Wilde's London home, where he lived in luxury). The contrast was appalling. His few remaining friends had given until they could give no more. They at least had kept the roof over his head and had provided him with the necessities of life. He barely recognized me. The memory of that visit is still painful."

In a business career of more than 40 years, involving more than 70 trips across the Atlantic, Miss Marbury came in contact with virtually all of the playwrights of France, England and Am ica. Quite naturally, these contacts cluded also the actors, actresses and ducers. The famous singers also dwell her crystal ball of memories. It is quite apparent that Miss Marbury has no ingrowing affection for mere millionaires. "The richer your friends are the more they will cost you. There is no greater fallacy than to imagine that millionaires are profitable acquaintances. In my long and varied experience I have found them to be a very expensive luxury. When I was a young girl I had a friend whose income was $40,000 a year. It was always I who paid for the matinee tickets, for cabs, for luncheons and for similar items.

"Once in London I was the daily companion of a multi-millionairess from a large Western city. We lunched, dined and went to the play. At the end of a week I had to retire, as in the seven days I had spent $150 upon her entertainment.

"Believe me, it is far cheaper in the end to pay for your own taxis, your own meals and your own pleasures. The rich, as a rule, never acquire the habit of incidental spending. They donate libraries, they found charities and endow churches, but the every-day items of life seem beneath their comprehension."

In London the American Ambassador, James Russell Lowell, proposed to present Miss Marbury at court. "Oddly enough, this held no attraction for me. Then, as all through my life, I escaped the lure of titles. I felt with Emerson that the only real aristocracy in the world was the aristocracy of brains; it was the opportunity of penetrating into the circle of such men as Charles Robert Darwin, John Tyndall, Thomas Henry Huxley and Herbert Spencer of which I eagerly availed myself. They were my father's associates during this London visit. I absorbed from them."

She tells a Huxley anecdote. They were at a Sunday evening "high tea" at Prof. Huxley's house. After supper the young folks went to the lawn to play croquet. Nearby was a Nonconformist church. "The singing was distinctly heard, as was the clicking of our croquet balls. In the midst of the fun a stern-looking individual appeared, stalked up to Prof. Huxley and said:

"'Sir, the rector and our congregation beg that during the hours of service you will refrain from disturbing us by making this most objectionable noise with the croquet balls.'

"To which Huxley loftily replied: 'Sir, I and my guests beg that, during our enjoyment of my garden, your rector and his congregation will refrain from disturbing us by making the very distressing noise caused by your singing.'"

Getting back to America, Miss Marbury is writing about something which reminds her of a very witty remark attributed to the wife of Lieut. Hobson, the hero of the Spanish-American War. After addressing a meeting in Chicago, so great was the enthusiasm that the Lieutenant was forthwith kissed by 3000 women. When Mrs. Hobson was asked whether she objected to this, she replied:

"'Not in the very least! I infinitely prefer to have my husband kissed by 3000 women than that he should be kissed 3000 times by one woman.'"

Just now Eleanor Duse, after a long retirement, is back in America, and on the stage. This makes timely the story Miss Marbury tells, about Duse's first visit to this country. She was about to begin her Boston engagement. The local theater manager was named Stetson. He was almost an illiterate.

"When I entered Stetson's office he was at his desk, red-faced and explosive. In front of him stood a little Italian who was talking in French with his lips, head, arms and legs, but all to no purpose. I was hailed by Stetson with delight and relief.

"'Gosh! Find out what this dago is saying. He don't speak nothing.'

"I tried to convey the fact that Mme. Duse was ill and overworked, and that she couldn't possibly give the extra matinees which Stetson had advertised. He had engaged her on a guarantee and was taking no chances of a deficit. I explained the position to Stetson, but this only infuriated him the more.

"'Whose going to pay if the Madame don't play? Ask him that!" roared Stetson.

"Further explanation, with many gestures and much volubility on the part of the Italian ended with the assurance that Signor Stetson need fear nothing, as Madame's trunks were already in his theater.

"This I translated, whereupon Stetson cried out: 'I don't want them immigrant trunks of hers; they ain't worth nothing. Tell that wop I want money, not trunks, unless that dame fills her dates!'

"I poured further oil on the very troubled water, until Stetson felt that I was talking quite as much as the Italian. So, bursting in, he exclaimed:

"'Cut out that talk and get down to business! What I want to know is, does Doose play or don't she?'

"I couldn't stand any more, so I beat a retreat, leaving the gentlemen still at it. However, I noticed that Mme. Duse did play the matinees and survived both them and Stetson."

In Paris a Mme. Aubernon entertained many celebrities. Miss Marbury tells an engaging little tale about the illustrious author of "The Life of Jesus":

"I remember one very brilliant dinner in this interesting house at which many illustrious people were present. Ernest Renan, one of the guests, tried several times to interrupt (a speaker), but was prevented from doing so by Mme. Aubernon, who raised her hand in a gesture of reproachful protest. Finally, when Cabanel, who was speaking, stopped, the hostess graciously turned to Renan, saying:

"'Now, Monsieur, we shall be glad to hear you.'

"'Ah, Madam,' answered Renan, 'it is, alas! too late. I merely wanted a second helping of spinach.'"

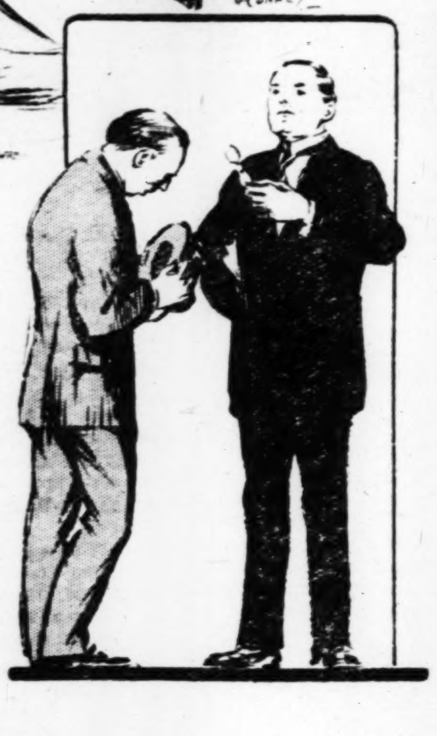
Bernard Shaw pops up in the crystal ball. Miss Marbury was his American agent. After Richard Mansfield appeared in two of Shaw's plays with success, she began to send drafts to Shaw.

"It was not very long before I received an amusing letter from him, which began: 'Rapacious Elisabeth Marbury: As you persist in asking these large terms from American managers, and as you persist in sending me fat cheques, I am compelled to do a thing utterly abhorrent to me, namely, open a bank account.'"

Those who had any knowledge of the late Richard Mansfield from the inside, so to insinuate, will like this Marbury memory:

"Royalties had been long overdue, and I went by appointment to see whether I could coax him to make some settlement. Hardly had I been seated when there came a knock at his door. This second visitor was the agent of the apartment house, who had come to collect the long-delayed rent. Mansfield, looking at him as though he were a worm, said:

"'You consider that I owe you rent. A preposterous idea! Cannot you, and those you come from realize that it is I, Richard Mansfield, whose mere presence in this house has filled it to overflowing and thus raised the price of these apartments? I have brought the owners fortune and fame, and I should be paid by them rather than that I should pay to them.'



"You consider that I owe you rent. A preposterous idea! I, Richard Mansfield"——

By ERNEST BRENNECKE.

THE possibility of traveling forward into the future and backward into the past is an idea that has always had a singular fascination for the human mind. Romancers without number have toyed with it. The amazing wonders of visiting the streets of ancient Babylon or of imperial Rome, or of coming into the world, five, or fifty or a million years hence, indeed surpass almost any other conceivable miracle.

We are somewhat accustomed to guesses at the bizarre experience in fables of the mysterious East or in the fantastic tales of fictioneers such as Jules Verne or H. G. Wells, but seldom has a scientist of established reputation dared to risk his prestige by voicing the opinion that the feat is humanly possible.

Consequently no one was quite prepared for the shock which Capt. A. G. Pape recently administered to the assembled members of the British Association in an address delivered at a meeting of that most august of all serious scientific societies. In the midst of a lecture on the question, “Is there a New Race Type?” Capt. Pape, who is the honorary secretary to the Edinburgh and Lothians Branch of the Royal Anthropological Institute, suddenly put forward his amazing thesis, which he declares has been developed and proved in experiment by a new school of scientists and philosophers in Edinburgh.

These investigators, he maintains, have developed “airplane” or “time-machine” minds, capable at will of flying into any past age, of actually witnessing any event in the history of the earth, from the time when it was a blazing mass of incandescent gas and fluid metal down to the present day. Every one of us, he declared, has within him undeveloped faculties which, if properly cultivated, will enable him to accomplish the same feat—to leave his present body behind to travel through Egypt at the time of the Great Rameses, and actually to witness the slaughters of Marathon, Gettysburg, Waterloo or the Marne.

Capt. Pape's pronouncements naturally created the nearest approach to a “scene” that the British Association dignity permits. A storm of questions, criticism and denunciation has been playing about the daring young scientist's head ever since. But he sticks to his theory and claims that time and the future discoveries and experiences of man will justify his assertions. He predicts the development of a new race type, a coming race of supermen, all of whom will have the fully developed “time-machine” faculty.

“These inherent faculties,” said Capt. Pape in response to the questions with which he has been pressed, “may be obtained by anyone, but only by means of an utter renunciation of self and by a life devoted to the service of man. It is necessary in the first place for one who wishes to transport himself into past ages to develop an entirely unselfish attitude toward people and things. He must learn to forget himself and all his petty desires.

“Having achieved the proper state of mind, a task by no means easy and which implies a vast amount of concentration and renunciation, one who wishes to try this great experiment will have to sit alone in a quiet room and will himself back to any definite place and period. His physical body meanwhile remains at rest, but his mentality is transported by impulse to some other place and some other time.

“To understand how this accomplishment is possible,” Capt. Pape goes on to explain, “it is necessary to realize that there is around us a vast world, unseen by most of us, but not necessarily invisible. That is, it can be perceived and lived in by men who have developed certain little-known faculties of their minds by the mental process which I have briefly mentioned. It is possible for them to explore and study the unseen world of the past, precisely as ordinary men have explored and studied the world that is within the present reach of all of us.

Eastern sources. Travelers from India and ibet have often told marvelous stories of Mahat-and Yogis who, they declared, could project ir minds into the past or the future, could gaze a crystal sphere and see all that had ever hapned or was going to happen. But never before, far as most of us are aware, have serious, hard-
ded men of science, who deal only with the cold, able facts of mathematics and physics, ventured come out with statements of this nature. These ions, coming from the source they do, are so gether astonishing that many critics are still dering why they have received the extraordinary tinction of being presented before so important scientific body as the British Association.

The world of thought was perhaps partially preed for Capt. Pape by the great prominence which theories of Albert Einstein have recently ieved. The lenient attitude of the British Asso-ation may be explained by the virtual proof of stein's theory afforded by the results of the last expeditions which photographed the solar eclipse. For these observations seemed to prove that Einstein is right in his opinion that time is in reality the "fourth dimension" and that there is really no reason why a man should not be able to travel backward and forward through time just as he travels backward and forward through space; to travel into the past and the future just as easily as he travels east or west.

And so, if one believes in Einstein, as many conservative men of science are finding themselves forced to, it is not so very difficult to believe that Capt. Pape also may perhaps be right when he says he and his associates in Edinburgh "can fly backward through time and observe and take note of what was happening in the world in days which go back to the dim ages of history."

Speaking of the men with "time-machine" minds, whose names he has not yet chosen to disclose because of the inimical attitude of other and older scientists toward them, Capt. Pape has declared:

"We, as a school of thought and science, most certainly detect a new race, clean-cut, which is now forming. This new race will be the great race of the future and will consist of people who will be a living proof of our ideas about the inherent mental powers of all men. We call it the 'Austral-American.' It is already known and recognizable; it is a fact and not merely a belief. We anthropologists can easily discern the features of this new race type, features which will become more and more accentuated in the coming centuries.

"I described it in my lecture as having a dome-shaped cranial development, hair fine in texture, skin fine-grained and thin, mobile lips and a firm chin. Its eyes will be especially luminous and intelligent looking, with rather prominent eyebrows. The type of the face will be somewhat triangular, but not sharp in outline, and the general physiology of the body will be harmonious and well proportioned. It will evidence a declining appetite for meat and strong foods. It will gradually develop finer qualities of mind and spirit, finer feelings and more sensitive emotions than the world has yet known, such as rapid and sympathetic responses, pity for suffering, power to comprehend principles easily, quick intuitions, thoroughness, sensitiveness, co-operation, brotherliness and unselfishness.

"Naturally, these people of the coming race will easily be able to project their minds into the past much more easily than do we who have already found it possible to do so. Our descendants will live not only in the visible world of their present but also in the unseen but no less real world of the past; in fact, in any portion of the past which they may choose to live in. This is not a mere vision, but a fact already partially in evidence, provable by mathematics and the actual experiences of living and reputable men.

"I have thrown a stone into the stagnant pool of thought, and if I have succeeded in focusing attention on the tremendous need and value of developing the inherent mental qualities we all possess, my essay, daring, as it was described by some, fantastic, as it may be dubbed by others, will have served its purpose and should result in adding to the sum of man's possibilities to himself."

The scientific world is at present all agog over these extraordinary statements. The older, orthodox camp is up in arms against the bizarre theories of this younger school of thought. Time alone will tell whether the wonderful powers which Capt. Pape attributes to all of us are real and practicable or merely imaginary. But meanwhile his ideas are interesting enough to merit considerable attention. If Pape is wrong the whole controversy will have made an unusually entertaining chapter in the history of science. If he is right—it will mean nothing less than a complete revolution, not only in the world of science but in the whole world of thought and life.

The SEVEN VANISHED MEN

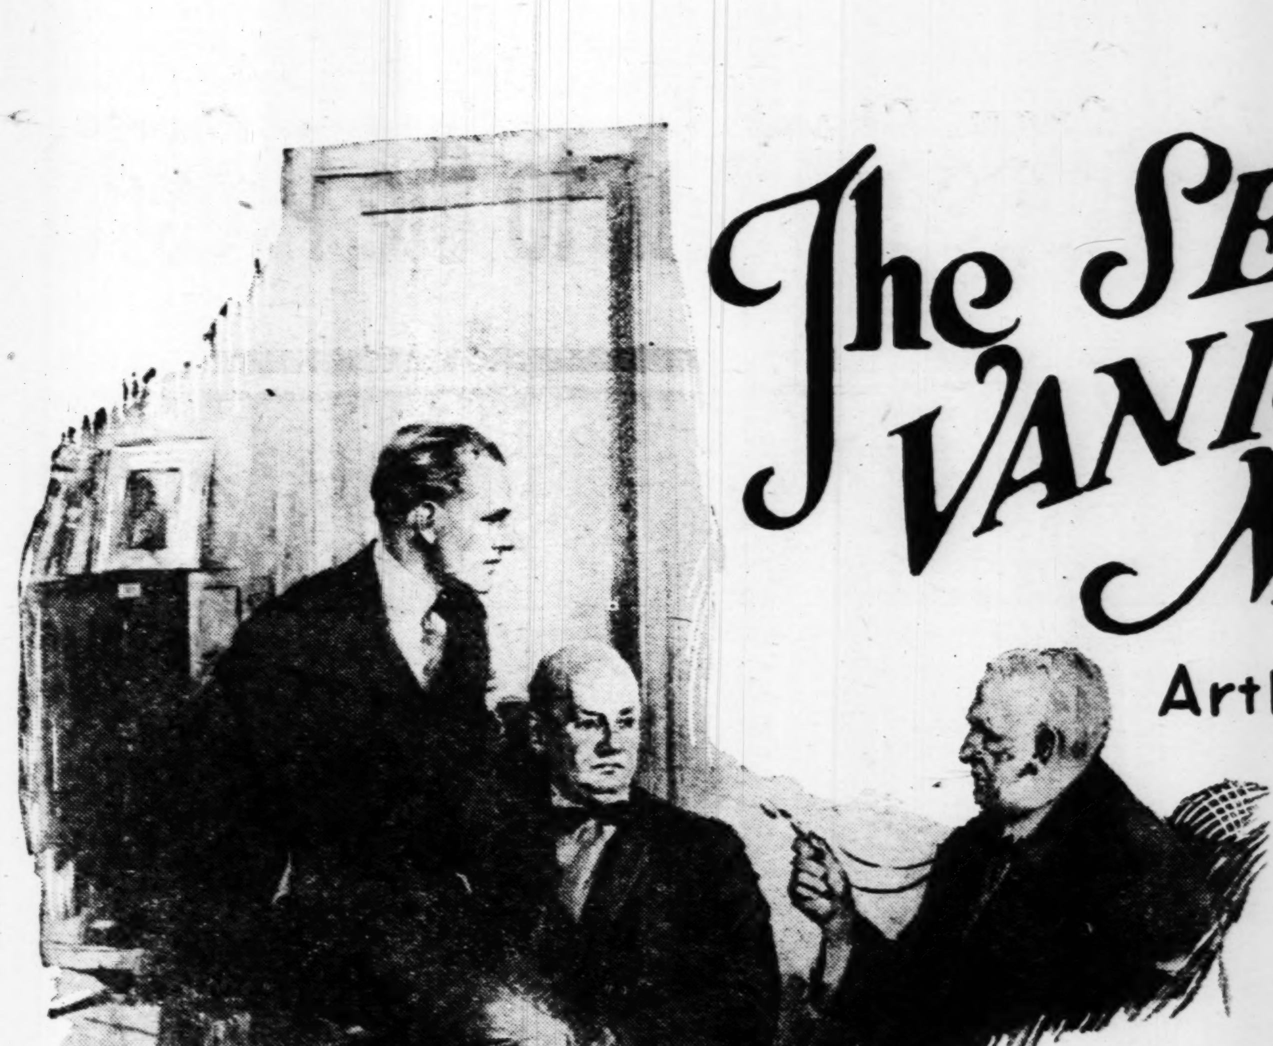
Arthur Somers Roche



"Young man, if you'll find out what ails my partner, Tom Horton, you may write your own check."

AT THE clubhouse of the Wolves, that gay association of actors, managers and others connected with the theater, Pelham signed his luncheon check and started from the dining room.

Maline, the famous producer, waved a hand to the immaculate Pelham. "Any time that the Gray Ghost dies, or you give up your battle with him," laughed the manager, "you can have a job with me, Mr. Pelham."

Pelham flushed. His warfare with the Gray Ghost was a matter of common knowledge. Nevertheless, he was sensitive on the subject. The criminal had had the better of their encounter thus far. But he shrugged and laughed.

"You look as gloomy as though you had a private Gray Ghost walking your own ancestral chambers, Maline," he said.

"Some people have got it pretty soft," declared the manager. "I'd trade jobs in a minute. If the Gray Ghost robs a bank, it doesn't cost you a penny if you can't find him. But if I can't find an actor, where the deuce am I?"

Pelham looked down at the fat, red face of Maline; usually that face was wrinkled with mirth; the small, brown eyes twinkled. But today the face was lugubrious. Pelham glanced about the crowded dining room.

"I see a lot of pretty good actors here," he declared.

"Not the ones I want," frowned Maline.

"Sorry, but I can't waste sympathy on you," said Pelham. "With five plays packing New York theaters, and a dozen successes on the road, you strike me as being one of the filthy rich. Why do you want actors, anyway? Aren't the ones you have satisfactory? I've seen all your current productions, and they seem well cast to me?"

Maline stared at him almost angrily.

"Which interests you most? What the Gray Ghost did last year, or what he is going to do tomorrow? Well, it is the same way with me. The plays that I've produced don't interest me. It's the play that I'm going to produce that counts. And here I've got the greatest manuscript I ever read, and no one to play it. 'The Three Wise Men' is the name of it—a mystical melodrama. And I can't find three character actors to fill the bill."

Deweese, who was also a producer of note, had stopped at the table and listened to Maline's plaint.

"I'm in the same boat," he said. "I have a play in the office which has two elderly men parts. Big parts. And I can't find anyone to play them."

"What do you mean?" asked Pelham. "Are character actors as scarce as that?"

"Good actors, like good detectives, or Generals, or Kings, or cooks, are always scarce," declared Deweese. "There are, outside of a few recognized stars, just seven men on the American stage capable of playing, with distinction, the parts of men between 55 and 70. I mean men with some reputation, who'd draw a few dollars into the box office."

"Well, why not engage them?" asked Pelham.

Deweese shrugged. Maline spoke. "I don't know about Deweese," he said, "but I've written and telegraphed to every one of those seven men. I've sent messages to their addresses, only to learn that they're all out of town. Minister, Septen, Blanford, Kelley, Swinburn, Sheddon and Garceau—every last one of them disappeared."

"Same here," said Deweese. "Why, only last month Septen was in my office, offering to work for almost nothing. And now, when I have a fat part for him, at the biggest salary he ever received in all his life, he's gone out of town and left no address." He grinned at Pelham. "How much would the Tryon Agency charge for locating Septen and the others?"

Pelham smiled. "I'd do it for nothing, Deweese, if it would make you offer a decent cast to a long-suffering public."

Deweese's face resumed its sad expression. "Sh-sh! I think I see the Gray Ghost," he whispered.

Pelham managed to join in the laugh against himself, and was still smiling as he stepped out into Broadway. But once there the smile left his lips.

Walking toward his apartment, his mind busied itself with the never-ending problem of the arrest and conviction of the Gray Ghost.

The battle between them had become more than a struggle between the forces of law and order and the forces of vice.

The fight was personal; their antagonism was personal.

Pelham went to the office of the Tryon Agency, in which he was a silent partner. But he found Jerry Tryon awaiting him now at his apartment. With Jerry was a choleric old gentleman, Robert Bleakie of the international banking house of Bleakie & Horton, and it was concerning his partner that he had called upon Tryon, who, in turn, had brought him here.

"And if you were a Dalai lama you couldn't be harder to reach," said Bleakie, after the introductions had been performed. "I had an idea that any detective would be glad to be retained by Bleakie & Horton. But Tryon here tells me that he doesn't know whether you'll take the case or not." He stared belligerently at Pelham. "What the blazes are you, anyway? A prima donna?"

Pelham chuckled; he liked this vigorous, irascible old man. "Jerry humors me so that I do act a little bit upstage," he admitted.

"Well, don't act that way with me," cried Bleakie. Suddenly he beamed upon Pelham, thereby extracting from his words all possible offense. "Young man, if you'll find out what ails my partner, Tom Horton, you may write your own check."

"Those are sweetly sympathetic words," said Pelham. "I have always a chair by the fire, and a seat at my table, for gentlemen whose conversation is so interesting."

Tryon realized that his partner and their new client had acquired a liking for each other. Jerry loved Pelham, and the surest way to Jerry's heart was to indicate that one liked Pelham. Bleakie saw the beaming face of Jerry and frowned. "Quit grinning like a cat that's stolen cream," he cried. "Let's see this wonderful partner of yours produce the goods."

"Suppose you describe the goods, Mr. Bleakie," suggested Pelham.

"Fair enough," declared Bleakie. "My partner, Tom Horton, is acting like a madman, and I want to know why."

"What's he doing?" asked Pelham.

"Making a fool of himself," snapped Bleakie.

"There are so many ways in which that may be done," smiled Pelham.

"Meaning that you want me to get to the point, eh?" demanded Bleakie.

"I would like to know what's wrong with Mr. Horton," said Pelham, gently.

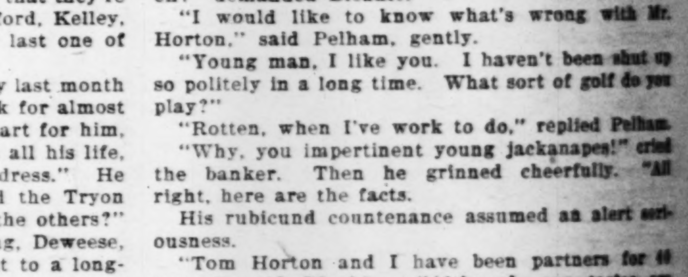
"Young man, I like you. I haven't been shut up so politely in a long time. What sort of golf do you play?"

"Rotten, when I've work to do," replied Pelham.

"Why, you impertinent young jackanapes!" cried the banker. Then he grinned cheerfully. "All right, here are the facts.

His rubicund countenance assumed an alert seriousness.

"Tom Horton and I have been partners for 40 years," said Bleakie. "Although our tastes are different, I believe I know him about as well as he knows himself. I've always gone in for sport and more or less of a good time. Tom is different. He rarely even plays cards. His idea of a good time is to collect rare antiquities, precious stones, first editions of ancient books—all that sort of thing. I've known him to spend four hours standing in front of a picture, staring at it, never moving, as though hypnotized. The man is beauty-insane. Always has been. The things he owns would fill a museum. And no expert ever got a dollar from Tom. He's told me that probably lots of his possessions are fakes, but that it doesn't matter; they're beautiful. And suddenly this man, without a moment's warning, starts destroying a collection that it has taken 40 years to gather."



The last [illegible] on the last [illegible] gave Pelham his first clue.

"Destroying?" cried Pelham.

"Dispersing, I should say; but it's just as bad. He's selling all his possessions. And he's selling them at any old price. You must understand that because you've paid $200,000 for a painting doesn't mean that you can get that price for it at a moment's notice. It takes time to find a purchaser who will meet your price. And Tom is letting this go almost to the first bidder. If he continues, $20,000,000 worth of precious things will go for two or three million."

"He's mad," declared Pelham.

"Exactly," said Bleakie, positively.

"Can't you have him restrained?" asked Pelham.

"The firm of Bleakie & Horton does more hundreds of millions of dollars' business a year than I'd be prepared to tell you offhand, young man," replied Bleakie. "If it leaked out that I was trying to prevent my partner from disposing of his collection, it might cause a panic that would shake the financial world. I can't do that."

"Won't he listen to reason?" demanded Pelham.

"Listen to it?" cried Bleakie. "He won't even see me. He simply telephoned me one day last week that he wouldn't be down to the office for a month or so. Said he was going to sell his collection, and rang off. I went to his house, and he refused to see me. I talked with his secretary, and that gentleman informed me that he had pleaded and argued with Tom without result. The next day Tom telephoned me again, thanked me for what he termed my misguided objections to his action, but told me that minding one's own business was a marvelous policy.

"It's a matter that must be confidential. As yet it has not leaked out to the press. Tom's secretary told me that all sales were being made quietly.

"Now, if I consult lawyers, they will suggest obvious things: injunctions, medical examinations, trustees, the declaring of Tom incompetent—I'd rather be dead than subject my partner and dearest friend to such indignities. But at the same time I do not like to see him lose $15,000,000. I come to you to have you tell me if there is any way short of legal proceedings whereby I can prevent Tom from this insanity."

Pelham shrugged. "I'm afraid that such a matter is completely out of our line, Mr. Bleakie," he told the banker. "A man has a right to dispose of his property as he sees fit. Only you, or Mr. Horton's family, could apply to the courts in such a case as this."

"I don't want to apply to the courts, and Tom hasn't any family," said Bleakie.

"Then I'm afraid that there's nothing to be done," asserted Pelham. He frowned. "Still, because it's an interesting affair—let me think it over, Mr. Bleakie."

But next afternoon he telephoned the banker. "I've seen your partner," he said. "I happen to know several dealers, and I got one of them to take me to Mr. Horton's house this morning. I happen to know something about jade and I was able to interest Mr. Horton. I asked him why he was disposing s recklessly of properties that had bee expensively and painstakingly acquired. He looked at me quizzically, and replied: 'Young man, a time comes to everyone when he makes the discover that a human being is free or is a slave. I've worried 40 years about my po sessions. "You're a young jackass," cried Bleakie.

"Thank you," said Pelham.

"Septen was found in Central Park, a bullet hole in his forehead, powder marks around the wound, and a revolver lying beside him."

"Keep the change," cried the banker. "How about some golf?"

Pelham laughed. "Any time at all."

"I'll ring you up," said Bleakie. "But I won't bring any blank check with me."

And that, Pelham thought, was the end of the Horton affair.

It was a week later that Maline, the play producer, called upon him. There was a worried look upon the manager's red face.

"Mr. Pelham, you remember Deweese asking you how much the Tryon Agency would charge for locating Septen and the other character actors?"

"I remember some joking remark of his," replied Pelham.

"It's no joke now," stated Maline, gloomily. "Have you read the papers lately?"

Pelham looked surprised. "I skim through all of them."

"Didn't happen to read of Septen's suicide four days ago, did you?" asked Maline.

Pelham looked shocked. "I didn't see it," he admitted.

"And you didn't read of Swinburn's accidental death the day before yesterday?" inquired the producer.

Pelham shook his head.

"Septen was found in Central Park, a bullet hole in his forehead, powder marks around the wound, and a revolver lying beside him. Swinburn slipped on the Sixth Avenue L platform at Forty-second street, and was instantly killed by a train," said Maline. "There was nothing much in the papers about either of them. Just paragraphs on an inside page. But they were both Wolves, and a few of us, over at the club, got the idea that there is something queer about the two deaths. You know neither of them has been in evidence at all recently. They seemed to have disappeared, along with five other character actors—Minister, Blanford, Kelley, Sheddon and Garceau. They were all more or less friendly, all about the same age, and all actors. And it looks funny to us. Last night one of the committees of the Wolves had its monthly meeting. It's a committee that has broad powers. Talking over those two deaths, and the disappearance of the other five men, we decided—well, we didn't decide anything except to ask you to look into the matter. It's hard for us to believe that even the direst poverty would drive Septen to suicide. And it happens to be well known to all of us that Swinburn never rode on the elevated. He was in an accident on the elevated 10 years ago, and had, ever since, an obsessing horror of those trains. Of course, this isn't evidence; neither is our belief that Septen was normal, real evidence. Nevertheless, here's a check for $2500 as a retainer. Will you take the case?"

Pelham looked at the check and tore it up.

"I am a Wolf," he said. "And the case interests me. I don't want money. Now, tell me everything you know."

But, beyond giving Pelham the addresses of the two dead men and the five other missing actors, Maline could add nothing to what he had already told. Septen, according to the police, was unquestionably a suicide. Swinburn had been accidentally killed.

Pelham began his investigation by visiting the last known residence of Septen. He learned that on a day about a month ago Septen, a widower without children, had received a letter by messenger. He had left his modest rooms and never returned. He had taken with him no baggage. The same facts fitted the cases of all the other men. Uniformed messengers had brought them letters. They had gone out hurriedly, and had never returned. In three cases their rooms had been rented to other people, and their baggage stored in the cellar. The others happened to have paid in advance, and their rooms, or apartments, were ready for them. And it was not extraordinary that their landlords had not reported their disappearance to the police. Any one of them might have obtained a sudden engagement with a road company, or with a motion-picture concern, that necessitated instant travel.

One thing attracted Pelham's attention. Of the seven missing men, four had been observed to carry in their hands, as they left their rooms, the letters which had just arrived. The letters had probably contained instructions that they should be brought to the sender—as a matter of identification perhaps. Or else the address to which these actors went was unfamiliar to them.

Perhaps the writer of these letters had wished no evidence of the destination of the letters' recipients to be left in their homes. Pelham found a thrill of excitement as this theory presented itself to him.

At the last address which he visited, the room of Minister, he found among the missing man's effects, to which he was given ready access on showing his card, a diary kept by the actor. The last item on the last page gave Pelham his first clew.

"Just received letter from Ferry Theatrical Agency —— Broadway, asking me to call," the diary read.

Pelham arrived at the Broadway address, to learn that the Ferry Agency had been a brief tenant. It had rented two rooms about six weeks ago, and a month ago had forfeited its advance rent, and closed its offices. The agency had apparently consisted of one man, Mr. Ferry himself. The elevator boys and the janitor gave Pelham varying descriptions of the agent, by none of which would he be prepared to identify anyone.

But of one thing Pelham was certain. The seven character actors had been deliberately lured from their homes, and had been inveigled into some adventure that had cost the lives of two of them. Even as he sat helplessly at his apartment, one or more of the five men might be in the process of being killed.

Why? The imagination failed to supply any motive whatsoever.

All of these seven vanished men were poor. These men, though successful as artists, had had no financial success. Robbery could not be the motive.

Behind the most unreasoning occurrence lies a reason. If one actor had disappeared, the problem might be insurmountable, but where seven had vanished, the problem should become easier. Parallel trails, amazing coincidences, should offer themselves to his observation. Only, they didn't.

Robbery he discarded. Why, then, should anyone interest himself in the disappearance of seven old actors? If not for what they had, could it be for what they were? He seemed to feel something at his mental finger tips, something elusive yet tangible. But it slipped from his clutches. Never had the Gray Ghost propounded a puzzle so unsolvable as this. Indeed, it seemed like a feat of the Gray Ghost. It took organization to kidnap seven men, to kill two of them, and leave no traces of murder. Only the Gray Ghost would not waste his time with poverty-stricken actors.

Pelham laughed at himself: wherever he turned he saw the mocking countenance of the Gray Ghost. And it was while he sneered at himself that Slim Dickerson, his friend and man of all work, ushered into his living room one of the elevator boys whom Pelham had interviewed earlier in the day.

The boy, an undersized gamin of the KLEIG eyes! All persons employed in motion picture studios whose work brings them in contact with the powerful arc lights necessary for indoor photography are subject to Kleig eyes.

Not only actors, but directors, camera men, electricians, carpenters and others who work outside the camera line are liable to be afflicted by this dreaded studio malady.

Millions of dollars have been lost as a result of it, and despite the fact that the foremost ocular specialists have tried to prevent its recurrence, it remains the real peril of the movies.

"Kleig eyes" is the term applied to the majority of eye troubles caused by the intense glare of the arc lights, although not all such cases are genuine Kleigs, as the malady is called in the vernacular of the studios. The name Kleig refers to a make of arc light found in the majority of studios, but, of course, the malady is caused by all makes of arc lights as well as spotlights.

The malady is caused in a variety of ways. The microscopic dust from the carbons of the open arc lights settles on the eyeballs, with the result that when the victim blinks or closes the eyelids the lids rasp over the sensitive eyeball like a sheet of sandpaper. The pain is almost unbearable.

In addition, the intense lights glaring into the unprotected eyes dries the natural secretion from the optical glands which normally is distributed over the eyeballs by the eyelids. With this natular flow stopped at the source there is no lubrication between the eyeballs and the eyelids, and as the light also affects the muscles of the eyeballs in causing them to expand, relief can only be obtained by complete rest in the dark. This severe muscular strain often causes the most intense pain, and while applications and compresses sometimes ease the pain, complete rest is the only lasting cure.

In addition, powerful spotlights "burn up" the eyes of players.

Like seasickness, Kleig eye is no respecter of persons. It may attack a star, or a director who has worked in studios for many years, or it may deplete the ranks of "extras" who are appearing before the camera for the first time.

Only the other day Miss Gloria Swanson, one of the most experienced stars in the business, was laid low by a sudden attack of Kleig eyes. She was stricken while at work in a Long Island studio, and so acute was the pain that two specialists had to be summoned. The microscope dust from the arc lamps, coupled with the muscular expansion caused by the blinding glare of the lights, not only forced her to give up her work, but to remain in a dark room for 72 hours. And her condition was aggravated by the powerful spotlights that were thrown on her for the "close-ups."

Compresses of cabbage leaves and bacon together with ice packs reduced the inflammation, but only the many hours of complete rest restored Miss Swanson's eyes to normalcy.

There is hardly an important star in the picture world who has not suffered at one time or another from Kleig eyes, and while there is no record of anyone losing sight, the financial loss resulting from such indispositions—to say nothing of the physical suffering entailed—has cost producers millions of dollars. A very conservative estimate places the loss for a single year at $1,000,000.

The malady attacked Miss Swanson as she was completing the final scenes in her new picture, "The Humming Bird," and as a result everything connected with the production was at a standstill for three days. Figuring her salary and the salaries of the members of her company together with their director, camera men and studio employes, this attack of Kleigs cost the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation at least $25,000—all of which, of course, is added to the cost of production, and which the public has to pay in the long run. In cases where a star is attacked in the midst of a production in which several thousand extras are employed, the loss is many times that amount.

Miss Anna Q. Nilsson was the victim of such an attack some months ago while acting in "The Spoilers" in the Goldwyn studios in California. The director was filming one of the biggest scenes at the time—scenes in which several hundred extras were on the set. It was four days before she was able to resume work, and the extras had to be paid every day until these particular scenes were finished. Thomas Meighan was similarly affected by the intense rays of a spotlight.

As is to be expected, the malady is more apt to attack a player when he or she is working overtime to complete a picture. Often to complete a picture on a given date a director will work his players all day and all night, and it is on such occasions that Kleigs get in their torturing work. Spotlights are used to "kill" the lines in the faces of performers and they often cause worse cases of Kleigs than the carbon lamps.

Only last summer Miss Pola Negri was the victim of a bad attack of Kleigs while finishing "The Spanish Dancer" in the Hollywood studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Company. She worked in more than 39 scenes in a single day—12 is the average number—with the result that before the last scene was completed she was obliged to bury her head in her arms and rush blindly from the set.

It was three days before she was able to return to the studio, but in this instance the delay was not particularly costly, as the picture had been practically finished and the company disbanded. A few retakes were made later without added expense.

Both Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks have suffered from Kleigs on numerous occasions, but as soon as they feel the slightest distress they suspend work and give their eyes a rest. As they are the heads of their respective companies they do not work under the same pressure as the ordinary star.

However, stars are not the only ones who are afflicted by this simple and yet baffling malady. Allan Dwan, who directed "Robin Hood" and "Children of the Moon," has been forced to give up his work on more than one occasion as a result of it. Only by wearing dark glasses is he able to remain immune.

And in one of the recent pictures directed by Rupert Hughes there was a virtual epidemic of Kleigs—no less than five of the principals being severely afflicted. Miss Mae Busch, one of the leading players, was confined to her home for nearly two weeks—so severe was the effect of the light rays.

It must be remembered that this malady is more than an artificial sunburn of the eyes. A mere smarting of the eyes caused by the glare of bright lights or even arc lights is not a real case of Kleigs.

Some day there may be a successful preventive—in fact, the Goldwyn company has offered a prize of $5000 for the first device, appliance or formula that will prevent Kleig eyes and at the same time not interfere with motion picture production methods in common use. But up to the present time the $5000 still remains in the Goldwyn treasury.

Humor and Tragedy of Famous Folk

"The agent, needless to say, retired with profuse apologies. I found him so magnificent on this occasion that I never pressed my own claim. In fact, it often seemed disgraceful to ask Mansfield to pay one for anything. I preferred to have our differences settled in court. I could not bear to introduce into our personal relations such a sordid theme as finance."

Miss Marbury spent much time at Versailles, which had been her home years ago, during the sittings of the peace conference attended by President Wilson. In her book she writes this striking comment:

"The details of this peace conference have been written over and over again. The truth has been spoken—ostensibly. Yet I venture to say that the honest, unbiased and unprejudiced report of the proceedings, which dragged on day after day with a sinister purpose and with a fatal ending, has yet to be written.

"This will be a posthumous contribution to the history of the world, a book of memoirs dedicated to the dead. No one yet dares tell the truth. No one yet is ready to hear it.

"As my crystal ball revolves I see Generals who either fall asleep because they have been suddenly relieved of active duty or who dance the one-step in the drawing rooms of Paris in order that they may keep awake.

"I see statesmen who are refreshing their memories with every incident of the past, so that they may register opinions based upon the precedents which they were educated to respect.

"I see Lloyd George dominating a society which his established policies would wreck.

"I see Clemenceau, the man of the jungle, who was ill at ease in a palace.

"I see Orlando with the inherited qualities of his sun-bathed race, externally docile while internally adamant——

"And, finally, Woodrow Wilson, sincere in his purpose, honest in his aim, courageous in his struggle and confident in the result, standing pathetically alone, mistrusted by his associates abroad and rejected by his colleagues at home.

"I see him deserted by his own political party while being hounded by the opposition.

"I see the senatorial hyenas spitting forth venom while thirsting for blood.

"From the brilliant pinnacle he (Wilson) had occupied he was cast into the darkness of deathly silence, but his persecutors who now suck the sweet poison of their dastardly victory should realize that where there is the divine spark of genius the powers of hell can never extinguish it.

"Months may pass while the light feebly flickers in the shadow; but, as Woodrow Wilson once said himself:

Woman's Charm vs. Evidence

murdering her husband. The jury said she was innocent and that settles it.

She and her husband quarreled. There was a struggle over the possession of a revolver, and Kavanagh was killed. Mrs. Kavanagh is a young and very good looking woman.

But once more it emphasized the fact a prosecutor in Chicago hasn't a chance of obtaining a real conviction against a young or a beautiful woman. Lachrymal glands, and not law, control the juries.

These were convicted:

Mrs. Hilda Exlund, charged with the murder of her husband, and given 14 years.

Mrs. Louise Lindloff, charged with the murder of certain of her children, and various men; given 14 years. Died in penitentiary.

Mrs. Rose Abrahamson, charged with the murder of her husband; given one year to life; pleaded guilty.

Mrs. Dora Waterman, charged with the murder of her husband; given 17 years.

Mrs. Vera Trepagnier, charged with the murder of Paul Volland; given 14 years. Died in the penitentiary.

Mrs. Tillie Klimek, called the "Woman Bluebeard," charged with the murder by poison of her husband; suspected of other murders; given life.

Mrs. Sabelle Nitti-Crudelle, charged with Crudelle of murdering her first husband; sentenced to hang; now in Cook County Jail.

Here is the list of 17 years of those indicted and brought to trial:

Mrs. Dora McDonald, charged with the murder of Webster Guerin and acquitted after a stormy, dramatic and lachrymose trial.

Miss Estelle Stout, charged with the murder of her sweetheart, Henry Hornberger; acquitted.

Miss Lucille McLeoy, charged with the murder of "Bill' Niemann. She claimed that he committed suicide, and she was acquitted.

Mrs. James Quinn, charged with the murder of her husband, John M. Quinn; acquitted.

Mrs. Rene B. Morrow, charged with the murder of her husband, Charles B. Morrow. She claimed accident and was acquitted.

Mrs. Sadie Blaha, charged with the murder of Morris Sturm; acquitted.

Mrs. Harriet Burnham, charged with the murder of her husband, Herbert E. Burnham; acquitted.

Mrs. Florence Bernstein, charged with the murder of her husband; acquitted.

Mrs. Leona Musso, charged with the murder of her husband, Peter Musso; acquitted.

Mrs. Alice Davis Sing, charged with the murder of her Chinese husband, Charles Sing; acquitted.

Mrs. Stella Czemerowska, charged with the murder of her fiance, Frank Kosczynski; acquitted.

Mrs. Augusta Deitz, charged with the murder of her husband; case dismissed for lack of evidence.

Mrs. Mary Kozicki, charged with the murder of her husband; acquitted.

Mrs. Louis Van Keuren, charged with the murder of her husband; acquitted.

Mrs. Blanche Murphy, charged with the murder of her husband; acquitted.

Mrs. Nellie Higgs, charged with the murder of her friend, W. W. Willis; acquitted.

Mrs. Belle Beasley, charged with the murder of her husband; acquitted.

Mrs. Maud Oberg, charged with the murder of her friend, Edward Bresch; acquitted.

Mrs. Elizabeth Buchanan, charged with the murder of Josie Rice (colored); acquitted. Self-defense plea upheld.

Mrs. Iva Barnes, charged with the murder of her husband; acquitted.

Mrs. Doris Eisenbrand, charged with the murder of her husband, Dr. George Eisenbrand; acquitted.

Miss Ruby Dean, charged with the murder of Dr. Leon Quitman; acquitted

Miss Pauline Plotka, charged with the murder of Dr. Anton Jindra; acquitted.

Miss Helen McCarthy, charged with the murder of Frank Berger; acquitted.

Miss Margaret Seithamier, charged with the murder of Benjamin Burr; acquitted.

Mrs. Cora Orthwein, charged with the murder of Herbert P. Ziegler; acquitted.

Mrs. Anna McGinnis and her sister, Miss Myra Pioch, charged with the murder of the former's husband; acquitted.

Miss Helen Kellogg, charged with the murder of James Stokes; acquitted.

Mrs. Lucy Alice Clark, charged with the murder of Vito-Shiro; acquitted.

Mrs. Marie Carbonara, charged with the murder of her husband; acquitted.

Mrs. Helen Blake, charged with the murder of her husband; acquitted.

Mrs. Victoria Turek, charged with the murder of her husband. Though the police claim a full confession from her, she was acquitted for lack of evidence when the State's chief witness refused to testify.

Mrs. Lucille Kavanagh, charged with the murder of her husband; acquitted.

Mrs. Louise Vermilya, charged with the murder of Arthur Bissonette and R. G. Smith; jury disagreed; died from self-administered poison before second trial was due.

streets, with a hard mouth and bold eyes, was in a fever of excitement.

"That guy Ferry—the agent! I seen him half an hour ago, Mr. Pelham. In a taxi, shootin' across Forty-second street. I got another taxi. I followed him until he stopped in front of a house on East Seventy-first street. I got out of my car half a block down the street. I told my taxi man to keep an eye on the other machine, that was still standing in front of a house. I ducked into a drug store on the corner, and telephoned me brother. I tells him not to care about expense. In five minutes he drives up in another taxi. I describes Ferry to him, gives him all me loose change, and tells him, if Ferry comes out, to follow him to Chicago if he has to. Then I beats it down here to you."

Pelham eyed the youngster: "How much are you paid as elevator boy?"

"Eighteen berries a week," replied the boy.

"And what's your name?" asked Pelham.

"Daniel Boyd," answered the boy.

"Twice 18 is 36. You're working for me. That's your weekly salary to start," said Pelham.

Young Boyd grinned impudently at him. "I'll be getting 72 this time next month if you know a good man when you see him," he said.

Pelham smiled; then his eyes grew eager. "What's the address of the house that Ferry entered?" he asked.

The boy told him. Bewilderment appeared in Pelham's eyes. Then, bidding young Boyd follow, he raced downstairs, out of the building, and into the taxi waiting for Boyd. He ordered the man to drive to the corner of Seventy-first street and Madison avenue. There he alighted, but there was no trace of Boyd's brother, or of the taxicab which had brought Ferry to this neighborhood. So Pelham, bidding his new employe to wait there until his brother returned, and commanding him then to come at once to his apartment, returned there himself. One hour later Boyd and a small edition of himself came to Pelham. The younger boy, whose name was George, burst into his story:

"The guy Dan told me to lay for came out about three minutes after Dan left. I followed him to —— Madison avenue. From there I followed him to —— East Thirty-fifth street. Then he went to two houses on Fifth avenue, one on Gramercy Park and another on Washington Square. He stayed a few minutes at this house, and then came out. Last he drove to the corner of Sixteenth street and Third avenue. He got out of his taxi, paid the driver, and walked to a house on Stuyvesant Square. He opened the front door with a latchkey, so I figured that was where he lived and I was safe to leave him. I got another taxi and beat it up here. Me brother Dan is working for you. Am I?"

"You are," said Pelham. "At the same salary. Now give me the number of those houses again."

The boy handed him a dirty piece of paper, on which he had written the numbers. Pelham nodded commendation and went to the telephone. He called up Mr. Robert Bleakie, and a moment later was talking to that gentleman: "Mr. Bleakie, John Wilkie lives on Gramercy Park, and William Smathers lives on Washington Square. Please tell me the names and addresses of four other friends of your partner who are also collectors of precious things."

"Tom Bartholomay lives at —— Fifth avenue. Sam Harding lives two doors from him. Phil Riley lives at —— East Thirty-ninth street, and Ben Thompson at — —Madison avenue. What's the idea?"

Pelham's laugh was excited. "I'm not sure, but—— Your partner told me that Wilkie and Smathers were selling their collections. Can you tell me if the other four are doing the same thing?"

"They are," replied Bleakie. "And their business associates are as worried as I am. They refused to see their friends, just as Tom Horton refused to see me."

"Tell them to quit worrying," said Pelham. And then he hung up.

Two minutes later he was talking over the telephone with Jerry Tryon, and 10 minutes after that he was standing on a corner of Stuyvesant Square, remote from the house that Ferry had entered. He had hardly left his taxi when Jerry, accompanied by half a dozen of his operatives, descended from a big limousine. Two other cars followed, and in all there were 20 men.

A few doors from the house which was their objective, Pelham paused.

"Jerry," he said, "I'm acting on the wildest sort of theory. Either there are seven multimillionaires imprisoned in that house, or there are not. In the latter case, we may pay an unwilling visit to the police court. It is no light offense to batter down the doors of a respectable private house. And if I'm mistaken, the laugh that will go up"——

"We've been laughed at a lot already, Mr. Pelham," replied Jerry grimly. "Let's go."

Beneath their overcoats four of the operatives carried axes and crowbars. The door of the house which Ferry had entered gave way in 30 seconds. Pelham had been tricked before; this time there were men in the yard behind and on the roofs of the adjacent buildings. Of the 24 men that were in the building not one escaped. And seven of them did not wish to escape. Those seven were Tom Horton and the other multimillionaire collectors, who had suddenly decided to simplify life by getting rid of the treasures which they had spent their lifetime in collecting.

"I said you could write your own check, and I meant it," said Mr. Robert Bleakie. He wrote his name in the right-hand corner of a check, and pushed the paper over to Pelham.

"And I said that your words were sweetly sympathetic. I find your actions equally so. I have already collected ten thousand apiece from six victims. Ten thousand more will just about make it right," said Pelham.

Mr. Bleakie lighted a cigar. "And if you care to tell me just how you

Gallstones

Dr. E. E. Paddock, Dept. 41, Kansas City, Mo., says about one person in ten has infected gall-bladder or gallstones and neglect often leads to surgery. But many people are too old, weak or ill for dangerous operation. These people, reasonably wish to avoid suffering and obtain relief with medicines. The doctor began specializing on these troubles 25 years ago and his treatments have been of untold value to thousands all over the U. S. Hundreds of letters testify to health restored and freedom from suffering. Rather than suffer or let conditions grow worse, and before you decide on surgery, write the doctor for his FREE BOOKLET describing gallstones and explaining this home treatment.

doped it all out, you māy make it eleven thousand," he remarked.

"I'll do it for nothing," smiled Pelham.

"There was a coincidence in seven men deciding to sacrifice fabulously valuable collections at the same time," he began, "but the coincidence did not seem important to me until another coincidence was brought to my attention. That was the strange disappearance of seven character actors. And still I did not put the two things together. I did so only when a man whom I believed responsible for the disappearance of the seven actors paid a visit to the house of your partner, Tom Horton. Then I began to have a glimmering of the scheme.

"The glimmering became the dazzling rays of sunshine when I learned that this man—his ostensible name was Ferry—had paid other visits to the homes of six wealthy men, two of whom I already knew to be collectors who were disposing of their properties. You told me that the others were doing the same thing. Of course, what I considered sunshine might have been moonshine, but—it wasn't. Ferry was the commander visiting his troops.

"I found, within the house that Ferry last visited, all of the rich collectors. The actors had been kidnaped because they could impersonate millionaires. The millionaires had been kidnaped in order to make way for the actors who would impersonate them and sell their property."

"But who could have engineered such a thing?" cried Bleakie.

"Ferry brazenly admits that the Gray Ghost is his employer. So do the other men. And, as usual, they don't know where he is, and if they did they wouldn't tell."

"But how could he know that the actors would consent to turn criminals?" asked Bleakie.

"Fear works wonders," answered Pelham dryly. "The Gray Ghost had planted his own men as secretaries and valets in the households of his victims. He spends a year in planning, if need be. The actors knew that if they disobeyed they would be killed. Septen tried to betray his captors. He was killed. So was Swinburn. It was pretended that the men whom they impersonated were sick in bed, and the sales at their houses stopped. But the other five actors, learning of what had happened to Septen and Swinburn—the latter was drugged, then pushed in front of a train—were so frightened that they offered no further resistance."

"What will be done to the actors?" asked Bleakie.

"Nothing," said Pelham. "I have the promise of all concerned as regards them. If the millionaires submitted, to save their lives, to the indignity of being kidnaped, why should they wish to punish men who yielded to similar threats?"

"I think, young man, that you are a remarkable detective."

"The simplest way to get into this vault would be to dynamite it from the cave, but the explosion would likely close the entrance of the cave, in which case one would be no better off than before.

"This vault was evidently made to keep away all treasure hunters. It may and it may not contain anything, but it corresponds to the vault told of in Old Providence tradition and which is alleged to be filled with the stolen doubloons of old Sir Henry Morgan.

"I haven't yet figured out any scheme of getting into that iron vault, but my Irish curiosity will never be satisfied unless I do."

Keegan's only souvenirs are one of the old cannon balls and several pieces of the coral trees which so intrigued his fancy. He may never get anything more out of it, but he had a good time and wouldn't have missed the thrills of that adventure for a good deal.

However, although he came back this time without even a brass farthing from the Morgan treasure reported to be hidden in the vicinity, Keegan is planning another and more elaborate expedition to the cavern. He hopes that a way will be found to break open the rusty old doors and to reach the treasure, if any, behind them. It is his own belief that Morgan's hoarded wealth, or a considerable part of it, reposes there.

The tradition about the pirate hoard is a very old one, and other treasure seekers may have investigated the cavern, long ago. But Keegan points out that the iron vault, with its heavy, fast-closed doors of steel, is more "burglar proof" than almost any modern safe. Hence, if cautious Morgan cached some of his wealth there, it may well remain today just as he left it.

Morgan is known to have differed from most of the more successful pirates in that he did not squander his money. In fact, as pirates went, he was a thrifty soul. But he would rob anybody, even his own men, and did just this after his most famous exploit—the capture and sack of the City of Panama.

For this exploit Morgan had a fleet of 37 vessels and 2000 fighting men, besides the sailors and boys. They subdued the Spanish fortresses on the Atlantic side of the isthmus, made a toilsome, hazardous march to the other side and stormed a fortified city with four regiments of infantry, two squadrons of cavalry, many Indians and volunteer citizen soldiers for defenders. But Morgan triumphed, burned the city and withdrew with 600 prisoners and 175 mule loads of treasure.

Yet, when a division of this immense booty was made, the men each received only 200 pieces of eight. Morgan had cheated them, and the men grew so threatening that the commander sneaked aboard his ship at night and sailed for Jamaica. Probably he had to expend a large sum in England to get himself out of trouble, but otherwise he spent sparingly, and must have left an immense sum behind him.

Will it be found, or some part of it, in the strange iron vault which Keegan saw in that cavern of Old Providence Island?

What Does the Mirror Say?

Can you make this examination of your back and be satisfied—or do annoying pimples and other skin blemishes prevent your wearing the kind of gowns you admire?

This new treatment assures you a lovely, flawless complexion

Mercirex clears away pimples and blackheads by restoring health to the true skin

YOUR skin has two layers, the one you see, and the complicated true skin underneath. This true skin performs important work and is responsible for the appearance of the outer skin. It really makes the complexion.

Nearly all skin troubles take root in the true skin. Poisons, germs and infections center there. Their presence is revealed on the surface by blackheads, pimples, eczema, eruptions and more serious defects. They must be eliminated and the true skin restored to health if the outer skin is to be clear, flawless and beautiful.

The L. D. Caulk Company, one of the oldest scientific institutions in the country, has developed a treatment which penetrates to the true skin and there acts promptly and positively on the deep centers of skin disorders.

The Mercirex Treatment

This treatment consists of Mercirex Medicated Soap and Mercirex Medicated Skin Cream, which used in conjunction will positively rid the skin of pimples, blackheads and more serious disorders. There are two steps in the treatment:

1—Cleanse the affected area with Mercirex Medicated Soap, the most efficacious germicidal soap developed for disinfecting the skin. It cleanses and disinfects the outer skin in a remarkable way, and stimulates the glands, preparing for the penetration of Mercirex Cream.

2—Apply Mercirex Cream thinly. Massage gently but thoroughly until the Cream penetrates, leaving no trace. It goes quickly to the true skin, killing germ life and neutralizing poisons, thus enabling the true skin to function normally.

The effects of this treatment are truly remarkable. With the true skin restored to health, minor or serious surface defects disappear, leaving the complexion clear and the skin beautifully smooth. Both Soap and Cream are delightful to use.

You can gain a flawless, beautiful complexion this new way—as thousands of others are!

Your druggist is offering a full-size Mercirex treatment, consisting of two cakes of Soap and a jar of Cream—regular $1.55 value—at the introductory price of $1.25. If he cannot supply you, mail the coupon with $1.25, and we will send you the introductory package, together with a booklet on the care of the skin and scalp.

Your bath goes only skin deep

REFRESHING and necessary as the bath may be, it secures only external cleanliness. Far more important is internal cleanliness. For on this depends health and youthful energy.

You cannot be healthy if you do not keep clean internally. A clogged intestinal system is a disease-breeder. Here start such ailments as headaches, bilious attacks and insomnia—each of which takes toll of your health and vitality. Poisons flood your system and your power of resistance is lowered. Health, even life itself, is threatened. In this clogging, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

Thousands of healthy men and women have learned to prevent illness by maintaining internal cleanliness through the regular use of Nujol. Nujol is not a laxative. Nujol prevents intestinal clogging by lubrication, the method now employed by medical authorities throughout the world. Nujol lubricates and softens the food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body.

Don't give disease a start. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. Nujol is not a medicine. Like pure water it is harmless. Nujol establishes the habit of internal cleanliness—the healthiest habit in the world.

If you would maintain health and youthful energy adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. Nujol will make every day brighter and your enjoyment of life more keen. Keep a bottle of Nujol in the bath room cabinet as a daily reminder. For sale at all druggists.

Faulty Elimination

Your doctor will tell you that most of the gravest diseases of life are caused by poisoning which results from intestinal clogging. Such minor ills as headaches, bilious attacks, loss of appetite, etc., warn that clogging is present and call for systematic measures to overcome the condition.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome faulty elimination, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation and exhaustive tests, has found in lubrication a means of overcoming faulty elimination. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste. Thus it enables Nature to secure regular, thorough elimination. Nujol is not a laxative and cannot cause distress. Nujol hastens the rate of flow through the intestine, preventing intestinal sluggishness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals, and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world for the relief of faulty elimination in people of all ages.

Complexion Troubles: Science now knows that poisons from intestinal sluggishness are the chief cause of personal unattractiveness. Carried by the blood they reach every body cell, the millions of cells that compose the skin, the roots of the hair and the eyes. No wonder that through faulty elimination the skin becomes sallow, muddy, roughened, blotched or disfigured with pimples or other blemishes. It is not strange that the hair loses its sheen and the eyes become dull.

Nujol should be taken regularly for the complexion. Nujol overcomes and prevents intestinal sluggishness. It thus keeps the body free from poisons which are the principal cause of complexion troubles.

Nujol is the most effective aid to a clear, healthy, lovely skin.

Elderly People: In youth and perfect health the intestine supplies a natural lubricating liquid in sufficient quantity to soften the food waste and hasten its movement out of the body. In advanced years this lubricant decreases in quantity. Hence the need for something to give assistance. The action of Nujol so closely resembles that of Nature's lubricant that it is especially beneficial to those in advanced years. Nujol softens the waste thus enabling the intestinal muscles to move it along and out of the body.

THE DANGER LINE

You cannot have sound teeth or perfect health unless Acid-Decay is stopped at THE DANGER LINE

THERE is a tiny ridge on the surface of your teeth at the gum line. It is where the hard, protective enamel stops and the softer, bony structure of the teeth begins. Near this ridge is The Danger Line.

What happens there

The edges of your gums are rounded. They form a little triangular crevice where they come into contact with the teeth above The Danger Line. Food particles lodge there. They ferment and form acids which eat into the teeth. This is Acid Decay — the beginning of tooth destruction and pyorrhea.

Decay at The Danger Line spreads rapidly. The gums become infected and diseased. Pus pockets or abscesses form around the roots of the teeth, and the poisonous products from these may be absorbed into the system, causing rheumatism, heart-disease and other serious conditions.

Milk of magnesia stops Acid Decay

Dental authorities have searched for many years to find a safe, positive preventive for Acid Decay. Nearly all now agree that milk of magnesia is by far the best product available. Its use neutralizes all mouth acids. In addition, it gets into crevices your tooth-brush does not reach, and into the pockets at The Danger Line, and thus prevents Acid Decay.

A remarkable achievement

A remarkable achievement by the Squibb Laboratories enables you now to get Squibb's Milk of Magnesia in a perfect dental cream.

Squibb's Dental Cream brings you all the advantages of Squibb's Milk of Magnesia—together with the essential cleansing and polishing properties required to keep your teeth bright, clean and attractive. It prevents Acid Decay. It relieves irritation of the gums. It allays sensitiveness of acid-etched teeth. Checks the progress of decay.

Protects teeth for hours after use

By actual test, Squibb's Dental Cream, when used before retiring, keeps the mouth acid-free during the entire night.

From every standpoint, Squibb's Dental Cream is the correct dentifrice to keep your teeth sound and your gums healthy. Begin to use it now for better health. If your druggist does not keep it, mail us the coupon on the left with ten cents for a generous size trial tube. You will be benefited from the first day you use it.

SQUIBB'S DENTAL CREAM

Made with Squibb's Milk of Magnesia

Squibb's Milk of Magnesia

is one of the most popular as well as the blandest of alkalis. It owes its medicinal value chiefly to its property of counteracting acidity. Other products neutralize acids, but most of them are injurious to the tissues of the body.

Squibb's Milk of Magnesia, however, is the one ideal antacid as, being insoluble, it is but weakly active until it comes into contact with an acid. This releases its strength in just sufficient quantity to counteract the acid present.

'Appropriate Measure' Will Be Taken to Protect American Commerce and Nationals, Rebel Leader Is Told.

FORMAL BLOCKADE POSTPONED TO FEB. 1

American Warships Reach Mexico—Admiral Aboard Has Wide Discretionary Powers.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The State Department, in a formal statement, announced today that it had lodged vigorous protests with Adolfo de la Huerta against the placing of mines in the harbors of Frontera, Puerto Mexico, and Vera Cruz, as "an unwarranted threat against the commerce of the world."

In lodging the protest, the statement said, Consul Wood at Vera Cruz informed de la Huerta that if the mining operations were carried out or had "already been partially or wholly carried out," and the mines were not immediately removed, "This government will be constrained to adopt appropriate measures to protect its commerce and its nationals."

State Department Announcement.

Following is the text of the State Department's announcement:

"A decree issued at Vera Cruz on Jan. 12 and signed by Adolfo de la Huerta announced that a blockade of the port of Tampico would be established on Jan. 16. The department on Jan. 16 instructed the American Consul at Vera Cruz to protest vigorously against this interference with commerce and to express this Government's expectation that immediate steps would be taken by those responsible for the proposed blockade to remove this threat.

"Subsequently, on learning that the order for the attempted blockade had not been withdrawn, this Government ordered the United States cruiser Richmond to proceed to Tampico to protect adequately the peaceful and legitimate United States commerce going in and out of that port, from interference under any assertions of blockade.

"The American Consul at Vera Cruz reported to the department on Jan. 19 that following the presentation of this Government's protest, the proposed blockade was postponed until the end of this month.

"On Jan. 17, the American Consul at Vera Cruz informed the department that he had been notified by Mr. de la Huerta that the ports of Frontera, Puerto Mexico and Vera Cruz were to be mined. The Consul immediately was instructed to say to Mr. de la Huerta that this Government, not only on its own behalf but on behalf of humanity, most vigorously protests against this proposed measure as being an unwarranted threat against the commerce of the world and as involving grave danger to the lives of peaceful citizens of all nationalities.

"He was also told to inform Mr. de la Huerta that if the proposed measure is carried out or, in the event that it has already been partially or wholly carried out, if the mines and other obstructions to navigation are not immediately removed from the ports referred to, this Government will be constrained to adopt appropriate measures to protect its commerce and its nationals from the grave and imminent danger involved."
